Chapter 116

Katie

I bared my teeth in a growl, warning them to back off.

The wolf leading the pack charged forward. He was brown and huge, but still smaller than the other two.

Lily barked out a warning, but it didn't faze him. He sprinted straight for me without hesitation.

I braced myself for an attack that never came. Instead, he stopped short, pawing at the same patch of ground Lily had been obsessed with moments before.

The two bigger wolves—a gray one and a pure black one—snarled and slowly padded toward me.

Would they stop, too? Or would they attack?

Lily was just as confused as I was. She was flaring her nostrils, taking in all their individual scents and trying to sniff out any threats. But their earthy, smoky smells were too intoxicating to read.

“Mmmm,” Lily purred.

“Don’t get distracted,” I warned, crouching low and keeping my sharp canines exposed.

But I was having trouble taking my own advice. I wanted to walk up to each one of them and rub against their bodies to spread my own wolf’s scent all over them....

The two bigger wolves bared their teeth, too, their eyes darting around the lake shore manically.

rmy

What the hell was wrong with me? These wolves looked like they were poised to kill, and here I was fantasizing about rubbing all up on them.

“Get ready,” I instructed Lily. “They’re going to attack!

fur

But then the brown wolf spun around to face the two larger wolves, blocking me with his huge, furry body.

Was he protecting me?

Tension hung thickly in the air.

I braced myself for an attack, but suddenly, the brown wolf shifted

And there was Mason. Standing in front of me, fully naked.

It dawned on me then that I'd never seen him in wolf form before.

No wonder I was so drawn to him.

His chest was broad and strong, his muscles rippling in the golden afternoon sun, his c ock standing at attention

I thought of how it felt when he'd thrust himself inside me, the pleasure like none I'd ever felt before....

I shook it off. There were still two other wolves here.

If this was Mason, then that must mean...

The other two huge wolves shifted then, revealing a very naked Xander and Zane.

It seemed wrong to look at them, especially with Mason standing right there in front of me, but I couldn't help it.

They also had huge, muscular arms and torsos. I suddenly wished I was human again so I could reach out and trace all the deep grooves in their bodies.

My eyes drifted down between their legs next.

Gods, they were huge everywhere,

“I want them,” Lily growled needily.

“You’re horny and confused,” I scolded her.

But if she was, then so was I.

I was thrilled that they were in human form and I was still a wolf. Or else they’d all smell how turned on was, and I didn’t think Mason would take that too well.

“Let me go to them,” Lily said, pawing the ground restlessly.

“Chill the fuck out,” I warned her. “This is SO not the time.”

Why was she so zeroed in on Xander and Zane right now?

Maybe because I’d seen all of Mason before, but Xander and Zane were like shiny new toys.

Shiny, new, very off-limits toys.

They all looked at me pawing the ground, and I wondered if they could sense my internal battle with Lily.

“I’m sure you’re wondering why we followed you here” Xander said, interpreting my desire as agitation.

“Perhaps Mason would like to explain.”

Xander

“We all scented you in the woods,” Zane jumped in. “But Mason here darted away like a madman, claiming you were in some kind of trouble.”

I smirked at Mason. “Looks like she’s okay to me.”

Mason’s eyes narrowed. “I smelled something strange. I still smell it now.”

“Are you sure about that?” Zane asked.

To be honest, we’d smelled it, too. From about a mile away.

A vampire’s scent.
