Chapter 91 No more pretending

Catherine sneered, "It's not about what she did wrong. It's about how the Fair family doesn't match up to the Montague family. You should be aware of this. If it weren't for her saving Mr. Montague Senior's life, there would be no chance for her and Raymond."

Beatrice, who was always eloquent, didn't dare to say a word when facing Catherine. She was only frustrated that Selena couldn't hold onto Raymond's heart, which led them both to be humiliated.

Catherine glanced at Selena and noticed that she still maintained her indifferent demeanor, which made her even more irritated.

"This contract stipulates that you must divorce one year from now. Even if Raymond can't control himself and wants you, you must obediently take birth control pills. The Fair family is not qualified to give Raymond a child. I don't want my grandchild to be born into a family with questionable influence."

This statement was very serious, and a sharpness flashed through Selena's eyes.

"Mrs. Montague, I didn't want to argue with you before because you are my elder. I've been transparent since I married into this family three years ago. I haven't had any involvement with Raymond either. I have smiled and brushed off your repeated humiliations. But today, you've even brought my father into this. Isn't that going too far?"

Catherine didn't know what was happening, but seeing Max this morning ignited her anger.

Perhaps it reminded her of some unpleasant things.

As a result, her expression turned unpleasant, and she no longer cared about offering Selena any more opportunities.

Her elder son also had a dog back then, the same breed as Max's. But everyone knows that her elder son passed away six years ago. She closed her eyes, and now Raymond is her lifeline.

The old man has tied her lifeline to a woman like this, of course she is extremely unhappy.

"Selena, if you think I'm being rude, then let the Fair family not rely on the Montague family to get through the second round of financing. Since you have accepted the Montague family's charity, don't pretend anymore. I'm just stating facts. What? Do you all feel like I'm deliberately humiliating you?" Her tone was calm as she picked up her bag nearby.

Raymond will be

'Mr. Montague Senior's flight is at 6 o'clock tonight, don't forget to pick him up there too. Once You've signed this contract, remember to bring it to me. With these words, Catherine left triumphantly.

Chapter 91 No more pretending

These words left Selena unable to argue back. Because it is a fact that the Fair family needs to rely on the Montague family to get through the second round of financing, so it is not surprising that they are looked down upon.

James next to them seemed to have been greatly insulted, he took a few breaths, covering his chest, his face turning pale. "Dad?" Selena was startled, but James closed his eyes, trying to suppress the pain. His breathing became rapid, and Beatrice, at this moment, couldn't blame Selena anymore.

If something happened to James at this time, Nick wouldn't have stabilized his position in the company yet, and now everyone would definitely think that the company belonged to Selena, not her, the stepmother.

Moreover, she only held ten percent of the stocks and still had a long way to go before having a say. The two of them quickly called for an ambulance and sent James to the hospital. Along the way, James seemed to be trying hard to speak, but in the end, he didn't say anything, just let out a deep sigh.

Selena's chest also felt uncomfortable, and she rubbed her temples with her hand. When they reached the hospital, James was quickly pushed into the emergency room. His health had deteriorated over these years, and he almost fainted from anger the last time Selena made him angry.

Catherine's words today clearly struck his sore spot. Selena and Beatrice sat in the corridor, watching the lights in the emergency room turn on. Beatrice snorted.

"If you can manage to hold onto Raymond, why would Catherine come to humiliate me and your dad? Your dad becoming like this, isn't it all because of you?"

Beatrice became more and more angry, especially after Selena witnessed her buying a villa for Nick last time. James seemed to truly feel sorry for this daughter, so he hired a lawyer overnight and planned to give Selena 20 percent of his shares as compensation.

She did not agree despite the obstacles, James finally promised to wait for Selena for a while before giving her the shares. Those shares were twenty percent of the company, twice as many as she currently held in her hands.

Although with the size of the Fair family company now, these stocks were enough for her to live comfortably, she couldn't bear to give up without getting the company after so many years of struggle with that woman.

"If Beatrice wants to keep Raymond, why not push your own daughter out?"

Selena closed her eyes, neither relating nor thinking about anything else. At this moment, she only prayed that her father wouldn't have any problems.

Chapter 92 Stood Up Again

James' rescue this time seemed to be very tricky; he was being treated until half-past five before being wheeled out by the doctor.

Selena looked at the person wearing an oxygen mask and felt a slight sourness in her heart.

"Doctor, is my father's condition very bad?"

James had been busy with the company for these years and had never come for a physical examination. Any pain he had was superficially treated with painkillers.

Selena remembered that her mother used to complain about him like this when she was still alive. At that time, her mother always said that as long as they earned enough money, the family could buy a house in Ridge-field, plant flowers and vegetables, and live a comfortable life. But when her mother married her father, both of them had a difficult time and faced disdainful looks, James felt guilty towards his wife and rejected this suggestion, always thinking of making big money and giving his wife a good life.

