Chapter 671 I just can't see her getting hurt

"He took people to clear mines on the mountain. The strange thing is that there are none. Only some useless bombs are dug up."

Lyra finally let out a breath of relief, "It seems that they are just trying to scare us. When I heard it, I really thought he was really going to die with us..."

As she said that, her eyes were red, and she still had lingering fears when she recalled just now.

Malcolm felt the same way as her. Knowing that she was worried about him and his subordinates, he patted her back gently and comforted her, "It's okay. I know the strength of the soldiers of NIB. I know best. This can't stop them."

With the sound of footsteps, they all looked up and it was Levi, "Mr. Malcolm, all the vehicles for the return journey have been arranged. When will we leave?"

Lyra was anxious to return after being out for so many days, and leaving Spencer to suffer in the hospital. Even if Anthony watched and took good care of him day and night, she couldn't be completely relieved if she didn't see the baby herself.

She was staying in the basement of Lennie's villa, and relying on Spencer, Molly and Malcolm to get through the tough time.

Now that when she thought about it, the two babies probably missed her very much.

Malcolm glanced at her face and immediately understood how she missed the two babies, so he immediately ordered, "Count the number of people. We will go back immediately."

After that, Malcolm left this deserted house with his wife in his arms.

Four identical cars in the front and rear were speeding on the mountain road in an orderly manner. And they were monitoring the environment at any time.

The return journey from the suburban forest to the urban area was not close and bumpy.

Lyra looked at the unchanging mountain scenery outside the window. The drowsiness struck her, and she couldn't help yawning.

Malcolm looked at her always bright side face, which was now covered with a thick layer of tiredness. He couldn't help but feel distressed, so he took her shoulders into his arms, patted and coaxed, "Rest for a while."

Lyra lowered her eyes which were half-closed. She gently nuzzled into his arms a few times. Her waist was held by him, and she instantly felt relieved, "Well, you can rest too."

As soon as she finished speaking, she fell asleep, which showed that she was really tired.

"No, this person is very cunning. I designed to lead him out. I didn't expect that this was just his fake identity. He arranged a fake to see me. In the end, all the people who died were substitutes."

For a moment, the two men were silent.

Except for the sound of the humidifier in the room, and the occasional whimper from Spencer, it was exceptionally quiet.

"It turns out that you secretly issued a search warrant to catch him."

Anthony can only imagine how nervous the tit-for-tat situation was.

Malcolm snorted. His eyes looked fierce, and the powerful aura exuded from his body made people shudder.

"Although he hasn't been caught, I already have a general impression of his appearance. Once the arrest warrant is issued, his actions will be restricted and he will be caught sooner or later."

Anthony nodded.

As soon as he looked up, he caught sight of the red blood in Malcolm's eyes, thinking that he had not slept well for this matter recently.

Raising his eyebrows, he said a word of concern, which was very rare, "Go and rest. Spencer has me here."

Malcolm's thin lips curled evilly. He tutted, got up and left without saying anything.

In the drab and minimalist lounge of the hospital.

A slender figure was sitting on the bed with her back to the door. Her beautiful back was smooth and attractive, and her skin was flawless.

The faint light dimmed her enchanting and beautiful figure.

Malcolm opened the door softly and saw this scene.

His throat was dry. He swallowed hard and walked over lightly.

Until he walked in that Malcolm saw the reddish scars on her back. And he was stunned.

At that time, Levi only said that she had taken the initiative to be tied in the basement, so as not to be discovered by the enemy, and did not say too many details.

Looking at it now, he felt even more distressed.

The night was getting darker, and the atmosphere on the terrace was dull.

Seeing Lyra frowning and thinking hard, Malcolm gently held her shoulders into his arms and comforted,

"Okay, what you say makes sense. Look at you. Recently, because of this matter, you suffered a lot in the den. You lose a lot of weight. Now that the matter is clear, the rest will be left to me and the bureau. Don't get tired anymore, okay?"

Lyra didn't know how to comfort him, so she could only hug him tightly, stroking lightly his neck with her soft cheeks.

After a few seconds...

