

HER SEVEN LITTLE BODYGUARDS

Chapter 1091

Chapter 1091 Enjoyed Holding Vania

Although Hanson's words were sharp, he was generous in helping Liam with the supplements, giving him more than enough.

Although Henson's words were sharp, he was generous in helping Liam with the supplements, giving him more than enough.

Liam knew very well how precious those thousand-year ginseng was.

Looking into Henson's eyes, he intentionally took on a flirtatious tone. "I know you have me in your heart."

As he spoke, he deliberately sent a chill through Henson, as if they shared some secretive connections.

Henson's body trembled slightly. "Stop it. I don't have any feelings for you."

How could a man change after a car accident? He couldn't stand that gaze.

Turning to Venie, he took her hand. "We've visited him long enough. Let's go back."

"Please stay a little longer." Liam immediately changed his expression from just a moment ago when he had malicious intent.

He hadn't said a word to Venie.

Now when he looked at her, he felt like she was a good child of his family.

"It's important for the patient to rest." Henson had no intention of giving them any chance to interact.

Liam's thoughts were written all over his face. It was easy to see through him.

Venie had to ceter to Henson's thoughts. She peeked out from behind Henson, revealing a smile, and addressed

Liam, "Rest well. We'll come to visit you another day."

Henson's body trembled slightly. "Stop it. I don't have any feelings for you."

How could a man change after a cor occident? He couldn't stand that gaze.

Turning to Vonio, he took her hand. "We've visited him long enough. Let's go back."

"Please stay a little longer." Liam immediately changed his expression from just a moment ago when he had malicious intent.

He hadn't said a word to Vonio.

Now when he looked at her, he felt like she was a good child of his family.

"It's important for the patient to rest." Henson had no intention of giving them any chance to interact.

Liom's thoughts were written all over his face. It was easy to see through him.

Vonio had to cater to Honson's thoughts. She peeked out from behind Honson, revealing a smile, and addressed

Liom, "Rest well. We'll come to visit you another day."

Perhaps it was because Vania had donated blood to him, but she found him less annoying.

Perhaps it was because Vonio had donated blood to him, but she found him less annoying.

Sometimes, a change in one's perception of a person could happen quite suddenly.

Moreover, they had some connections between them.

Once such a hint emerged, it was hard to conceal them.

Liom knew that Vonio had been avoiding him, but after seeing her smile, he suddenly felt that their relationship had taken a step closer.

He felt at ease all of a sudden.

Indulgently, he uttered, "Alright, whatever Vonie says."

Unable to tolerate their interaction, Honson lowered his head slightly and whispered in Vonio's ear, "Do you want me to carry you out?"

She didn't want to leave, so he had to take matters into his own hands.

Vonio knew that he was jealous again, so she tiptoed and lightly planted a kiss on his cheek. "Let's go."

As she spoke, she took the initiative to hold his hand, showing her affection.

This pleasing gesture made Honson very pleased.

However, he pretended to be indifferent on the surface, especially not wanting Vania to detect his satisfaction.

He tilted his head slightly, a touch of stubbornness, but his actions betrayed his true feelings.

He held Vania's hand in return, striding toward the exit, not wanting to stay even a minute longer.

Vania chuckled secretly from the side. Hanson is acting like a child.

As they exited Liam's hospital room, Hanson changed direction and led Vania upstairs.

"Where are we going?" Vania asked in confusion. They were supposed to be heading home.

"I want you to have another checkup. Just to be sure."

Although it was just a blood transfusion, Hanson thought it was better to be cautious.

Without giving Vania a chance to object, he carried her in his arms.

"I'll carry you there in case you escape."

In reality, it wasn't just that. He was increasingly enjoying holding Vania, especially in front of others, which made him even happier.

As exceptional as she was, she belonged to only him.

Upon seeing Hanson and Vania, April couldn't help but exclaim, "Seriously?"