Selena had harbored some resentments in her heart during her earlier years; her father simply didn't know what her mother wanted.

When the company really started to make profits, her mother passed away.

After removing his mask, the doctor looked at her and asked, "Who are you to the patient?"

"I'm his daughter, Selena replied.

The doctor gestured for others to push James into the ward and then pointed to his office. "The situation is a bit complicated. Come with me to the office."

Selena nodded, and as soon as the door closed, the doctor sighed.

"Miss Fair, your father has liver cancer in the late stage. At this point, we no longer recommend surgery. He probably has about a year left. I hope you can prepare yourselves mentally."

Selena felt a loud "boom" in her head and thought she was hearing things. How was this possible?

"Doctor, are you sure?"

he should

"The examination results indicate this. The cancer cells have already spread. He has likely been feeling pain in his body for the past two years, but he didn't take it seriously. For now, take painkillers and be admitted to the hospital as soon as possible.

He should also remember to rest more and get enough sleep. His liver enzymes are also high, probably due to staying up late. At this age, his health is the most important thing. Miss Fair, you must persuade the patient to rest well and maintain adequate sleep.

Selena stood still, unable to say a word. The doctor knew that it was difficult for family members.

to digest the news and sighed, unsure of what to say.

Selena didn't know how she had ended up in the office.

Meanwhile, at the airport, Raymond and the others had already arrived. He glanced around and realized that Selena hadn't replied to the message he had sent her.

His eyebrows furrowed, and he couldn't help but send another message.

[Where are you?]

But the message seemed to have disappeared without a trace. His face turned completely dark, and he walked straight into the terminal. John stood behind him and noticed his expression.

He quietly asked, "Has Miss Fair not come? Should we make a phone call?"

A hint of coldness flashed in Raymond's eyes.

"No need."

After saying that, they waited in the lobby for Mr. Montague Senior to come out.

Mr. Montague Senior wasn't in the best health, and the journey had exhausted him a bit.

However, when he thought about seeing Selena, a smile appeared on his face.

But after coming out, he didn't see Selena's figure, only Raymond waiting there obediently.

Mr. Montague Senior's face immediately darkened. "Where is Selena?"

At the mention of her, Raymond's expression turned even colder. "Grandfather, let me take you back to the old mansion first. Dinner is already prepared at home.”

*Raymond, did you have a fight with Selena? As a man, you should know how to accommodate her. Selena is a talented child, but sometimes she can be stubborn.”

Raymond’s aura remained heavy, and his impression of Selena had long plummeted below zero.

Chapter 92 Stood Up Again

Could it be because he had agreed to resolve the second round of financing for her and didn’t even want to put up a facade of pleasing these elders now?

“Raymond, I’m talking to you.”

In the end, Raymond didn’t dare to make the patriarch angry. After all, the doctor had repeatedly warned that the patriarch couldn’t withstand any stimulation, no matter how small.

“Grandfather, I understand. She must have been delayed by work today. I’ll call her later to ask. Only then did Mr. Montague Senior nod in satisfaction, with a smile on his face.

“That’s how it should be. I’ll also call Selena later. She must be busy, otherwise she wouldn’t have missed picking me up. I even called Ashbourne Manor to notify her, but I don’t know what happened to that child.”

In Mr. Montague Senior’s eyes, there must be a reason why Selena didn’t come. But in Raymond’s eyes, he felt that the other party was doing this on purpose. She had stood him up last time, and now she had stood up the patriarch. Is this the upbringing of the Fair family?

Chapter 93 His Daughter-in-Law Can Only Be Selena

They supported the patriarch back home, and on the way, Mr. Montague Senior couldn’t help but call Selena.

Selena was still standing in the corridor, because of the doctor’s words, she felt as if her bones were cold. It wasn’t until the phone rang that she seemed to wake up from that chaotic state.

Her fingertips stiffened, unable to control herself from rubbing her hands, trying to rid herself of the coldness, before finally pressing the answer key. The phone screen showed that the time had passed, and she had missed the opportunity to pick up Grandpa F***

She quickly apologized.

“Grandpa, I’m sorry, my dad suddenly got hospitalized, I am accompanying him at the hospital, so I missed picking you up.”

Mr. Montague Senior thought to himself, as expected, and quickly reassured her.

“Selena, how did your father end up in the hospital? Is he getting better now? Don’t worry, you don’t need to come for dinner tonight, just stay with him.”

Selena’s eyes rarely reddened. Her father had liver cancer, and it was in the late stage. She didn’t know who to talk to about this anymore. Should she tell her uncle? But things had been a bit unpleasant with her uncle.

As for the Montague family, it was impossible to bring it up. Even though Grandpa F** had been very kind to her, she didn’t want others to know about this, fearing they would think she was deliberately seeking sympathy.

