

When His Eyes Opened Chapter 2794 –

Chapter 2794

“Brother, you are much simpler than I imagined.” Hazel felt that what happened tonight was very funny because Robert’s face was very red, she didn’t dare to laugh out loud.

Robert wiped his nose to hide his embarrassment.

“This shows that you usually play very innocently with your classmates outside.” Hazel concluded, “It’s pretty good. You are surrounded by very serious friends.”

Robert had already lost face, so it didn’t matter that it’s a joke right now.

“Dad has investigated all the friends around me. My dad won’t let me play with them if they are not serious.” Robert explained, “My parents are afraid that I will be a bad student.”

“University is actually a small society.” Hazel poured a glass of water for Robert, “But I think whether a person will learn to be bad depends on the individual. Some people will not learn to be bad in a very bad environment, and some people will degenerate in a good environment. “

“Then do you think I will learn to be bad?” Robert took the water handed by Hazel and took a sip.

Hazel: “Of course you won’t learn to be bad. No one in our family will learn to be bad.”

“Little sister, sometimes good and bad are relative. For example, bad people also have good sides. People who look good, in private There may also be a bad side.” Robert put down the water glass, raised his hand and touched Hazel’s head, “It’s good to be a man with a clear conscience.”

“Besides a clear conscience, you can’t break the law.” Hazel said, “Many bad people also have a clear conscience.” They all have a clear conscience.”

Robert felt that he had been taught a lesson by Hazel. But he didn’t feel unhappy, on the contrary, he looked at her differently.

No matter how well-behaved he was, he should always be, according to his parents, who he had lived with since he was a young child. But Hazel was different.

Hazel did not live in a good environment and did not attend a good school, but her thinking was more developed than her own.

The training of people in a difficult environment was incomparable to other education.

This deepened Robert's desire to temper himself.

It's weekend.

Hazel got up early and started practicing.

Hazel looked forward to the weekend the most every week since Hector Joly came to study with her every weekend.

The maid made breakfast and called Hazel to eat.

"Miss Hazel, your reading is getting better and better now." The maid boasted as she brought the breakfast to the table.

Hazel blushed instantly: "Really? Don't lie to me."

"Of course it's true. I can hear the difference. It's much better than before." The maid said honestly, "When you talk and when you use broadcasting, the voices are different. It's like the voices of two people."

Hazel: "Maybe there is a little improvement, you exaggerate too much."

"Hahaha, I think you can become an announcer! Otherwise When your teacher Joly comes later, let him listen." Of course the maid meant flattery.

Hazel had a pleasant personality and was often eager to assist in the kitchen. Thus, the maid favour Hazel in particular.

Hazel knew that the maid said this because she liked her.

She had almost corrected her accent now, and there was still a lot of room for improvement in terms of skills when reading manuscripts.

At half past eight, Teacher Joly came to Foster's house.

Teacher Joly first listened to Hazel read a few manuscripts, after which she was given feedback, assisted in making corrections, and taught how to read more emotionally and coherently.

Time flies, two hours passed.

The maid came over with a fruit plate and snacks, reminding them to rest.

“Hazel, you have made great progress, and your reading is much better now than before.” Teacher Joly boasted.

“Teacher Joly, I also said that just now, but Hazel didn’t believe it.” The maid smiled and said.

Teacher Joly: “It’s really made great progress.”

The maid immediately fought for Hazel: “I think Hazel can become an announcer, what do you think?”

Teacher Joly glanced at Hazel.

Hazel didn’t even think about it, and immediately waved her hand: “My aunt is joking! I still need to practice hard.”

“Hazel, do you want to try to be an intern anchor?” Teacher Joly asked, “Winter vacation is coming soon. Our TV station will host Choose some outstanding students from your school to come as intern anchors...”

“I heard about it,” Hazel said bluntly, “I also signed up. My classmates said that anyone can sign up, so I signed up. But I know that every year the intern anchors are selected among the third and fourth year students.”

“That’s not exactly the case. We only look at whether the student is excellent, not whether the other party is a junior or senior, or a freshman or sophomore.” Teacher Joly explained, “There were also sophomore students who came to our station for internships before. In fact, don’t feel pressured, because the intern anchors are broadcasting early morning programs.”

Speaking of this, Teacher Joly considered Hazel’s identity, and added: “Maybe your parents will not agree. Because broadcasting early morning programs, you won’t be able to sleep at night.”

Hazel was not afraid of hard work. She didn’t care if she didn’t get any sleep at night as long as she could get an internship at a TV station.

It’s okay if she couldn’t sleep during the day if she couldn’t sleep at night.

“Teacher Joly, my parents won’t interfere with my study and work. They follow me in everything. I think I’m not strong enough. To tell you the truth, just take the students in our class as an excellent.” Hazel said modestly.

Teacher Joly smiled: "Not everyone is as hardworking as you, right? You are the fastest-growing one I have ever seen. Even if you are not Elliot's daughter, I would still give you a chance to practice."