He was well aware that Vania was involved in the blood transfusion.

Her Seven Little Bodyguards - Chapter 1092

Chapter 1092 Vania Is in Good Health

However, her spirit had improved significantly.

However, her spirit had improved significantly.

Moreover, Lily was the miracle-making doctor, so she wouldn't make Venie uncomfortable. There was absolutely no need to carry her everywhere.

April couldn't help but feel contemptuous.

Since the blood transfusion, Venie's legs had been mere decorations.

Regardless of when or where, Henson would pick her up whenever he wanted.

Venie felt helpless. Only Henson was reveling in it.

In contrast to Venie's embarrassment, Henson casually kicked April, who had an expressive look. "Give her a checkup."

Of course, it referred to a full-body examination.

"Henson, have you forgotten? You've arranged a lot of experiments for me, remember?"

Why would Henson need to consult him for such a simple matter?

He dealt with complicated and rare cases that ordinary doctors couldn't handle. He was only interested in illnesses that were beyond the reach of regular doctors.

It was just a routine check that any doctor could easily manage.

"You must be very free to talk so much."

In any case, he didn't want Vonio to move her feet.

Vonio could only nod helplessly. She was feeling fine now, and she could jump around.

There was no need for her to sit in a wheelchair, especially since April's office was connected to the laboratory, where there were all sorts of equipment. It wouldn't take long to walk.

Henson sensed her resistance and coaxed softly, "Be a good girl and listen to me. After the checkup, I'll give you candy."

Both April and Vania fell into a deep silence. They let out a sigh almost simultaneously.

Vania blinked her eyes and looked at Hanson as if asking, Do you think I'm a three-year-old child? It's not like getting an injection and yet, you still want to give candy.

Hanson smiled like a father. "Anything for you."

"Alright." Before Vania could speak, April couldn't stand it any longer and pushed her inside.

Hanson was acting like an overprotective father, and the things he said were annoying.

It was unbearable.

For April, this kind of full-body examination was child's play. He could complete it within minutes.

Holding the examination report, he calmly explained, "Vania is in good health. Just eat more foods that are good for the blood."

Of course, whether she ate or not wouldn't make much difference.

However, seeing Hanson's anxious expression, April added, "Don't worry. Her body is very healthy." He gave Vania a thumbs-up.

"It's all thanks to Lily." Vania felt somewhat proud.

After taking the medicine prescribed by Lily, her weakness completely disappeared.

Her Seven Little Bodyguards - Chapter 1093

Moreover, she had only drank half a cup of medicine this morning. If she had taken the full dose, she might have been able to run a marathon by now.

Little did she know, her children had anticipated this.

The dosage given to her had already been doubled, and drinking half was just right.

When it came to Lily, April couldn't help but feel envious.

He immediately put on his most pleasing expression. "Vania, if you have the chance, could you talk to Lily and ask her to accept me as her apprentice?"

"If Lily accepts you as her apprentice, how would you address me then?" Vania suddenly raised a question.

She smiled at April, who understood the playfulness in her eyes. She was intentionally doing this.

Truly, they weren't of the same family, yet they had shared the same threshold.

Vania was just as naughty as Hanson.

After hesitating for a while, April reluctantly called out, "Mrs... Mrs. Luke..."

He didn't want to admit it at all because Hanson would then become his Grandmaster.

The generation gap was just too big, and he couldn't accept it.

With a triumphant arch of her eyebrow, Vania teased, "I'll talk to Lily about it. Wait for my good news

At least she was delighted with that title.

Just moments ago, April had been thrilled about the idea, but now he was having second thoughts about becoming Lily's apprentice.

However, the words had already been spoken, and he couldn't take them back.

He could only reluctantly agree. "Alright."

It would be best if Lily didn't agree.

Hanson, who was possessive, didn't want to see Vania talking to other men for too long.

He stood in front of April and again lifted Vania into his arms.