“It’s just that he’s feeling a bit unwell, he hasn’t woken up yet. Grandpa, next time I’ll bring you a gift to apologize.”

Mr. Montague Senior smiled, “Why are you being so polite with your grandpa? I’ve also brought you a gift, I’ll have Raymond deliver it to you.”

Selena’s eyes turned red again as she looked up at the ceiling. “Okay, thank you, Grandpa.”

Being called grandpa by Selena like this made Mr. Montague Senior feel even better. After hanging up the phone, he took out the box next to him and handed it to Raymond.

“This is a gift for Selena. Don’t forget to give it to her. Also, James from the Fair family is hospitalized. He’s not particularly good to Selena, but he’s not particularly bad either. When you have time, remember to bring a gift to the hospital to visit. Since your their son-in-law, you should act like one.”

Chapter 93 His Daughter-in-Law Can Only Be Selena

Mr. Montague Senior genuinely loved Selena and didn’t have any airs towards the rest of the Fair family either.

He had already investigated Selena’s life over these years. It was neither good nor bad, mainly because she was too strong-willed. Even if she suffered, she wouldn’t confide in anyone. She went to Ridge field for high school by herself and encountered that kind of teacher in college. Mr. Montague Senior had wanted to call the school several times, but Selena had stopped him, saying that she wanted to find an opportunity to prove herself, and that child had indeed succeeded. Recently, Harvard University had changed its president, and that Stone b**d had been dismissed.

At the thought of Samantha still being from the Stone family, Mr. Montague Senior snorted coldly.

“That person from the Stone family’s background...

“That’s it, he only knows how to play some opportunistic tricks.”

Upon hearing Mr. Montague Senior suddenly mention the Stone family, Raymond furrowed his brow.

“Grandfather, what does this have to do with the Stone family?”

Seeing that he was still defending the Stone family, Mr. Montague Senior sneered.

“Isn’t Samantha, Olivia’s aunt? Look at what she’s been doing at school! With such character, I think the Stone family is just like that.”

Raymond’s lips twitched as he flipped through the documents in his hand and replied, is Samantha, the rest of the Stone family are different people. It’s already the modern era, why are you still sticking to the guilt by association mindset?”

Mr. Montague Senior felt uncomfortable in his heart and tightened his grip on his cane.

That Olivia isn’t a good person either, she won’t set foot in the Montague family.

His daughter-in-law can only be Selena.

Anyone who tries to cause trouble will not get along with him!

“Remember to visit James at the hospital this week, he is your father-in-law, you must be mindful.”

Raymond’s tone was indifferent, “Understood.”

At that time, just have John bring some things over.

Mr. Montague Senior thought that he would really obey and nodded in satisfaction. Meanwhile, int the hospital, James had already woken up but still felt pain all over his body. He looked at Beatrice in front of the hospital bed and furrowed his brow, “How did I end up here?”

Beatrice still didn’t know what was wrong with James, after all, he had been complaining about his body aching for years, but as long as he took painkillers, he would be fine, so she didn’t take it seriously.

“You passed out at Ashbourne Manor.”

“What about Selena?”

Whenever Selena was mentioned, Beatrice’s expression turned unsightly, “The nurse sent her to the cafeteria to get some food. The hospital provides customized meals for patients, if you miss this time, there won’t be any left. If you don’t like it, I’ll have the chef at home prepare something for you later.”

James coughed twice and sighed, “Beatrice, do you think Selena resents me for pushing her into the Montague family?”

Chapter 94 Selena is indeed not as sensible as Alice

James dreamt of Barbara Fair, his ex-wife and Selena’s mother. When he woke up, he was filled with guilt.

= it was because her death anniversary had just passed, that’s why he had such a dream, and Raymond is indeed outstanding, but if his daughter doesn’t like him, then it’s pushing her into a pit. To be fair, Selena is not as mature as Alice.

He has never worried about her from childhood to adulthood.

But he now sense the ever-growing mental gap between him and his daughter.

A hint of anger flashed in Beatrice’s eyes. As one grows older, they become more compassionate. In the past, if she encouraged James with a few words, he would listen.

But now is the time when he is weak, coupled with the recent anniversary of his ex-wife’s death, he may be thinking too much in the moment.

Beatrice never won against that woman before, and now she definitely won’t let her daughter ride on her head.

“Honey, don’t overthink it. You’ve been good to Selena. The main issue is that she has an unpleasant personality. Look at how Mrs. Montague treats us. If Selena stood up for herself a bit, Mrs. Montague wouldn’t have been so disrespectful.”

James thought of Catherine and coughed as he covered his mouth. Catherine’s words were indeed cruel, but the Fair family had nothing to say about Selena and Raymond’s marriage being for three billion dollars in financing.