Malcolm said nothing and held the back of her head with one of his big hands.

He bowed his head and captured those fragrant red lips fiercely.

Slowly, his hand gradually slipped into the thin blanket.

Lyra murmured softly, and her body was shaking uncontrollably.

Malcolm carried her up, and the thin soft blanket was abandoned on the floor, leaving behind a layer of moonlight.

It was a wonderful night.

The next day, the sun was shining.

Malcolm got up early in the morning to go to the bureau after last night's sex.

In the office.

The air conditioner was blowing cold air slowly to maintain a constant temperature.

On the desk, documents were neatly stacked. Malcolm held a tablet in his hand, and occasionally typed, giving orders in different languages.

"So, since all the justice can't solve the problem, let's make it illegal."

"Through Lennie's hands, it is very easy to do things. Without the constraints of rules and regulations, we can focus on the overall situation. Moreover, Lennie himself has a child. He was deeply persecuted by the formula case this time so he will pay more attention."

Malcolm's black eyes looked deep, and in his words, he had already laid out all the plans in the future, and analyzed them thoroughly.

Brad, who had just come in, could finally interject when he heard this. He looked surprised, "BOSS, do I hear it wrong? You actually want to set up a business cooperation with Lennie?"

If necessary, such a combination can indeed achieve greater results.

But White Corp's baby formula industry was huge, and if it was all given to Lennie, was it too obvious to do so?

If someone found out their vulnerabilities, then made a fuss...

Malcolm said succinctly, "Don't worry."

He walked to the desk and sat down by it, gesturing to Ted, "That bodyguard who goes by the pseudonym Jude, how's the chase going?"

Ted shook his head, looking disappointed.

Although he didn't say anything, his expression was already obvious.

Only this time, he held two teams of soldiers in his hand, but was exhausted by the opponent's tricks.

"Jude has several loyal old bodyguards. I found their traces in the neighbor city last night. But they made tricks and escaped by fluke. This morning, someone saw him in another city..."

Malcolm tapped his fingers lightly on the smooth desk. His thin lips parted lightly, and his voice was low,

"Jude is just a pseudonym. I suspect that this man's real name is Frank. He has experience in the army and has strong anti-reconnaissance ability. It's really time-consuming and laborious to arrest him."

But after all, the case of poisoned baby formula had already made progress.

"The order for arrest has been issued. It may be able to help you in your arrest mission."

In those years, few people in the military region who could compete with Malcolm. Frank was extremely talented. How could ordinary police officers be his opponents...?

Chapter 675 A quiet birthday banquet

Little surprise?

Lyra felt it sweet. She didn't expect him to be so diligent to take advantage of the gap between her packing in the hospital and to arrange everything. And he even prepared a gift?

Anthony came along with them and was directing the elite medical staff arranged by the hospital president to enter Lyre Spiti in an orderly manner.

He had just reached Lyre Spiti's door when he heard what Sophia had just said.

Malcolm had a homecoming gift for Lyra ...

After being together for so long, he still remembered to surprise his wife to improve their relationship. As a husband, he really did everything and was thoughtful about everything.

Anthony's heart tensed, and he couldn't help thinking if he was the one who married Lyra, could he be so meticulous?

He saw Lyra's smiling face, as if he had never... made her smile so happily.

Feeling jealous, Anthony felt relieved again, "Rara, the medical staff have already arrived, so I'll go back first."

Lyra turned around, "It's already night. Why don't you stay for a meal?"

"No, I'll go back to Callahan Residence to have dinner. It's the same."

Lyra hugged Spencer, but looked at Molly who was in Sophia's arms, "You haven't seen Momo for many days, right? Momo misses you. Are you sure you don't want to stay with her?"

Anthony hesitated a little, turned his eyes, and looked at Molly who was in Sophia's arms.

Molly smiled especially happily, and resembled Lyra very much when she was a child.

Molly stretched out her small arms, as if she wanted to hug Anthony.

Anthony's azure blue eyes met her dark eyes.

His whole heart seemed to be captured by the little baby in an instant.

