

Chapter 0029

"Where should I start?" I asked, looking at Fiona for instructions.

"No, please don't, just sit and act like the Alpha that you are" Fiona challenged for some reason, it felt like an insult and it made me want to prove myself. I'm offered to help aout and she's indirectly refusing.

"You did not just say that" I voiced out, pulling off my coat.

"What are you doing?" she asked, with arched brows.

"Helping out" I answered, as I picked up a strand of flower.

"Please Alpha I hate to watch everyone's efforts go to waste just because you are..."

"Or maybe you're just scared I will actually do a great job" I interrupted her and got to work.

"Oh really, ok then let's see what you got," she said with a smile. "Everyone the Alpha has offered to lend us a hand, let's say a big thank you, shall we?" She said to the servants.

"Thank you, Alpha Izaak," they said in unison, and Fiona waved her hand dismissing them, and they left the room.

“Was that necessary?” I asked.

“Yesss” She chuckled.

“Fine.”

Fiona kept on ordering me around. Change this, change that, there's a peck of dust here, and over there too, she kept on nagging.

“Ok come on give me a hand” I gave up and she could not hold back her laugh.

“Laugh all you want, just give me a hand” I requested and she joined me.

She was so full of joy and life, this was the happiest I had seen her since she stepped foot in the mansion.

“Why are you doing these?” I asked, curious as to why she'd go all out to help her personal omega, not like they've known each other for long.

“Because I know what it feels like for a special day like your birthday to just go by without anyone doing something special for you. Deep down we might feel like it's ok but it's not, it's the one day we want to have to ourselves and be loved, so this is my way of expressing my love to Cora," she said, and I just stared, listening to her.

The way she spoke felt so personal, like it's something she had gone through that hurts her alot.

"Can I ask a question though?" She asked.

"Yea sure" I replied.

"Why are you suddenly acting all nice to me? it's a bit weird" She finally voiced out.

"Ughhhmm____" I tried looking for the right word to use and explain my sudden change in attitude. "I just got tired of making you suffer" I said finally, not wanting to ruin her mood today.

"So you knew I was suffering, huh? you are so annoying" She grumbled.

"You know, I don't know why you refer to me as Alpha when you speak to me informally," I said to her with a smile.

"Because you are the Alpha and you and I are not so close for me to refer to you with just your name, and also I speak informally because you annoy the hell out of me, and mess my emotions up" She groaned.

I smiled as she made such a funny look with her face as she express her annoyance toward me.

“Who would have thought the almighty ruthless Alpha Izaak could smile” she teased.

I adjusted my facial expression. “I wasn't smiling, I didn't smile” I said in defence.

“I swear I saw you lift your lips” she argued.

“You were staring at my lips?” I teased, with arched brows.

“That's not what I mean” She said, averting her gaze.

“So what do you mean?” I asked, teasing her further.

“Jeez! you are so annoying, can you stop talking to me, Cora will arrive soon and you are a distraction, it's my fault for challenging you” She raised her hand in mock surrender.

“Come on, we're done,” I said, she tried to take a look at the stool she had used to increase her height,

“Careful you'll fall,” I said to her, and just like I predicted, she slipped, Lou woke up fast or so I thought, I rushed over fast and caught her and we both fell on her bed.

“Are you okay?” I asked and she just stared at me not saying a word.