Catherine looked down on their family and looked down on his daughter, which is why she spoke. so harshly.

“Honey, Alice truly cares about you. If she wasn’t genuinely unwell, she probably would have come to see you long ago. I haven’t mentioned your hospitalization to her. Nick just called and said you. should rest more, not to worry about the company’s affairs. You’ve already assigned someone to handle it, and he will learn more.”

James's complexion improved significantly. Alice and Nick were indeed more mature than Selena. Selena was too independent, to the point that it often made him as a father feel like he had no presence.

Chapter 94 Selena is indeed not as sensible as Alice

Selena really isn't as mature as Alice.

As soon as he finished speaking, footsteps could be heard at the door. Selena had returned and coincidentally overheard this statement. James suddenly felt embarrassed, his expression changing repeatedly.

But Selena lowered her eyelashes and placed the nutritional meal on the nearby counter.

Dad, are you hungry? You should eat something first."

James opened his mouth, wanting to explain himself, but realized he had no way to explain it and could only sigh.

"Okay."

After taking a spoonful of porridge, he asked, "When can I be discharged from the hospital?"

Selena had already discussed with the doctor, not to mention James's condition to anyone other than her. Since they had decided against surgery for now, they might as well let him peacefully complete this year in the hospital.

"The doctor suggests you rest in the hospital for two weeks."

"Two weeks is not acceptable. The company has a pile of matters for me to handle, and you know that we are about to begin the second round of financing. It's crucial not to be careless at this time."

Selena felt an inexplicable anger. If he had come to the hospital earlier when he wasn't feeling well, it wouldn't have reached the late stage of liver cancer.

"Dad, what's more important, your health or the company?"

James noticed that Selena's mood was off and decided not to say anything further. At the same time, there was a hint of softness in her heart. Selena still cared about him as he was her father.

"Okay, I will convert all the meetings to online, and you can rest well in the hospital for the next half month. Selena said.

Seeing the rare warmth between the father and daughter, Beatrice couldn't help but grit her teeth, wanting to speak up.

"Do you even realize that it was you who made your father sick? If you can convince Raymond, do we still deserve to be spoken to in that way by Catherine?!"

Chapter 94 Selena is indeed not as sensible as Alice

Selena didn't want to argue with Beatrice in front of James anymore, as it would only make James upset.

"Dad, you should rest well. Beatrice will accompany you here, and I will have the doctors contact me anytime in the next half month."

Being ignored, Beatrice became angry, and was about to say something when she heard James say, "That's enough, you don't always have to find trouble for no reason."

This made Beatrice's face stiffen, realizing that if she continued to be unreasonable, it would annoy James, so she let it go.

James looked at Selena, his tone gentle.

"I'm fine. I'll stay in the hospital for the next half month. Selena, it's been a long time since we had a chat. I've really neglected you these past two years. If you have time, come and see me okay?"

Selena felt her eyes welling up with tears, afraid that if she stayed any longer, she would reveal her emotions. If James were still strong and healthy, she could argue with him and resent him all she wanted.

But he only had a year left.

"Yeah, I'll come often."

After saying this, Selena left. When she reached the hospital downstairs, she felt a chill all over her body. Even though it was summer, this coldness seemed to penetrate every bone.

Meanwhile, at the Montague family estate, everyone was gathered together, having finished dinner. Raymond stood up to leave, and the old master couldn't help but hold him back and advise him.

"Remember what your grandfather said and bring a gift when you visit James this week."

Catherine's tone was full of annoyance when mentioning the Fair family.

Raymond, that Selena does indeed have some chain. She looks like she's adept at seducing men."

Although Raymond didn't like Selena's personality, he hadn't heard of her getting close to other men in recent years, so he didn't comment on Catherine's words.

Catherine was afraid of talking too much and annoying people, so she sighed.

As soon as the deceased older brother was mentioned, a chill ran through Raymond's body, but his face quickly turned cold like a snowy morning, freezing over. His jaw lifted slightly and his voice turned icy.

"If it weren't for my older brother's passing, you wouldn't pay so much attention to me, Mom. I'm not a substitute for my older brother. It's impossible for me to listen to you and let you manipulate me."

Catherine's complexion instantly turned as pale as paper. Her fingertips slowly curled, almost embedding into her palm. Her lips trembled, and after several attempts, she finally spoke with a reddened eyes.

"Raymond, is that how you think of Mom? I'm doing all this for your own good."

A cold smile appeared on Raymond's thin lips. "If it weren't for your 'good,' my brother probably wouldn't have had an accident."

Catherine almost fainted on the spot. Her breathing trembled, but she couldn't utter a complete sentence. Raymond didn't want to upset her too much either, so he softened his tone.

"Go inside, I'm leaving."

After saying that, he briskly left the old mansion. When he returned to the car, John was already waiting for him inside. He caught a glimpse of Raymond's expression in the rearview mirror, which wasn't too good, and spoke up.