Seeing that Hanson seemed slightly annoyed, April quickly bid farewell with respect. "Take care, Vania. I wish you all the best in health."

His voice was loud, his well-wishing carried a strong momentum.

Hanson came to a halt at the door, and without looking back, he uttered, "You can have three days off." Then, he left.

Everything happened so quickly that April hadn't had the time to react.

Did he just say that I can have three days off? Does happiness come so suddenly?

It seemed like he hadn't done anything at all.

No, he spoke—he uttered a word of blessing.

April, belatedly realizing the situation, suddenly couldn't muster his happiness.

He seemed to have been unexpectedly subjected to a display of affection.

D*mn it!

He shouted toward the door. "Hanson, you're heartless!"

Not only did his status diminish, but they also fed him a dose of romanticism—truly lacking in empathy.

Therefore, April decided to seek a sense of existence from Liam.

As soon as he entered, he spotted the thousand-year ginseng placed on the table.

With eyes gleaming, he exclaimed, "Wow, Liam, this thing is great."

The actual item formed the foundation of a renowned physician. He was immediately drawn to that ginseng.

This kind of ginseng, when used as medicine, was undoubtedly a superior product.

It could be saving a life.

He kind of wanted it.

"It was given by Hanson," Liam stated truthfully.

"What?" April exclaimed loudly. "Hanson has such a good thing and didn't give it to me for research. I won't do any experiments for him anymore."

He had carried out so many experiments, yet he hadn't received any rewards. The more he thought about it, the angrier he became.

His current appearance was akin to someone ready to launch a revolt.

However, while he spoke of his discontent, his eyes remained fixed on the thousand-year ginseng on the table.

His gaze then shifted and caught sight of a dark and murky object.

With a great deal of disdain, he inquired, "What's this?"

The scent was overpowering and unpleasant.

April instinctively showed his disgust and even took a few steps back.

Her Seven Little Bodyguards - Chapter 1094

Evidently, he was more intrigued by the ginseng in comparison.

Liam chuckled inwardly, April, you'll regret this.

Unable to resist, he teased, "When I reveal the truth later, don't you regret it."

He was looking forward to April's reaction.

"I definitely won't regret it," April responded, displaying a touch of petulance.

With just a glance, he could tell that these were remnants of traditional medicine.

As a doctor and a top-tier one at that, he possessed this foundational knowledge.

However, he couldn't discern the components within the medicine and he never expected these remnants to be from Hanson.

After all, in his mind, Hanson had already given him a thousand-year ginseng, so he shouldn't be using leftover things.

The more disdainful April's expression became, the more Liam wanted to strike back at him. "Lily gave it to me," Liam disclaimed proudly.

Of course, he didn't mention that they were leftovers to spite April.

"What?" April exclaimed again. He had already been startled too many times today.

Was this an episode of the "Night of Screams" being enacted in real life?

"This... This was given to you by my future master?"

He carefully held the medicine residue in his hands and examined it seriously.

There was no trace of disgust in his eyes anymore.

Even the pungent scent now seemed like the best fragrance in the world to him.

He couldn't help but dab a bit on his hand and tasted it.

The medicine was likely made from the essence of over a hundred different herbs.

Sadly, with his current expertise, he couldn't discern the ingredients.

April was one of the world's top doctors, but in the presence of Lily, he still ended up being ridiculed and humbled.

Regardless of April's present astonishment, Liam seized on the key point and asked, "Future master? Will Hanson agree to this?"

Speaking of which, April became triumphant. "Vania has already agreed. She'll talk to Lily and convince her to accept me as her apprentice

A man in his thirties, bowing to a five-year-old girl as his master, and he didn't find it embarrassing in the slightest.

On the contrary, he was pleased with himself.

"I think Hanson will strongly disagree."

April, who was previously delighted, couldn't smile anymore. "He was tormenting me in my office just now."