Teacher Joly's words gave Hazel great encouragement.

At lunch, Hazel told Robert about it.

"Brother, my heart is beating so fast right now." After Hazel agreed to Teacher Joly, she always felt like a dream.

Robert didn't realize what Hazel meant, so he asked, "Did you not sleep well? Did you wake up early today?"

"I slept well. I went to bed very early last night." Hazel didn't sleep well at night, "I promised Teacher Joly to be an intern anchor at a TV station during the winter vacation."

"Didn't you just say that? If you want to go, you can go. If you don't want to go, don't go." Robert replied, "Now, after you go, which program will be broadcast? If you really go, our whole family will watch your program and increase your ratings."

Hazel couldn't laugh or cry: "Brother, the intern anchors are all broadcasting the early morning episode Program. I don't want you to stay up late to watch my program."

"Early in the morning? Do you go to work in the early morning?" Robert was shocked, "Little sister, this is equivalent to your night shift every day! It's so hard, are you sure you've thought about it?"

Hazel: "Brother, it doesn't matter when I go to work. The point is that Teacher Joly asked me to go for an internship and gave me such a precious opportunity. I am really touched and happy..."

Robert: "Little sister, if it's really nice to you, it shouldn't arrange early morning shows for you!"

"Brother, Teacher Joly explained to me that all the intern anchors start broadcasting in the early hours of the morning. He used to be like this. Just because I am Elliot's daughter, I can't let me directly override the rules of the TV station. Teacher Joly does not have this right, and I will not do it."

Robert: "...Okay! Did you tell our parents?"

Robert felt that going to work in the early morning was really too tiring.

He himself usually has the bad habit of staying up late, and every time he stays up late, he is basically listless the next morning, and he will be extra tired.

And Hazel didn't have the habit of staying up late, she always went to bed early and got up early, and now she was suddenly asked to work the night shift, her work and rest would definitely be messed up, and her body might not be able to bear it.

Their family was not short of money, and Robert felt distressed for Hazel to suffer like this.

He felt that his parents would love his sister too.

"I haven't said anything yet! It's late at night in Bridgedale, and they're already asleep." Hazel didn't want to disturb his parents' rest, "I'll send them a message! They will call me when they see the news."

"Hmm. Have you promised Teacher Joly?" Robert asked.

Hazel nodded obediently: "Of course I have to agree to such a rare opportunity. In fact, I was a little hesitant before agreeing. I think my strength is not worthy of this internship opportunity. Because usually students who choose juniors and seniors. I'm only a fresher, and I've only been in Univer' for half a year..."

"Little sister, you've worked so hard and improved so fast, and Teacher Joly has noticed it. He thought you're fine, so he gave you this opportunity. Otherwise, if you are too bad, even if Teacher Joly wants to open the back door for you, he will think twice." Robert wanted his sister to be more confident, "You are really not bad. At least I think it will be fine for you to be the host. "

"Brother, thank you for flattering me so much, I almost believe that I am really good." Hazel laughed, "Teacher Joly told me that many opportunities need to be grasped by oneself. If you want to achieve great things, you must take the initiative. If you are too passive, sometimes the opportunity will be useless to you."

"Teacher Joly is right! I have read the information about Teacher Joly. He actually came from a very ordinary background, but It is not easy to achieve the present achievement." Robert said.

Hazel: "Yes, I think so too. I think what Teacher Joly said is very reasonable. I am just too timid, habitually timid, and not confident. But I will change. I promise Teacher Joly, too. In order to overcome these shortcomings of myself."

Robert: "Well, if you insist so much, even if our parents don't want to agree, you will probably agree. You know, parents will not stop you from doing anything."

Hazel grinned and revealed, "I'm really afraid that you spoil me lawlessly."

"I really want to see what your lawlessness will look like." Robert sighed with a smile, "Do you want to go out for a stroll in the afternoon? Besides studying, you still study every day. Are you tired? How about I call Lilly and the others to go shopping with you?"

Hazel recalled that it had been several days since she last saw Lilly, so she nodded: "I'll call her myself! She asked me out once, but I was a little busy, so I refused, and she never asked me out after that. She probably thought I was always busy!"

"You were always busy." Robert said, "Are you interested in having me go shopping with you?"

Hazel shook his head: "Brother, you haven't played with your own friends for a long time, right? You go and play with your friends!"

Robert: "Okay."

Maria, Lilly, and Hazel were all out shopping. While shopping, Hazel received a call from Elliot.

It was 3 o'clock in the morning in Bridgedale.

Elliot had a nightmare and woke up. He picked up his phone to check the time, and saw the message from Hazel.

After Elliot read the content of the message, he took his mobile phone to the bathroom and called Hazel.

Hazel walked out of the store immediately after receiving her dad's call.

"Dad, isn't it late at night over there?" Hazel asked wonderingly.

"Dad just woke up and saw the message you sent, so I called you to ask." Elliot was worried, "Have you already promised Hector Joly?"
