

The Heir's Revenge

Chapter 5

The CEO of Argonius Company

Dennis walked into a room that had been set up for him. The man appeared surprised. The room was even larger than his previous residence. What's more, not only does Dennis own the room, but also the entire contents of the house and all of his grandmother's assets. Dennis felt as if everything was a dream, and if it was, he didn't want to wake up again.

"Sir... Does you require anything?" Dennis was asked by a waiter

"Hmmm, everything is here, I'm not sure what else to ask for," Dennis muttered.

Lewis arrived not long after with a large box.

"Oh, Dad! I mean, Lewis!" Dennis went up to the person who had raised him. "I am grateful to you because you have always taken good care of me, even treating me like your own child. You're also the one who brought me here to my grandma. I will never be able to repay all of your kindness," Dennis admitted.

Lewis grinned. "Thank you, sir. I also consider myself extremely fortunate to have been entrusted with the responsibility of raising the family's sole heir."

"Oh, Lewis, do you still want to look after me after this? I mean, there will undoubtedly be many aspects of my current life that I do not understand, and I will also need to learn a lot about how to act as the sole heir in this family as well as lead the company later on. Will you help me?"

"I am at your disposal, sir," Lewis stated.

Dennis appeared to be happy. "Oh, I almost forgot, where is Adelia?"

"Adelia has been taken to her own room as well. There would also be many servants to serve her. Your daughter will be the true princess of this household. "

"I'm delighted to hear that. Nothing makes me happier than Adelia's happiness."

"You no longer need to be concerned about Adelia, Sir. Many people will take care of Adelia and look after her well. "

Dennis appeared to nod. "Oh, Lewis, what is this box?" Dennis' attention was drawn to the box Lewis was carrying.

Lewis ripped open the box right away. "This is your personal requirement. There are cell phones, laptops, car keys, and wallets containing ATM cards containing money."

Dennis' eyes widen once more. "Is this all for me?"

"You're right, sir."

"Wow, I never thought I'd have all of this. And these are phones and laptops that are so expensive that I've never dared to imagine it. "

"You can now get what you want. Soon, the waiter will return to stock your closet with nice clothes. An heir to the throne should not be seen in low-cost clothing."

"Haha, you could," Dennis joked.

"If you need anything, press the red button near the phone, say what you want, and a maid will come to serve all your needs. You can also call me directly at any time if you need me," Lewis said.

"All right, I got it." Dennis appeared to nod.

"Do you have any questions, sir?"

"I believe that's all for now."

"Then get some rest, sir." Lewis left Dennis' room with a respectful bow.

Dennis sat down on the king-sized bed. He felt at ease sleeping on the soft mattress, and the room smelled wonderful. Dennis needed to sleep but couldn't close his eyes. Then, Dennis went to the restroom. He noticed how large the bathroom was and how the toiletries were already there for him to use. Dennis soaked his body in the bathtub after removing his clothes. For the first time, he experienced life in luxury.

Mrs. Berlin appointed Dennis Damara as CEO of Argonius Company the following day.

"From that day forward, my grandson, the company is officially yours. Do the best!" Mrs. Berlin patted Dennis on the shoulder and said, "I believe in you."

"Thank you for your trust and opportunity, Grandma," Dennis said.

Mrs. Berlin grinned. "Finally, after decades of hard work, I can retire." Mrs. Berlin left the company to spend her retirement at home.

Following the coronation, Dennis and Lewis entered the CEO's room. "Oh, this is what being a CEO is like." Dennis sat in a soft, comfortable office chair. "What should I do now, Lewis? To be honest, I'm still confused, and I'm nervous."

"The first thing you should do is research this company. The company's website contains detailed information about the company. You can also see the company's history and performance over the years," Lewis explained.

"Hmm, okay, it might be a little difficult. But don't worry, I'll learn it thoroughly," Dennis said. "Oh yeah, there's a notification on my website, what is it, Lewis?"

Lewis looked at the computer screen as well. "Oh, this is an invitation to dinner with all the leaders of major corporations from across the country and some from abroad."

"Does this invitation apply to me?"

"Certainly, sir. Isn't you the CEO of the Argonius Company now?"

"Haha, yeah, you're right." Dennis had a flash of inspiration. "Will Raymond be there as well?" Dennis inquired.

"I think so, Sir."

"Then put on your best clothes for me tonight, Lewis. I'm going to show that jerk who I really am."

"Very well, sir," Lewis replied. "Do you require a female companion for the event tonight?"

Dennis' brow furrowed. "Do I also have to bring a woman?"

"As always, company leaders will attend the invitation with a partner."

"Really? That means Raymond will be at the party with Jesselyn. That's so interesting!" Dennis appeared to nod.

"How are things going, sir? Is it necessary for me to find a woman to accompany you tonight?" Lewis asked his question again.

"It doesn't appear to be necessary. I'm going by myself, and I'll pick up the woman there. Isn't that more intriguing?" Dennis appeared to be rubbing his hands together. "Ah, I can't wait to get to the party tonight," he grumbled.

Dennis was getting ready to attend a party with company leaders after finishing his work at the office that day. He was dressed up in an expensive suit and shirt, as well as gleaming shoes. Dennis no longer resembles a driver, but rather a well-known CEO. When Dennis entered the party, accompanied by Lewis, all eyes turned to them, including Raymond, who was holding Jesselyn at the time.

“What brought that man here?” Jesselyn was surprised to see her ex-husband.

“At the very least, he becomes a driver or aide for one of the local businessmen,” Raymond replied, wrapping his arms around Jesselyn.