"President, are we going back to the hotel?"

Raymond had been staying in a hotel recently, and he raised his fingertip to rub his brow.

"Tomorrow, bring some gifts and go visit James in the hospital."

"Is that what the old man requested?"

"Yes."

John didn't say anything further. He was about to drive to the hotel when he heard Raymond say, "Go to Ashbourne Manor."

Grandfather's health was very poor, and talks of Selena even during meals.

As Selena mentioned, he worried that she would suddenly get the urge to visit Ashbourne Manor

Chapter 96 Is it a playing hard to get?

“Do you want to call the people at Ashbourne Manor?”

“Go ahead.”

His tone was indifferent, feeling inexplicably annoyed about meeting Selena soon. He had always been a punctual person, but the other party had stood him up twice in a row. It was truly lacking in manners.

John took out his phone and called Ashbourne Manor. When Fiona received the phone call, she was startled. Mr. Montague was coming tonight?

After hanging up, she hurriedly had someone hide Max in the back room, and then had every corner of the room disinfected to ensure that not a single dog hair was left behind. The maids were efficient and sanitized every day, so they completed the task in less than half an hour.

Fiona breathed a sigh of relief, but then remembered that Selena had not returned and wondered whether she should call and inform her.

Just as she took out her phone, she heard the sound of a car engine outside. She quickly went out and saw an unfamiliar car. It was a black Maybach,

Mr. Montague had arrived!

Fiona quickly put down her phone and went to greet him.

“Mr. Montague.”

Although Raymond had some reservations about everything related to Ashbourne Manor, he didn't vent his frustration on unrelated people, so he simply nodded. Fiona's attitude became even more respectful.

“Mrs. Montague has already had someone send Mr. Montague's belongings, and she has also instructed the chef according to your taste. If there is anything you are not used to, please let me know. I am the caretaker left behind by the old master to take care of Miss Fair.”

Raymond's gaze fell on her, but he didn't say anything unnecessary. Fiona could sense his coldness and quickly led him to the master bedroom.

“Mr. Montague, this is your room, and the one at the end of the corridor is Miss Fair's.”

Raymond's gaze landed on the end of the corridor. It was indeed quite a distance, without disturbing each other. It was fine. He pushed the door open and walked in. Fiona stood at the door, waiting for it to close before she finally relaxed.

Mr. Montague had a strong presence, and he looked very aloof. This was the first time he had come to Ashbourne Manor in three years. Fiona didn't know if he would get along peacefully with Miss Fair.

Because she had been in a hurry to have the maids clean up the dog hair in the villa, Fiona forgot to call Selena in time. At this moment, Selena had already arrived at the front gate.

Today, she was tired due to her father's affairs. Upon entering, she didn't see Fiona and went straight for the door and went to her own bedroom.

She didn't know if it was her imagination, but she felt that there was a hint of a stranger's presence in the villa tonight, and it was filled with a chilling feeling. Just as she finished washing up, Fiona's voice came from outside.

“Miss Fair, the hot milk is ready.”

Selena opened the door slightly and heard Fiona say, "I also prepared a serving for Mr. Montague, I'll bring it to him later."

Selena's palm instantly stiffened, thinking that she was having auditory hallucinations.

"Raymond is here?"

Because she was too surprised, she directly called out the other person's name. Only then did Fiona remember that she had been busy commanding the servants and forgot to tell Selena about this, so she nodded.

"Mr. Montague is in the master bedroom now, does Miss Fair want to go and see him?"

Selena quickly handed the milk over, "Fiona, call me after he leaves tomorrow morning, I won't go down for breakfast."

Fiona wasn't a fool and realized that Selena was avoiding Raymond. She didn't understand why and didn't want to ask too much, "Alright, Miss Fair, rest early then." Selena closed the door and felt her heart racing.

It wasn't excitement, but the worry that Raymond would soon uncover the truth. Fortunately, she didn't bump into him when she came back, otherwise that would have been embarrassing.

She finished the hot milk and thought that she should go to the old mansion to see her grandfather tomorrow. It was indeed impolite to miss the appointment today. In the master bedroom, there was a knock at Raymond's door, his brow furrowed. Could it be that woman who came back?

He got up to open the door and saw Fiona holding the hot milk.

"Mr. Montague, do you drink this before bed? Because Miss Fair has this habit, so I heated a cup for you too."

"She's back?"

According to reason, his wife who he hadn't seen for three years should have come over to say hello tonight, at the very least. Moreover, she would find ways to get close to him.

"Yeah, Miss Fair is already asleep."

Raymond inexplicably felt a sense of being ignored. He took the milk, said thank you, and closed the door. Was she playing hard to get?

He frowned, but didn't think much about it. Instead, he turned and walked to the table next to him to continue reading his work emails.

