

Chapter 18

The spirit of the woman who we wanted to seek answer regarding the black mist appeared before us, her ethereal look made her supernatural as her shadow shown bright white.

"Welcome," She begun her voice cutting through our ears like an axe cutting through wood, "my name is abia, this is the forest of truth, destiny and of course tragedy, i know you seek my presence, but to prove you are worthy, each of you will be tested just like amelia."

"Once you've all passed, then truly you can find the answers you seek." She said, vanishing to thin air immediately not giving us any room to ask questions.

"Well this is just great, first a big monster attacks us now a spirit appears saying we will be tested, it doesn't even make any sense." Rissa moans out frustrated.

"Atleast we know we are on the right track now." Lukas says with a determined look on his face.

I have a bad feeling things are going to escalate even more now that everyone will be tested to prove our worthy, I couldn't help but think of the implications of one of us failing could course.

"What if one of us fails their test or gets killed in the process" I moan, the feeling of worry laced through my face.

"Then we move on, we must complete what we came here for." Sin's voice of putting an end to any further protests as he begins walking forward we all follow suit in sync.

We walked through the forest, cutting down any leaves or obstacles in our path with our swords.

We walked for more than 10 minutes silently, the feeling of unease and uncertainty evident through our faces as everyone thought about what the abia said, if that's even her real name.

I couldn't help but feel a sense of relief within myself, apparently I have just passed my test, a small smile creeped up my lips as i reminisce on the surreal moment.

I took a glance at rissa, who was behind me, a mix of fear and worry evident on her face as we locked eyes the amount of unspoken tension lingered in air.

Sighing, I ask rissa "what's wrong, you look like your having a panic attack."

With a small smile on her face her said "nothing" insincerity in her words, "common you can tell me" I reply.

I moment of silence lingering, her eyes rolling as she knitted her brows thinking of how to place her words she began.

"I'm sacred and I don't know what to do, what if I'm next" she asks face trembling in fear.

"You can do it" I say honestly, "and beside you have magic am sure you'd be fine." I said calmly.

The tension between the boys still lingered as they remained silent ever since.

My stomach growled, as I grabbed a snack from my bag, a pack of chips which I downed in seconds drinking some water after.

We really didn't know where we were heading, we just followed and trusted the instincts of the lycan kings wolf.

Walking through the bushes we came to a halt as we met with two passage ways, one to our left and the other leading to our right.

"Which root do we take" Lukas asserted to sin.

He rolled open the map to look at it for a few seconds before coming to a conclusion that we should take the left root.

Walking through the ridged path, we stumbled upon some train tracks, "how the fuck are train tracks even here." Henry muttered.

"Probably because it has been abandoned for a century." Adonis scoffed, sarcasm laced through his voice.

I was completely lost in thought thinking of how sin has just completely ignored me through out the whole day; I get the weight of our journey rests on his shoulders but that's not enough reason to completely ignore me.

But I refuse to show any sign of weakness, I've trained myself to expect the worst from people, and this can't and will not break me.

Rissa tangles her fingers with mine knocking me out of my thoughts, her voice calm and suiting my stressed body, "is it about sin?" She says, my eyes widen in surprise,

"How did you know" I asked shocked, "I'm a lycan remember, plus I have magic so I just read your mind" she says turning her face to the side a bit.

"You read my mind?" I whispered annoyed.

"Sorry, I had to." I sigh rolling my eyes, "yes, it's sin" I whispered "how can he completely ignore me the whole day," I moan

"Have you tried talking to him?" She suggests shrugging.

I remain silent for a few seconds before stating, "there's no way I'm talking to him"

"Why not?" Rissa asked

"He started it"

"You're just being dramatic, gees" rissa rolls her eyes putting a momentary grin on my face.

Looking forward to boys had walked far ahead of us, she ran a little to catch up, meeting up with them, we stumbled upon an abandoned train covered in vine.

We took a look inside, vine had decorated the entire train, it looked like it was pushed out of the train tracks as it was out of the tracks and inside the bushes.

Walking further in, Adonis stuttered "the hell" he said in shock

"What is that?" lukas asked, upon stumbling on it his face carried a worried look, we all saw that there where about four skeletons laying on the ground.

Standing and observing, Henry yelled from outside, "guys you might want to see this" a sense of urgency laced through his voice.
