Chapter 320: Cryonex Vs. Wei Lin (part 2)

The crystalline shards, now embedded in Cryonex's dark form, emitted a radiant brilliance. Wei Lin, seizing the opportunity, directed the array's energies to converge upon the trapped demonic commander. The harmonized forces pulsed with an intensity that threatened to engulf Cryonex in a cascade of ethereal power.

Yet, Cryonex, unknowingly smiling, summoned an unprecedented surge of icy darkness. The shadows coalesced around him, forming a protective cocoon that absorbed the incoming onslaught of harmonized energy.

As the citizens watched the celestial duel unfold, a hushed tension permeated the air. The clash between array master and demonic commander unfolded like a dance of opposing elements, each move echoing with the profound essence of their respective powers.

Wei Lin, still within the safety of the array, maintained a stoic focus. "Your Soul Strengthening Realm may grant you power, but true strength lies in the balance of elements and the unity of purpose."

Cryonex, now shrouded in the dissipating shadows, sneered with a menacing glee. "You speak of unity, yet you cannot escape the inevitable. This city will fall, and your array will crumble."

The citizens, though gripped by the uncertainty of the moment, found solace in the array master's resilience. The night sky, once a canvas of despair, now bore witness to the radiant struggle between human determination and demonic ambition.

On the demon side, the other two demons, Xal'Thar and Vexoria, observed the unfolding spectacle with keen interest. Their demonic eyes, attuned to the subtleties of power, followed each movement in the celestial clash.

Vexoria, his form exuding an aura of chaotic energy, spoke with an air of anticipation. "Look at Cryonex, he is having so much fun."

Beside him, Xal'Thar, a demonic figure adorned in shadows, nodded in agreement. "You will have your turn, remember there are still two humans who broke through the Soul Strengthening Realm."

Vexoria's eyes gleamed with excitement. "That's right. I just hope those humans won't let me down. I can't wait to test my new realm."

As the demons continued to observe, Vexoria couldn't help but express his surprise. "Though it was a surprise to see a six-star array master in this barren continent."

Xal'Thar, his gaze fixed on the ongoing clash, replied, "Humans may surprise us yet. Let's see if this array master can withstand Cryonex's might."

The clash in the celestial expanse continued, a dance between the forces of darkness and the harmonized array. The citizens below, unaware of the demons' watchful eyes, held their breaths as the fate of their city hung.

Cryonex, his demonic features twisted into a sinister grin, reveled in the ongoing confrontation. The shadows that surrounded him pulsed with an eerie energy, absorbing the luminous onslaught from the array. "Hahaha," he laughed, the sound echoing through the night. "Your efforts are futile, human."

Wei Lin, ever vigilant within the harmonized array, sensed the ebb in its energy as Cryonex deftly deflected the attacks. The crystalline shards, though radiant, now displayed subtle fissures, indicating the strain on the array.

Cryonex, with an air of bored amusement, remarked, "Human, this is getting boring. Sooner or later, your array will run out of energy. I overestimated you; after all, you are just a newly promoted six-star array master."

The citizens below, their hope kindled by the array master's earlier resilience, now faced a moment of uncertainty. The harmonized array, once a beacon of radiant defense, showed signs of weakening under Cryonex's relentless assault.

In the midst of the celestial struggle, Wei Lin sensed the drain on the array's energy. The citizens, unaware of this subtle shift, held their collective breath as the night sky witnessed the ebb and flow of power.

However, Wei Lin, far from panicking, retained a composed demeanor. He had acquired knowledge and formations from ancient texts found in the hidden caves, propelling his mastery beyond the norm. The array he wielded was not a conventional one; it bore the imprint of ancient wisdom that defied the expectations of a typical six-star array master.

Cryonex, noticing the array's diminishing vigor, couldn't hide his satisfaction. "Human, it seems your array is on its last legs. Did you think you could outlast me?" His demonic laughter echoed through the celestial expanse.

Wei Lin, maintaining his calm facade, responded, "Power is not solely determined by the realm one has attained. It is the wisdom and mastery one holds that truly define strength."

As Cryonex continued to mock, Wei Lin carefully concealed his strategy. The array, seemingly on the verge of exhaustion, harbored a secret formation—one that required no preparation. Wei Lin patiently awaited the opportune moment, knowing that Cryonex's overconfidence would be his downfall.

Cryonex, still immersed in his amusement, decided to escalate the confrontation. "Try this then. I will use 80% of my strength in this attack," he declared, a malevolent glint in his demonic eyes.

The demonic commander raised his hands, gathering an ominous blend of icy darkness and shadowy energy. The citizens below, unaware of the impending onslaught, watched with a mix of fear and anticipation.

Cryonex unleashed the attack, naming it "Frozen Eclipse." The night sky itself seemed to shudder as the potent energy surged toward the harmonized array. The Frozen Eclipse manifested as a swirling tempest of frost and shadows, its power resonating with the very essence of Cryonex's demonic might.

As the attack collided with the array, an audible crack echoed through the celestial expanse. The harmonized forces strained against the overwhelming power of the Frozen Eclipse. Cracks spiderwebbed across the once resolute defense, revealing the vulnerability beneath its radiant surface.

Wei Lin, within the array, skillfully projected an image of struggle. He feigned strain, his brows furrowed and hands trembling as if desperately holding the array together. The citizens, witnessing this apparent struggle, gasped in collective concern.

Cryonex, reveling in the perceived success of his attack, taunted Wei Lin. "Human, this is the best you can do? Your precious array is breaking before my might. Accept your defeat!"

Wei Lin, maintaining his act, responded with a semblance of desperation. "I underestimated your strength. But I won't let this city fall. I will fight until my last breath."