Early the next morning, he had already come downstairs. Fiona brought out a Western-style breakfast. Raymond's gaze swept through the living room, but he didn't see the mistress of the house.

Fiona seemed to know what he was looking for and quickly explained.

"Miss Fair was a little tired yesterday and asked me not to wake her up this morning."

Raymond also thought of James being hospitalized. Yesterday evening, she probably came back from the hospital. But wasn't James pretending to be sick on purpose?

His thin lips showed a hint of coldness as he calmly finished his breakfast and got into the car parked outside. On the first night staying at Ashbourne Manor, he didn't see his wife whom he hadn't seen in three years.

He wondered if she was able to remain composed or if she intentionally wanted to pique his interest. If it was the latter, she had made a mistake in her tactics, as he would not be interested in her, never.

Raymond instructed John to buy something and go check on James at the Montague family at noon. John nodded in agreement, Once Raymond left Ashbourne Manor, Fiona knocked on Selena's door.

Selena had already finished getting ready and was waiting for her.

"He left?"

"Yes, Miss Fair, he just left."

Selena went downstairs.

"Miss Fair, if you are avoiding me because of Mrs. Montague's words, do you want me to talk to the old man about it?"

"No need, Fiona. I don't consider you an outsider, so I won't hide anything from you. I don't like Raymond. I married him back then because of the three billion funding; Mrs. Montague doesn't like me because of that, and that's normal. Once my grandfather's condition improves, I will divorce Raymond."

Chapter 97 When to have a child with Raymond

During her college years, Selena had an idea to repair this. Unlike other ancient paintings that were only damaged, this one was incomplete.

So she tried to paint it herself, spending several years copying it before daring to present it to the old man. A pleased smile appeared on Mr. Montague Senior's face.

"If Mr. Butler knew that you are no longer participating in the competition, he would definitely be heartbroken."

A guilty expression appeared on Selena's face. "Grandfather, once I finish my current task, I will start painting again."

"That's good. Don't delay your talent. I really like this. I'll have someone hang it on the wall in the study later."

A gentle smile appeared on Selena's face. She responded gracefully, "As long as you like it."

"Selena, when do you plan to have a child with Raymond?"

After Mr. Montague Senior finished speaking, he began to cough, covering his mouth.

A hint of confusion appeared in his eyes, as if he was trying to suppress the discomfort in his body.

Selena knew that Mr. Montague Senior's health was not good, so she didn't dare to say anything to refuse. "Grandfather, I will do it as soon as possible."

A smile appeared on Mr. Montague Senior's face as he patted her hand. "So, you are willing to have a child with Raymond?"

Selena nodded, her mouth curved, her eyes sincere. "Yes, I'm willing."

Mr. Montague Senior's face lit up with joy.

"It's wonderful that you are willing. Don't worry, whether it's a boy or a girl, grandpa will love them."

Selena didn't want to talk too much on this topic, fearing that it would raise the old man's expectations too high. If those expectations were not met, it would be even harder for his body to bear.

So she timely brought up other topics and accompanied him for an hour before leaving the mansion. As she was about to get into the car, she encountered Mia outside.

Mia had big sunglasses on her face, and it was unexpected to run into her here, which was somewhat surprising.

"Selena, you? What are you doing here?" Mia asked.

She didn't see Selena come out of the old house, she only saw Selena getting in the car here, so Selena made up an excuse.

"It's been a long time since I last painted, so I came here to find some inspiration."

Mia smiled, naively believing this reason, and began chatting like a little sparrow.

"By the way, do you know that Emily was released by the police station? I heard it was her brother, Paul, who personally went to the police station. She's really lost face this time. Paul has a bad temper, so it's better for you to avoid him, or you can call my cousin and let him save you.

But don't get into conflict with Paul."

Even Mia said so, it seems that this Paul is a tough character.

"Okay, thanks for the reminder."

Mia got off the car and pointed to the old house not far away.

Little did she know that shortly after she left, Raymond arrived at the old house.

Because the doctor just called him and said that his grandfather refused to take his medication. In the entire Montague family, only Raymond dares to talk back to him, so he had to leave his job and come back to the old mansion.

When Mr. Montague Senior saw him, his eyes widened, "I see that you deliberately chose the time to avoid Selena. Selena had just left, and you came right after!"

Raymond felt wronged because he didn't have a clue that the woman had been there.

"Grandfather, the doctor said you refuse to take your medicine?"

As soon as Mia finished speaking, she brought a bowl of medicine from the kitchen.

"Cousin, grandfather didn't want to take it, but after seeing you, he changed his mind."

L

She held a dark liquid in her hand. Throughout these years, the old man had been taking both Chinese and Western medicine and couldn't afford to delay for even a moment.