He even complained, "I never know Hanson can be so protective. Now that he has a wife, he's even disregarding his friends."

Could he possibly compete with Hanson for Vania?

No matter how great Vania was, he still had his limits.

Liam chuckled and shook his head. It seemed he wasn't the only one being targeted, which balanced things out for him.

"Why are you laughing? What's making you so happy?"

At this moment, Thomas walked in. He had abandoned his wheelchair by now and could slowly walk with crutches. Upon hearing his voice, the two of them maintained their smiles and spoke to him. "We were just talking about Hanson."

Thomas didn't feel out of place either and sat down directly. "Has something interesting happened?"

As soon as he finished speaking, April started scrutinizing him with great confusion.

He looked left and right as if trying to find something different about Thomas.

The surprised gaze made Thomas somewhat baffled.

"What are you looking at?"

Why is he always so mysterious? Being a Miracle Doctor is indeed different.

April rubbed his chin and uttered, "It's strange when you think about it."

"What?" Thomas was completely lost by his unrelated words.

After all, he hadn't heard their conversation just now.

Now, he was seeking an explanation.

April was immersed in his own world, still examining Thomas. He muttered to himself, "Logically, Hanson should have been targeting you."

Her Seven Little Bodyguards - Chapter 1095

April was left speechless as he was truly in a bind.

He and Thomas were onto Liam following that.

They turned to Liam and asked, "What about you?"

Liam was slightly startled as he suddenly became the focus of their attention.

Why me now?

However, his startled expression misled them to think that he was trying to avoid telling the truth.

Thomas was surprised. "Don't tell me you've really fallen for her, dude."

How should he respond?

Should he consider himself a rival or someone who shared the same difficulties?

April was shocked as well. "Please don't make things even more complicated."

Why must it be Vania? Why not anyone else?

Perhaps Vania was simply fantastic.

Liam couldn't help but chuckle at their exaggerated reactions, and he asked, "Do I look like I do?"

"Uh-huh."

Both of them nodded and they did it in a serious manner.

Everything made sense now that they thought about it.

Why was he so concerned about Vania before?

It turned out that he had thoughts on her all along.

Perhaps, he had already set his mind on Vania even before Thomas.

Thomas only sighed. "I see you've been busy keeping your true feelings hidden."

He even treated his rival as an ally, and he revealed many things regarding his feelings to him.

April couldn't help but give him a thumbs up. "Impressive, Mr. Jones. You have my respect."

His courage to fancy Vania was admirable.

Her Seven Little Bodyguards - Chapter 1096

He felt as if he had committed a crime that was bad enough to draw public outrage.

"I'll toss you out of here myself if you can't explain."

Hanson suddenly showed up before he could say anything.

Hanson was going to leave initially, but he recalled that he didn't instruct Liam on how to use the residue of the medication. So, he turned back.

Who could have thought he would hear such a secret when he came back?

None of these three individuals were innocent, just as he had expected.

April touched the back of his neck. No wonder he had a chilly sensation earlier.

It turned out that the "old man" was really there.

Liam, who was lying on the sick bed, felt his blood pressure soaring high and was about to reach his breaking point.

How was he going to explain this situation? It was very likely that an explanation wouldn't suffice now.

"I just see Vanie as family," Liam said, but his words appeared feeble in front of Hanson.

"You mean Vania." Hanson disliked people addressing her as "Vanie."

He hadn't mentioned it to them before because he hadn't anticipated that Liam would make such a simple error. But now, it appeared that men truly couldn't control their emotions in front of exceptional women, especially those who were extremely remarkable such as Vania.

Liam immediately raised his hand in surrender. "Fine, I'll go along with whatever you say," he replied boldly as he knew he was beyond saving at that point.

"Still not admitting it, are you?" Hanson's tone turned cold as if he wanted to throw Liam out of the hospital.

He was the major shareholder of the Hammond International Hospital after all.

That granted him the authority to do practically whatever he wanted.