Molly babbled, and her little eyebrows furrowed slightly, as if she didn't get a response from Anthony and felt a little aggrieved.

The smile faded. Jimmy looked at Spencer, who was too weak to open his eyes in Malcolm's arms, and said solemnly, "The test is my professionalism for many years. Even if I close my eyes or do it in my sleep, I promise that there will be no errors!"

"Please, Malcolm and Lyra , trust me, I will never take the lives of two babies to anything sloppy."

After having known each other for many years, Malcolm naturally believed him, and the blood virus test could only be handed over to him, which was the most reassuring.

Both babies were sent to the laboratory, and Jimmy worked up his spirits and focused on the test.

Being afraid that Lyra would shed tears when she saw the babies were drawn blood, Malcolm didn't let her follow him into the laboratory, but accompanied her to sit outside waiting for the test results.

The couple sat side by side. Feeling Lyra was tense, Malcolm wrapped her arms around her shoulders to keep her from thinking about the babies.

"This will all pass."

Lyra leaned against his arms, having mixed feelings.

After half an hour, the light in the laboratory went out, and Jimmy should have gained the results.

Lyra broke free from Malcolm's embrace, got up first, and walked to the door of the laboratory.

The sound of the door lock turning came from inside, and Jimmy, who was holding the results, looked grim and pushed up the black-rimmed glasses on his face, and was about to come out.

Lyra: "How is it?"

With solemn expression , he glanced at Lyra, then looked at Malcolm who was behind Lyra.

"There is a... good news, and a bad news."

A bad news...

Lyra clenched her palms, "Malcolm and I have already expected the worst. You just say it."

Jimmy sighed and handed Lyra the two test result sheets in his hand.

Malcolm hugged Molly. His footsteps stopped. A pair of dark and deep eyes stared at Anthony who was in front of him. He was looking at him up and down, but did not speak.

Anthony took two steps forward and looked down to cover the guilt in his eyes.

"Today is the first birthday of the two babies. Although I know that you and Lyra are not planning to make a birthday party, I bought cakes and gifts to celebrate for them."

"I didn't know until I went to Lyre Spiti that you brought Spencer and Momo to the lab for blood tests..."

He paused for a moment and didn't dare to look at Molly who was in Malcolm's arms. Then he swallowed hard and mustered up the courage to ask, "Have you got the test result? How are Spencer and Momo ... ?"

Malcolm told him the truth in a calm tone, "Momo is fine, but Spencer does have virus residues in his body, which is why he was born weaker than Momo."

"Jimmy said Spencer is too young and in poor health to withstand the force of the antidote. And he could not use inhibitors to relieve the pain during the onset. He could only be treated conservatively, such as infusion, and taking medicine."

The calmer Malcolm was when he said so, the heavier Anthony felt his heart was.

Anthony's clenched fists trembled. His eyes were red, and he suppressed the surging guilt in his heart.

He opened his mouth, trying to explain and to justify his original behavior. He shouldn't implicate innocent babies because of the grudges between adults.

But all the excuses he had seemed extremely lame. In the end, he lowered his head in frustration and said in a low tone, "I'm sorry."

Apart from the three words, he didn't seem to be able to make up for anything...

Malcolm wasn't a hypocrite and just let him stand in the rain, "You really should apologize, not to me, but to Spencer. And you should even make up for your mistakes for him."

Anthony nodded, "Yes, hurting Spencer is the biggest regret in my life. I will definitely try my best to make up for the two babies."

Malcolm didn't say anything later. Although his black eyes looked deep, he was no resentful.

The brothers of the Lloyd family were all there, and it was as lively as a small party.

Everyone took turns to hug Molly and couldn't put her down.

Molly was not frightened by their behaviors at all. She laughed happily and seemed to be cheerful and hospitable.

Rudolph sat in the wheelchair, watching from a distance and seeing the sadness on the faces of Lyra and Malcolm.

Charles pushed his wheelchair slowly forward, and Rudolph whispered, "Malcolm, why is there only Momo? Where is Spencer?"

Lyra froze.

About Malcolm's S404 biochemical virus, because they were afraid Rudolph would be worried, the Whites kept the secret from him.

