Strongest Necromancer Of Heaven's Gate
Chapter 569.2: I Am Here [Part 2]

When the Crimson Berserker Mantis kicked up a dust cloud that blocked everyone's sight, Asmodeus realized that it was about to target his Master.

He immediately ordered his fastest comrades to rescue their Lord, but the World Boss was too quick for them.

At that time, Asmodeus thought it was all over.

As one of Lux's Named Creatures, he knew that if Lux died, he would cease to exist. He wasn't afraid of death, but he was saddened because it meant that his adventures with his new Master would come to an end.

It was at that moment when he heard a shrill cry coming from the location of his Master. A few seconds later, the body of the Crimson Berserker Mantis broke through the dust cloud and crashed on the ground hundreds of meters away from him and the residents of Abingdon Town.

For a brief moment, everyone on the battle eld stopped whatever they were doing and disbelievingly looked at the Giant Crimson Mantis, whose pained shrieks reverberated in the surroundings.

Suddenly, all of them heard a deep, and con dent voice, coming from the dust cloud that was slowly dispersing.

"Everyone, it is ne now."

A two-meter tall creature, which looked almost exactly like Spidermn's nemesis, Venm, appeared in front of everyone the moment the dust cloud faded away. Its entire body was as black as the night, and its appearance was enough to give people nightmares.

It had a permanent devilish grin plastered on its face, and its golden eyes, which were similar to Lux's Undead Creatures, burned brightly as it gazed at the residents of Abingdon Town, ignoring the writhing World Boss in the distance.

Another unique feature of this creature was the two Antennae protruding from the top of its head, forming a V.

Its buffed-up body looked similar to a pro wrestler. Also, instead of having two arms, it had four, making it look incredibly strong and menacing.

(E/N: Mach*mp for you P*kemon fans)

Slowly, but surely, the demi-creature raised one of its hands towards the people of Abingdon Town and gave them a thumbs up.

Its mere presence exuded con dence that made everyone feel as if they no longer had anything to fear.

Why?

Because HE was here.

"... ALL-MITE," Asmodeus muttered as he stared at his new comrade whom his Master had poured his entirety into creating.

Using all of his Mana, and all the dead creatures on the battle eld, including the dead Deimos-Ranked Adamantium Ants, Lux took a gamble in order to turn the tide of battle in their favor.

Fortunately, his gamble paid off, giving birth to a Hero, whose name would resound far and wide in the worlds of Solais and Elysium in the not-so-distant future.

Yes.

His name was ALL-MITE!

The Strongest Member of Lux's Necromancer Covenant, stood tall and proud, rekindling the hope that had almost disappeared due to despair.

Suddenly, a powerful shockwave erupted from the location of the Crimson Berserker Mantis. Its Crimson body became a shade redder, making it look more intimidating.

Although it was always in a Berserked State, it still had the power to activate its Berserk Ability, increasing its strength exponentially. However, the Giant Mantis rarely used this ability because it would lose all sense and reason and attack friend and foe alike.

But, it no longer cared about anything else aside from killing everyone in sight.

"I'll handle him," ALL-MITE said as he started to walk towards the Crimson Berserker Mantis whose blood-shot eyes locked on his body. "You guys, handle the rest."

The newest member of Lux's Necromancer Covenant clenched its clawed sts, setting them ablaze with ames that were strong enough to melt steel and concrete.

ALL-MITE walked fearlessly toward his opponent with the intention of ghting with everything he had.

This was the rst battle that he would ght since he was reborn, and he wanted to know just how powerful he had become.

Right now, his strength was that of a D-Ranker, while his opponent's strength was a World Boss at the peak of the Deimos Rank.

Simply put, the Crimson Berserker Mantis was still stronger than ALL-MITE, but it didn't matter.

ALL-MITE still had several Trump Cards he could use, enough to allow him to ght the World Boss in front of him and give it a devastating blow.

For nearly half a minute, the Crimson Berserker Mantis and ALL-MITE stared at each other un inchingly.

While this was happening, everyone was watching with bated breath because they knew that the outcome of this battle would decide their fate.

Then, as if they had made an unwritten agreement with each other, both ghters took a step forward and disappeared from where they stood.

Powerful shockwaves erupted in the surroundings as the two collided at speeds that could barely be seen by the naked eye.

Powerful gusts of winds were formed with each clash, almost blowing away the Humans who had now grouped together.

Asmodeus and his clones constructed a Skeleton Dome, which they had used earlier to protect the residents from the winds that threatened to give them serious injuries.

When the residents were safely protected by the Skeleton Dome, Lux's Named Creatures watched the battle with critical gazes.

They knew that they couldn't help ALL-MITE because if they did, they would only get in his way. Although it was frustrating, they understood that the best thing they could do was simply watch from the side and wait for the outcome of the battle.