"I'm being sincere." Then, Liam continued with a vow. "I have no feelings for your wife. I only regard her as a younger family member."

"So, you won't even spare a younger family member from your evil grasp, you beast." Bryan was making things worse with that statement.

He continued before Liam could argue, "And to think that she was your younger family... You've really disappointed me, Uncle Liam."

His high and mighty image was now gone.

He even lost his morals in their eyes.

Poor Liam... Everything morally bad was now pinned on him for some reason.

Chapter 1097 Double Standards

What else could I say? Whatever I said would be futile. No one would believe me.

Just then, April stepped forward and joined them. "What you said must be true if you can't even explain yourself."

Thomas was surprised, and he offered a piece of advice. "Why not just confess?"

Am I having a trial now? What am I supposed to confess to? Liam was genuinely exasperated by their relentless accusations.

"That's enough." He cut them off and said, "I've never had feelings for Vania, not in the past, and certainly won't in the future." Surely, they would understand him after he had said that, right?

The three of them could tell Liam was serious from his tone. They stopped their accusations and said, "We'll see about that."

Were they planning on monitoring me just to make sure that I wouldn't go back on my words?

Hanson also observed Liam closely at that instant. He concluded that only half of what Liam said was true while the other half was not. He stressed to him as he looked him directly in the eyes, "I'll remember what you said today.

Don't give me a reason to be your enemy,"

Hanson warned in a serious manner. He wouldn't hesitate to oppose him if Liam had indeed fallen for Vania.

"Don't worry, we'll never come to such a day. You've all misunderstood me," Liam said.

Little did Hanson know that he would come to regret his words in the near future.

As for Liam, he stared at the men around him and asked in confusion, "Why did you all target me?" It was Thomas who genuinely harbored feelings for Vania. So, Thomas should be the one to have been warned by Hanson, right?

However, the two of them never engaged in direct confrontation. Their previous encounters were only silent standoffs. Most of them ended with Hanson showing off. I hadn't even confessed to her, yet I am already under attack by them. Am I a victim of double standards?

Hanson understood Liam's implication. So, he glanced at Thomas, who was leaning on crutches, and he felt that he posed no threat to him. Then, he shifted his gaze to Liam and said, "My wife hasn't even donated blood to him."

Thomas was left speechless. Did I just get looked down upon? Or did I misread the situation? It seemed like Hanson was really arrogant now.

Why did receiving blood from Vania become a requirement to be his rival? Liam was once again at a loss for words.

Was I being singled out because I had received her blood donation? Can I return the blood if that's the case? Of course not, I wouldn't survive if I do.

Hanson added, "It's a life-saving favor. Don't you dare forget to return it."

Marvelous. Not only did I receive a warning, but I also owed a life-saving debt now.

Bryan felt the atmosphere tense up when he heard about repaying a favor. He intervened, "Have you heard this,

Hanson?"

"Go ahead."

"One shall always remember others' kindness and return the favors."

Bryan didn't want Liam to get too close to Vania. Although Liam was his uncle, he was also a fan of the Hanson and Vania couple. Therefore, he would do anything to prevent something bad from happening to them.

Hanson's tone turned cold as he replied, "I think you meant to say something else."

April stepped up and added at that instant, "Did you mean if one couldn't repay a favor, one should repay it with oneself?"

Liam's heart sank like a rock as soon as he heard that. The trio are truly the best of friends, and they are determined to push me even deeper into the abyss.

"Repaying with oneself? My wife's sense is better than that." Hanson made fun of Liam mercilessly. He truly believed that his wife wouldn't like him even the slightest.

Her Seven Little Bodyguards - Chapter 1098

Chapter 1098 I'll Be Right Here

Hanson, who had never bothered how he looked, was content with his handsomeness at that instant.

Vania had once said that he was the most handsome in her eyes. No one else could make such a strong impression on her.