Rudolph didn't know that Malcolm had just returned from Frayton and was vomiting blood every day because of the virus.

Chad was the one who knew the inside story the most, and stopped laughing. His expression turned grim and he glanced at Malcolm's expression.

The Lloyd family knew about the virus but they didn't know that the virus factor might be passed on to the baby. After hearing the question from Rudolph, they looked at Lyra and Malcolm.

Malcolm's face looked calm, "The weather changes recently. Spencer catches a cold and is in the hospital for an infusion, so he didn't come back home."

Rudolph became very worried, "Today is also Spencer's first birthday. You let him receive the treatment alone in the hospital? Which hospital? I will send people to bring Spencer back immediately. We have elite medical staff in Lyre Spiti. Spencer has a cold. You can let him stay at home for the treatment, so why go to the hospital?"

In response to his question, Lyra lowered her eyes and pursed her red lips stiffly. Her expression was a little unnatural.

Malcolm was much calmer than her, and said concisely, "Anthony is in the hospital. He is the godfather of the babies and will take care of Spencer."

Lyra nodded in agreement, "Originally, Malcolm and I also wanted to stay in the hospital, but Momo was hungry, so we had to bring Momo back first."

In their explanations, they avoided the important fact and deliberately ignored Rudolph's question about why Spencer was in the hospital.

But since Malcolm had said it was a cold, and it had been arranged properly, it was natural for others not to say anything.

However, Rudolph's attention was on Malcolm's attitude just now.

Rudolph's eyes were red, and the hand on his shoulder was trembling. His tone was low, "It's me who is wrong. Between my sons and grandsons, I chose to make you make some sacrifices. It's me who is sorry for you. Can you stop hating me..."

Malcolm's eyes were red too, and he did not speak.

For so many years, Rudolph had been his most beloved and respected elder.

He didn't hate him at all.

Even if his grandfather asked him to resign immediately and recommended Travis to be the director of the bureau, he would not hate him.

A month later.

Spencer was still undergoing conservative treatment in the laboratory and was bedridden day by day because he was too weak.

And Molly can walk and run, and even call daddy, mummy, godfather...

Anthony came to Lyre Spiti early in the morning and picked her up to play at the aquarium.

When they came to the aquarium, Anthony hugged her all the way and led her to the Dolphin Aquarium.

A small dolphin was having fun in the water.

Molly liked it and was giggling. And her eyes were glued to the dolphin.

Anthony gestured to a staff, and the staff immediately gestured towards the dolphin.

Mavis stared at the back of him who was holding the kid, and her eyes were dim and slightly lost.

Anthony went to see the director of the aquarium in person, "Promote Mavis, the keeper of the dolphinarium, to be an administrator. And give her a year's bonus. She will be paid together with this month's salary."

The director was stunned, "Yes, it is her honor that you come in person."

Anthony said nothing and left the aquarium with Molly in his arms.

Molly hadn't seen her brother in days, and Anthony drove to the lab.

Lyra and Malcolm were both there, accompanying Spencer on the infusion.

Anthony took out a tablet, opened the video interface, and handed it to Lyra, "This is the video I took next to Momo when she was playing with the little dolphin. Although Spencer can't go there, he should be happy to see his aquarium."

Lyra took it, clicked the play button, and shoved the tablet into Spencer's hands.

"Spencer, this is sister Momo's little dolphin. Do you like it? When you get better, can I take you to see the little dolphin too?"

Spencer didn't speak much, and his learning ability seemed to be not greater than his sister's. But when he watched his sister play with the little dolphin in the video, his little hands scratched at the screen, and seemed to yearn to touch the dolphin as well.

The happy smile of his sister infected him, and a smile appeared on his weak little face.

Lyra's eyes were red, and she felt even more sorry for Spencer.

Malcolm guessed that she was blaming herself again, put his arms around her shoulders, and patted her gently to reassure her, "Our Spencer is just over a year old, and he owns the largest aquarium in the entire country. He is also a very happy baby."

Lyra nodded, leaning against his shoulder and feeling his tenderness.