Raymond breathed a sigh of relief, thinking that the woman might be somewhat useful after all. But the next words from the old man made his face turn dark.

"Raymond, Selena said she is willing to have a baby with you. Now that I know that, I can finally put my mind at ease. I thought she didn't want to give you one, but since she's willing, you should make an effort to impregnate her by the end of the year."

Raymond's eyes turned icy cold, as that woman certainly wanted to have a child. This way, the Fair family could completely trap the Montague family.

He thought that she didn't come to see him last night because she was being sensible, but it turns out she schemed behind his back and brought up the idea of having a child with the old man.

Raymond's eyes were filled with intense sarcasm, and his lips tightened with coldness.

"Grandfather, did she say it herself?"

"Yes, Selena is quite understanding."

Mia handed over the medicine, wanting to say more. What does it mean that she is understanding? In all of New York, who wouldn't want to have a child with my cousin?

That woman is truly calculating to talk to grandfather like that. Considering the old man's condition, my cousin will definitely agree, even if it's just in words. She'll have to wait and see in two days how thick-skinned that woman really is to say something like that!

But when Mia met Raymond's gaze, she had no choice but to shut her mouth.

Raymond pushed the medicine towards the old man, "Grandfather, I will do my best."

The response was the same as before, but whether or not he actually put in effort, Mr. Montague Sr didn't know, so he raised his chin.

"I will go to Ashbourne Manor tonight to see if you have truly been working hard as you claim."

Mr. Montague Sr thought that Raymond would be flustered, but he calmly lowered his eyes,

"Hmm, go ahead."

With his current physical condition, Mr. Montague Sr didn't have the energy to go out anymore.

Saying this was just a test for Raymond.

Seeing that Raymond showed no signs of fear, he believed his words.

“In the past three years, you neglected Selena. Selena has never said anything negative about you in front of me, but she must have been deeply hurt by your actions.”

“Okay, now, with Mia’s birthday party, it’s a good opportunity to formally introduce her to others. Your wedding was rushed back then, and many people in our circle don’t know what she looks like. In the future, Selena will definitely be bullied when she goes out.”

Mr. Montague Sr. has been doing his best for Selena. A hint of annoyance crossed Raymond’s face, but he couldn’t refute the old man’s intention. Anyway, it’s just a name, and she has been using that name to her advantage in recent years.

“As long as grandfather is satisfied, the most important thing now is your health.”

“Did you go see James today?”

“I will go later.”

This time, the old man had nothing to say. Raymond’s face turned cold when he left the old house.

“John, check whether the Fair family has any major projects recently and intercept them.”

John was taken aback, The Montague family intercepting the Fair family’s business. Did the Fair family do something to provoke the president, he wondered. He had doubts in his heart but didn’t dare to ask too much.

The Fair family did have a project recently but for the Montague family, these projects were too small. They were only worth two hundred million, while the projects the Montague family handled were mostly over a billion!

However, these two hundred million projects were important to the Fair family. If someone intercepts them, the Fair family would certainly suffer massive losses.

“Alright, I’ll send someone to do it right away.”

Raymond’s face was icy and he calmly looked at the street scene outside. He didn’t like cunning women who thought they could control him just because they had influenced the old man. They were completely mistaken. For her cunning, there had to be some consequences.

“Also when you go to see James later remind him not to let his daughter do anything unnecessary.”

John nodded, indicating that he understood, only then did Raymond feel a sense of relief.

Meanwhile, Selena was blissfully still unaware of all this.

This morning, she had already sent the construction drawings to the renovation team she had previously worked with, but she had been receiving no response from them, so she decided to personally visit the company where the renovation team was located.

Twenty kilometers away from Ashbourne Manor, Selena arrived at the office building around noon. The receptionist tried to stop her as soon as she saw her.

“Hello, please show me your appointment.”

Selena had been here before. The owner of this company is Mr. Wright, and they had collaborated multiple times before, this was not her first time coming here, after all when she cooperated before she often came here to coordinate details with the team.

This time however she was stopped by someone.

“I’m looking for Mr. Wright.”

“Sorry, Mr. Wright is on a business trip today and probably won’t be back until next week.

This was clearly an excuse, the receptionist clearly knows her and deliberately stopped her.

Mr. Wright doesn’t answer the phone, and the receptionist informs her that he is on a business trip. Selena suspected that Mr. Wright is probably still in the company, but for some reason, doesn’t want to see her.

A smile appears on her face, her lips curl up. “Alright, I understand. I’ll come back later.”

The receptionist let out a sigh of relief and made an internal call after Selena left.

“Mr. Wright, the young lady has been to the company but I managed to stop her, however she said she will come back later.”

Mr. Wright nodded to himself at this information. After hanging up the phone he made a call to Mr. Rowe Price.

“Mr. Walsh, congratulations on your promotion this time, I did it as you said, and look at the contract with our company...”