"Let's keep it civil, shall we?" Liam couldn't help but ask.

"Just tell me how you want me to repay the favor when the time comes, and I will do just that."

He even forfeited the chance to choose on his own.

"Not now." Hanson didn't want Liam to return the favor just yet. He would be giving him a chance to present himself in front of his wife if he did so.

Then, he took a quick glance at his watch. He was worried that Vania might become impatient as she was waiting outside.

He warned as he swept his gaze across those who were present. "Keep yourselves in check. You better not let me know if you misbehaved."

His warning was no doubt directed at Thomas and Liam.

Meanwhile, April instinctively took a step back. Suddenly, he had an urge to find himself a girlfriend just to avoid suspicion.

He resolved to spend his three-day vacation to look for one.

Insecurity and fear overwhelmed him at that instant.

Vania comforted him by saying, "You don't have to worry. Don't you remember? You still hold seven aces up your sleeve

She was talking about their child. That was his trump card.

Hanson, who was still restless a moment ago, eventually calmed down.

He wondered what was causing his worries. Not only did Vania love him, but they were also parents now. It didn't make sense for him to feel worry and fear.

It turned out he was afraid of loss.

His love for Vania was so profound that he wished to prevent anyone else from even casting an admiring glance at her. He felt as if his cherished treasure would be tarnished if that happened.

Vania stepped forward once more and kissed Hanson after that. "I'll be right here this time."

It was always Hanson who would do the reassuring when she was upset before this.

She promised that she would stand by his side now that he was feeling uneasy so that she could bring him comfort and happiness.

It didn't matter how long a couple had been together. Moments of insecurity could still arise. Therefore, mutual understanding was critical to a long and successful relationship.

Besides, they hadn't been a couple for very long. It was only a matter of months.

However, the time they had spent together had already brought them tremendous joy.

Her Seven Little Bodyguards - Chapter 1099

Chapter 1099 An Old Acquaintance

Hanson had taken his place in the passenger seat with Vania on his lap at that point. "Today you'll drive and take me somewhere to relax."

He appeared content as he eagerly anticipated Vania's company and wondered what they would do today.

Suddenly, he fancied the idea of a trip unplanned beforehand with Vania. Just the two of them would be enough.

Coincidentally, Vania had a destination in mind. She snapped her fingers and said, "Just follow my lead."

"Alright. I'll follow you all the way, darling."

Then, Vania sat in the driver's seat, ignited the engine, and drove off. They were setting off toward Shabury.

Shabury was renowned for its snowy landscapes as it was almost always winters accompanied by frequent snowfalls. Such a unique climate made the entire city covered in snow, much like the setting from a fairy tale.

Hence, amusement parks with snow-related activities dotted the area extensively.

The Snow Mountain Ski Resort was the one that stood out among all of them.

The site featured intricate trails and challenging slopes, making it a favorite among skiing enthusiasts from various regions.

And that was exactly where the couple was headed today.

They reached the designated parking area after slightly more than two hours, but they encountered someone as soon as they got out of the car.

Hanson was acquainted with whom they met—Bennett Lambert, the son of Shabury's real estate tycoon.

Although Bennett held considerable influence in Shabury, he was inferior when compared to Hanson.

"Alright. I'll follow you all the way, darling."

His influence reigned supreme in Shebury for a very long time and he became bold because of that.

He decided to ruin Henson since he couldn't gain his affection.

Bennett advanced toward Vonio and Henson with the beautiful Coco beside him.

Coco was a renowned cabaret showgirl in Shebury and had long been kept by Bennett's side.

One could guess that the man was pansexual.

His influence in Shabury was not to be underestimated, and ambitions coursed through his veins.

He suddenly had the urge to take on Hanson's position and play with his woman when he saw them.

"Who do you think you are?" Hanson asked without turning his head, and he continued, "Think twice about what you're going to say next."

Hanson was displeased. He didn't want to hear anything provocative from Bennett.

