

When His Eyes Opened Chapter 2602

Chapter 2602

Avery immediately messaged her back: [Don't like Malcolm?]

Layla: [It's not that I don't like it. He is very nice and treats me very well. Pay attention to my emotions all the time. But there is no such feeling. When I look at him, it always feels like I'm looking at another brother of mine. After all, Robert was so kind to me.]

Avery: [Then you can check your mailbox and chat with someone older than you.]

Layla: [...take it easy! If men watch too much, it is easy to lose interest in men.]

Avery: [Hahaha! If your father saw this sentence, he would probably break out in a cold sweat.]

Layla: [During this period, my father worried about me more than the sum of the past 24 years.]

Avery: [Don't have a psychological burden. That's what parents do. You still have to go with your feelings. Don't be afraid to go the wrong way. You have the capital of trial and error.]

Layla: [Mom, I really love you. Just because you dote on me so much, I have grown up and still feel like a kid.]

Avery: [You will always be Mom and Dad's little baby!]

Layla looked at the text sent by her mother, her nose was sour, and her eyes were hot.

She decided not to be so willful, but to listen to her parents.

In this world, the only people who loved her the most were her parents.

She couldn't make her parents sad because of her obsession.

Let go of Eric first, and look at other men, maybe She could really find a suitable one.

Thopiavelle.

On the eve before Lucas went abroad, Siena wanted to say a lot to Lucas, but she couldn't say a single word.

She silently watched Lucas finish his dinner.

Lucas would usually get up and go back to the room immediately after eating, but not today.

After eating, he sat in the dining chair, picked up the water glass slowly, and drank water.

Lucas: "It's finished. You can eat!"

Siena: "Oh...tomorrow...will someone send you to Eozambiulle?"

Lucas: "I'll go by myself."

"Isn't your father going to send you there? You have never been to Eozambiulle, and you are not familiar with the place there...Or ask your father to find you a nanny in advance. That's good too!" Siena worried about him.

Lucas: "I'm not a three-year-old kid. I can live well without anyone taking care of me."

"What time is your flight tomorrow? Can I take you to the airport?" Siena thought for a while, and used a far-fetched reason to hide her sincerity, "Young Master, I haven't been to the airport yet! I don't even know What's airport look like?"

After finishing speaking, she was afraid that Lucas would refuse, so she continued: "Young Master, now that you're gone, I don't think we'll ever see each other again. Let me see you off!"

Seeing her red eyes, Lucas felt a little soft-hearted.

Siena was right.

In the future, the two of them may never meet again.

"Siena, it's rare that you have this kind of heart. Lucas's flight at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, we will leave at 6:30. If you come here before 6:30, we can take him to the airport together." Master Hogan said. When Master Hogan walking in, he heard the conversation between the two of them just now.

Siena immediately stood up from her chair: "Okay sir, I'll come over at 6:30 tomorrow morning."

"Well. Have you really decided to resign?" Master Hogan walked up to Siena and looked at Siena, "Then what will you do with your living expenses and tuition fees?"

Siena hesitated for a moment, wondering if she should tell the truth.

“Young Master, the second young master helped me pay off the debts outside. The second young master allowed me to pay him back after graduating from college, so now I...” Siena said.

Lucas stood up from his chair and strode back to his room.

Siena regretted seeing Lucas go away.

If she knew it earlier, she would tell a lie to deal with Master Hogan.

Master Hogan saw Lucas walk away in anger, and his eyes returned to Siena.

“I didn’t know about it. Cyrus didn’t tell me. How much did you owe outside?” Master Hogan asked.