Caterlington chuckled lightly, twirling the pen between his fingertips.

“Mr. Wright, rest assured, I have prepared the contract. As long as you come in person, our cooperation can be established.”

A gleam of light passes through Mr. Wright’s eyes. T. Rowe Price has been standing strong in the domestic market for many years, and more than half of the decoration teams need to source from them. If they can sign a contract with T. Rowe Price at a low price, it would indeed be a big profit for him.

“Alright, Mr. Walsh, I’ll be there in half an hour.”

Mr. Wright hung up the phone with a smile on his face, he then instructed his assistant to prepare his things. He grabbed his coat from the side before heading to the elevator.

Once he arrived downstairs he stood waiting for the assistant to bring the car around, however just as the assistant brought the car to a stop in-front of him, he heard a voice call out from behind him.

“Mr. Wright.”

Mr. Wright froze instantly and the smile on his face instantly disappears as he turned to look at Selena.

Selena still maintained her cold demeanor, giving a slight nod. “If Mr. Wright doesn’t answer the phone, I can only wait here and see if our previous contract still counts.”

Mr. Wright’s face instantly flashed full of embarrassment, he quickly reached out his hand to greet Selena. “Selena, you’re here, huh? Ah, the front desk didn’t inform me.”

Selena had already caught on to his pretense but this is just what adults do when dealing with each other, she thought.

“It’s my fault, Mr. Wright. I recently signed a new order and came rushing to find you. You also know that it’s Raymond’s order. Our cooperation can be considered mutually beneficial.”

“Selena, I have to go on a business trip for a meeting now. I really don’t have time to look at your order. How about this, let’s discuss it in detail when I come back from the business trip.”

This is an excuse she thought, Mr. Wright has probably found a new partner already, but the contract hasn't been signed yet, so he wants to keep her tied in.

A hint of coldness flashed in Selena's eyes as the corner of her mouth lightly lifted.

Chapter 100 Very Strong, Also Knows How to Resist

"Since I entered this industry, I have been working with you, Mr. Wright. I considered our relationship to be quite close. If Mr. Wright has found a better partner, it would be better to tell me directly. This way, I can make arrangements in a timely manner. After all, Mr. Montague is also urging me."

Mr. Wright was indeed envious of Raymond's project, but the truth was that even if he provided a renovation team at this moment, the ones who would benefit the most from this project were the designers.

The renovation company had almost no connection to it, at most, they would just feel like the designers were monitoring them.

Moreover, in their previous collaborations with Selena, all the bosses had mentioned that she was diligent and responsible. She personally went to the construction sites, bringing them renovation projects that were far less significant compared to the increase in fame for the designers.

But now, the collaboration with T. Rowe Price was different. They were willing to sell renovation materials to him at cost price. This would allow them to quote lower prices in the future and attract more customers. After all, there were more people in the world without money. Mr. Wright still had a smile on his face.

"Selena, I really need to go on this business trip urgently. Let's talk when I come back."

After finishing his words, Mr. Wright got into his own car.

Selena stood outside, having already expected this scene. Ever since she was not allowed to go up stairs she had guessed that Mr. Wright had probably found a partner, what she couldn't understand was why Mr. Wright would reject her just because he was working with someone else.

If they renovated Raymond's house, wouldn't the company also benefit greatly in the long run, she wondered.

What kind of benefits did this third party offer. She didn't have time to think about it at the moment and contacted several other renovation companies, but they all refused her without exception.

One of them even agreed at first, but as soon as they heard her name, they quickly refused.

Apparently someone was targeting her. Selena immediately thought of Caterlington.

Since Kross encountered problems, Caterlington had become the president of T. Rowe Price.

T. Rowe Price was the largest renovation material company in the country, otherwise Kross wouldn't have had such a close collaboration with the school.

Chapter 100 Very Strong, Also Knows How to Resist

If her hunch was right and Caterlington was behind this, then most reputable renovation teams probably wouldn't be willing to work with her. If this continued, Raymond's project would inevitably be delayed.

She rubbed her forehead with her hand and at this moment, Caterlington called.

"Selena, have you been feeling troubled recently? Do you need my help?"

Selena found it amusing, a touch of irony flashed in her eyes.

"Mr. Walsh, your timing for this call is too convenient. I can't help but suspect that all of this is just a scheme from your end.”

Caterlington smiled and his eyes were filled with confidence. “It was indeed my arrangement, but if Selena can have a meal with me, I can introduce you to a better construction team. Don’t worry, you can record the whole process, and if I offend you, you can directly call the police as you did last time.” When he mentioned calling the police, he lightly tapped his cheek with his tongue.

Selena was an interesting and strong woman who knew how to resist. With her abilities and that face, he had become somewhat interested, otherwise he wouldn’t have gone through all this trouble.
