

Chapter 0052

Izaak's Pov

Seeing Fiona lash out like that in tears, brought my anger which was at level one hundred, to level zero instantly. I just stood there speechless not knowing what to do or how to react as I watched her say her piece and storm off.

I should be angry with her, but here I was feeling remorseful. I was conflicted on what to do next.

Should I go after her, and apologize? But, she's the one who's wrong here.

Or should I just ignore her and head back to the festival?

I chose the latter.

As soon as I stepped out of my room I saw Fiona enveloped in Cora's embrace sobbing.

Rick rushed over to me. "I didn't hit her," I said, even before he could ask, I could already tell what was on his mind.

"Good," Rick replied. "Because if you had, you'd have to deal with me," he threatened.

I scoffed, and shook my head at Rick's threat.

"You know me Rick, I don't hit women."

"Well, there's a first time," he said. "With the look I saw in your eyes, you can basically do anything. I was scared shitless myself."

I chuckled. "That's good, at least you'd know everytime is not joking time," I replied.

"Did she tell you why she hid it from you?" Rick asked.

"I didn't bother asking her," I said. "The fact remains that she lied to me, I don't care what her reasons are but she shouldn't have kept something like this from me," I said flatly, and made my way towards the festival, with Rick trailing behind me.

"I feel so sorry for her," Rick sympathize. "Only goddess knows what it might have been like, not having a wolf."

I simply ignored him.

"Whatever decision the elders agree on, I'd go with it," I said.

Just as we ewher about reaching the festival venue, a guard told us that the elders were in the meeting room.

As soon as we arrived in the meeting room I could already feel the tension in the air. The elders were engaged in a heated argument, that they didn't even notice we were at the door.

"There's no way we'd get her stay, she'd be a disgrace to our pack," Elder Freya scoffed. "Even an ordinary omega is better than her."

"I agreed with Elder Freya," Gamma Tony chimed in. "Letting her stay, we make us look like weaklings."

"True," another elder said in agreement. "Our Luna is supposed to have a wolf that's as magnificent and powerful like our alpha. We can't afford to have a Luna without a wolf."

"True," Elder Ellie added. "But that still doesn't change the fact that she's wise and caring, she has the people's best interest at heart, Elder Ellie defended"

Ever since I was a kid, I've known elder Ellie as someone who is a good judge of character. She doesn't mince words when speaking, she goes straight to the point.

"Why are you taking her side?! Elder Freya snarled. "Now's not the time to be led by emotions, we are talking reality here."

"Fiona has proven to be a good Luna, with or without a wolf!" She said firmly, not backing down in defending Fiona.

"Without a wolf, how will she help in times of war?" Elder Spencer asked. "Will she use her caring nature to beg our enemies to retreat?" He said mockingly.

The other elders all burst out laughing, apart from Elder Ellie and Elder Jay.

"Listen up!" Tiana yelled, which caused the argument to die down, as they all turned to her. "I have a suggestion. Why don't we vote on this," she said.

"I agree on with this, we should vote our choices," Elder Jay finally spoke for the first time since they all began arguing.

"What do you say, alpha Izaak?" Tiana asked with a smile on her face. The elders all turned to my direction as they had been so invested in their argument they didn't even know I've been standing there for the past two minutes.

"Whatever you guys decide," I said, as I made my way to my seat.

"Well it had been decided. We will cast a vote," Elder Spencer said.

Rick went out and got a basket that will serve as the ballot box, then he handed us a piece of paper to say either yay or nay.

I stared at the piece of paper in my hand as my mind was conflicted on which decision to make. I looked at everyone present and with the look of things, the odds were against Fiona.

"Alpha Izaak, your paper," Elder Freya requested.

I quickly write down my answer, and gave the paper to her. She put it in the basket with the rest, and handed the basket to Elder Spencer.

Elder Spencer took out the papers and counted it. "For Luna Fiona to Stay we have..." he paused, as he looked at our faces, and this only increased the tension in the air. "In favour of Fiona still keeping her position as Luna, we have six votes. And in favour of her not keeping her position we have, five votes."

"Yes!" Elder Ellie rejoiced.

I sighed in relief, not even realizing I was even holding my breath.

"This doesn't change the fact that she's not worthy," Elder Freya murmured.

"Just accept that you loss, Elder Freya," Elder Ellie said happily. "It's definitely the goddess's will."

"Beta Roderick, please call in Luna Fiona," Elder Spencer requested.

"Sure," Rick said with a wide grin on his face, he couldn't even hide his excitement even if he tries to.

Rick soon came back after about five minutes, with Fiona walking behind him. Her face was puffy due to all the crying, but she tried hard to mask it with some makeup, but I could still see it.

As she walked, she tugged at the side of her clothes, which shows that she was nervous.

"Fiona," Elder Spencer called out to her.

"Yes?" She answered politely, with her head bowed.

"The Elders and Council have come to a final decision about your situation," he said, with his eyes fixed in her watching her every move.

"It has been decided, that you'd still remain the Luna."

Fiona sighed, evidence of relief washing over her.

"Thank you," she said with a smile. "Thank you everyone," she said bowing slightly to everyone present.

"You are destined for great things," Elder Ellie encouraged, she bowed her head and thanked her.

"One more thing," Elder Spencer said, as soon as Fiona turned to leave.

"You have to prepare yourself for a great storm."
