Chapter 0047

"Go to my quarters, I'll send the pack's healer over to check on you," he smiled weakly. Looking at his smile, one would think he's just a husband, who is worried for his wife's welfare. But no. He's more concerned about keeping to the twisted script, he has going on in his twisted mind.

"Let me go, please," I said in a low but stern voice, as I released my hand from his grip. I've created enough scenes for today.

All eyes were still on me, and for the first time since I walked into the meeting room today, I saw Tiana seated with her arms folded, and a smile tugging at the corners of her lips.

Well she has every right to be happy. She's got her man to herself. They might even be destined mates, and thanks to this stupid alliance, I came between the both of them. Now I understand why she was always attacking me any chance she got, I would have done the same, if I were in her shoes.

Alpha Izaak is not your destined mate Fiona, he owes you nothing. You are just not a bride for an alliance, or more or less a sacrificial lamb, but also the wrong one. So he owes you nothing. I reminded myself mentally.

As soon as I was out of the meeting room, and made my way to my room quietly, I tried to distract myself by thinking happy thoughts.

"Stay very far away from me," I growled at Cora, who had been walking quietly behind me. Her presence is making it difficult for me to have happy thoughts, and distract myself.

Izaak's Pov

"How many days has it been since she had been ignoring you?" Rick asked

"Four days now!" I replied irritably, slamming the file I was going through on my desk.

"Are you sure you didn't offend her in any way? Maybe unintentionally?"

"Of course not!" I said in frustration. "Everything was fine the morning you walked in on us, but soon after the meeting she was giving me the cold shoulder."

The past four day has been agonizing, and each day felt like a never ending torment. I have a stack of papers and files I'm supposed to go through, but it's been piling up for four days straight. I can't even concentrate, as my mind keep wandering back to Fiona.

At first I thought it was just because she said she's not feeling fine, maybe it's her hormones or something. But it turns out she's being cold to only me, whenever she's with other pack members she's jovial and carefree, but when I come around she becomes cold as ice.

I replayed all that happened that morning in my mind over and over again, to see if I had said, or done something unintentionally that might upset her, but I can't seem to figure anything out.

"I think you are beginning to like her," Rick said, breaking my thoughts.

"Don't spew rubbish, I don't have time for this right now!" I growled.

"I know it all started like a game to you," Rick continued. "But look at you, you are a huge wreck, you can't even focus for just four days."

"Just get lost if you can't be useful," I snapped.

"Alright," Rick said, raising his hand in mock surrender. "I was just trying to help. I can ask her personal omega, Cora, if she knows anything."

"At least you're using your brains now," I mumbled under my breath.

Rick soon left me alone, and I was left with just my thoughts, and Rick's words. I'm I beginning to like her like he said? Of course not that's not possible, this is all an act. Tiana is the one I love. All this is just a means to an end nothing more.

I don't even know what to make of all this, and how to make, how I'm feeling right now make sense. But one thing was definitely certain. I MISS HER.