In fact, he wouldn't mind taking over Jones Enterprise if that would shut Bennett up.

Bennett sensed the threat and stopped immediately.

However, he gazed at the two of them even more sinisterly.

They were in Shabury, not Hammond.

Did Hanson think Luke Corporation's dominion extended everywhere? Bennett wanted to give them a taste of his power while they were in Shabury.

He couldn't stomach even a hint of disrespect as he was accustomed to overbearing authority.

Not even Hanson could disrespect him on his turf.

Bennett would employ every means to neutralize them whenever people who disrespected him emerged.

Chapter 1100 Snow Mountain Ski Resort

She was also shamelessly brazen.

After meeting Hanson, she felt compelled to flaunt her charm.

She didn't believe Hanson was as apathetic to women as the public claimed.

If she could get his approval, she'd be able to easily enter Hammond and the entertainment industry.

"Why? You think he's attractive?" Coco was deep in thought when Bennett's menacing voice startled her and sent shivers up her spine.

In response, Coco immediately smiled and said, "I was thinking about how to help you get back at them, Mr. Lambert."

She had a talent for picking up on people's facial expressions and words, in addition to being a charming speaker.

"Well, what do you have in mind?" Bennett undoubtedly didn't take what she said seriously.

He didn't care about this woman, but he was very possessive. He could not tolerate any disloyalty on her part.

Coco smiled sweetly and added, "The highest peak of Snow Mountain Ski Resort is currently undergoing upgrades and renovations. Many adventure seekers bravely enter despite the warning signs. But once they go in, they never leave—"

Before she could finish, Bennett burst into laughter.

"It seems like keeping you by my side is worthwhile after all," he said as he lifted her chin and squinted.

He suddenly thought of a way to deal with Hanson.

She was also shamelessly brazen.

After meeting Henson, she felt compelled to flaunt her charm.

She didn't believe Henson was as apathetic to women as the public claimed.

If she could get his approval, she'd be able to easily enter Hammond and the entertainment industry.

"Why? You think he's attractive?" Coco was deep in thought when Bennett's menacing voice startled her and sent shivers up her spine.

In response, Coco immediately smiled and said, "I was thinking about how to help you get back at them, Mr. Lambert

She had a talent for picking up on people's facial expressions and words, in addition to being a charming speaker.

"Well, what do you have in mind?" Bennett undoubtedly didn't take what she said seriously.

He didn't care about this woman, but he was very possessive. He could not tolerate any disloyalty on her part.

Coco smiled sweetly and added, "The highest peak of Snow Mountain Ski Resort is currently undergoing upgrades and renovations. Many adventure seekers bravely enter despite the warning signs. But once they go in, they never leave—"

Before she could finish, Bennett burst into laughter.

He suddenly thought of a way to deal with Henson.

She was also shamelessly frozen.

After meeting Henson, she felt compelled to flout her charm.

Just then, Henson crouched down in front of Vonio and appeared to know what he was doing.

Although his face was concealed, one could still feel his extraordinarily gentle gaze.

Given that they came from Hammond, they both wore relatively little clothing, which caused Vonio's small feet to freeze.

So, Henson warmed her feet by rubbing them in his hands, but even such a simple gesture made his heart race.

Why is it that his wife's feet were as soft as cotton?

...

"Can you help me put this on, darling?" Vania struggled for a considerable amount of time without putting on the skiing gear, as if she had no idea how to ski.

"Sure, come here." This was the sort of thing Hanson liked to do.

Bennett, who had caught up with them, heard their conversation and sneered.

Why are they at Snow Mountain Ski Resort when they didn't even know how to put the equipment on? They really think highly of themselves.

Snow Mountain Ski Resort was the most challenging ski area in Shabury.

It was thought to be among the best, even in Hillsworth.

And since they had the nerve to come, he didn't mind making sure they wouldn't return.

Together, they set out for the peak.
