

I Play Yu-Gi-Oh! Card Game

Chapter 16: Players' Arrival

"Ah!"

Yuei Vu sneezed loudly and rubbed his nose.

He has sneezed several times since he woke up this morning, and his overall condition was not very good. Yuei Vu felt that he may have caught a cold at night.

This also confirmed that even the game was a real world, and he was now a real person living in this world.

Favorability +1

Yuei Vu silently turned his gaze to Ito Chika, who quickly retracted her gaze, and silently ate the grilled salmon for breakfast with a blank expression on her face.

Although he wanted to complain about how a sneeze could raise Favorability, now he has gotten used to it.

Maybe this was the trouble of being handsome.

In life, there are times when the favorability level will be raised.

"Your cooking is getting better and better." Yuei Vu began to look for topics.

"Yeah." Chika replied casually, "Because I learned a new recipe."

Before Yuei Vu crossed over, as a gamer, he knew nothing about cooking, and Chika was responsible for solving the food problems these days.

According to what Chika said, she seemed to have been living here during the holidays, and would not move out until the school year began. But the store manager should have returned by then.

"Speaking of which, the store manager hasn't come back yet."

Yuei Vu felt a little strange. The mysterious store manager didn't appear. He has been here for more than a week and has not been seen yet.

"Oh, he said that things were done, but it was rare to go out and want to play outside for a while before coming back." After eating the salmon, Chika took the miso soup and drank it.

After a pause, she suddenly glanced at Yuei Vu one more time.

"Who are you waiting for?"

"Huh? Why do you say that?"

"Because you have been looking outside every now and then since last night," she said, "as if you were waiting for someone."

""

In fact, her observation was indeed correct. Yuei Vu was indeed waiting for something, but it was not a specific person.

Because according to his memory, the Closed Beta period of World Link Online was in these two days.

The Closed Beta test was actually very simple. It only lasted for two days. After logging in, players basically only have time to familiarize themselves with the basic operations and systems.

This was a non-deleted internal test, and the official launch of the server seemed to be just after that. If Yuei Vu remembered correctly, the game was officially launched just half a month after the end of the Closed Beta just before the opening of the Battle City Competition.

So in the past two days, he should have had the opportunity to get in touch with the players for the first time.

In order to facilitate players to search for strategies, card lists, and exchange information at the same time in the game, Link World also had an official forum login interface in the game.

In other words, players could also log in to the game forum within the game. It's just that you could only watch in the game. If you wanted to post a reply, you still had to exit the game and log in through the browser.

Thanks to this feature, Yuei Vu, as an NPC with his own game panel, could also log in to the forum to view the comments of players.

It's just that the game has not yet started the Closed Beta, and the official forum was also locked. Even if he went in, it was a lifeless gray and black, and there was nothing.

But it shouldn't be long.

The forum should also be open when the test server was launched, and it would be lively soon.

After finishing breakfast, Chika suddenly asked, "Do you have a cold?"

"A little." Yuei Vu rubbed his nose, "but it's okay, it's not serious."

Chika was thoughtful, but she didn't speak. She turned her head and went back to the kitchen.

Unexpectedly, she came out of the kitchen again after a while, holding a bowl of ginger syrup in her hand.

Yuei Vu was stunned for a moment, and he was a little moved while smiling bitterly.

I said that it's just a little cold, but she's still done that much

then he saw Chika-chan sitting down beside him, holding the bowl of ginger syrup and drinking it by herself

Yuei Vu: ""

Seemingly noticing Yuei Vu's strange gaze, she gave an "oh" and explained, "Because I was afraid of being infected, I drank some soup to prevent it.

What, do you want it too? "

"no, I don't need it anymore."

Yuei Vu definitely remembered correctly.

Just tonight, the world of Yu-Gi-Oh, to be more precise, the game world of World Link Online, ushered in a moment that may have caused the history of this entire world to deviate.

That was the arrival of duelists from another world real card players!

They brought some dueling monster cards that did not exist in this world and brought a series of concepts such as "earning cards" and "card difference" that were puzzling to local duelists.

In addition, some people brought some wonderful Decks and combos that no one had thought of before.

But more than that.

Not only do these duelists have dueling styles and tactical thinking that were completely different from the existing system, but their mind also didn't seem to be quite normal!

For example, many of them were always blabbing and saying things that no one could understand.

For example, they would walk on the street in costumes that normal people find weird even on Halloween.

For example, most of their names were either too long or too stupid, some were very unqualified and some were very unhealthy.

Another example was that they would not hesitate to pay a lot of money for some things that ordinary people didn't care about at all, and they were "helpful" to the point that they like to do white jobs for others and only receive almost negligible remuneration.

All in all, it's a bunch of weirdos who could only play cards!

When the player with the ID "Snow Wave" opened his eyes, he had already landed on an open space in the wilderness.

Snow Wave was a little stunned.

Is this already in the game? How does it feel like in reality?

He caught a glimpse of the Duel Disk that was automatically put on when the account was created in his hand, and only then did he make sure that he had indeed logged into the "World Link Online" game.

Woc, is this game too real?

This sense of manipulation of the avatar's body, touching objects, and even the touch of the breeze blowing at night.

Even the feeling could be reproduced so vividly. Snow Wave suspected that if he stayed in this game for a long time, he might not be able to distinguish the game from reality.

But the key is

Shouldn't this be a card game?

In the past, there was a lot of publicity about the game. A consortium boasted that the game has made a huge technological breakthrough and has a great sense of real experience. Most players still think it was bragging.

After all, it should be a collectible card game in essence. The elements of MMORPG were secondary, and it was expected that the game production will not be much better.

But now it seemed that the production of this card game really has some tricks in their pocket!

Snow Wave glanced at it and found that there seemed to be no other players around this was not surprising. It was said that there are only a few hundred slots for the Closed Beta, and it was normal for hundreds of players to randomly throw them in and not find each other.

However, according to the official instructions of the game, the landing location of the Closed Beta players should be the main stage of the animation near Domino City.

Judging from this, the brightly lit modern city not far from him should be Domino City.

After judging the direction, Snow Wave no longer hesitated, jumping and rolling, all the way to the direction of the city.

Chapter 17: The Fight Between Normies

Snow Wave was walking on a busy street, looking at the pedestrians passing by, colorful neon lights, and a beautiful young lady in cool clothes, he couldn't help being surprised for a while.

Wow, this detail is too realistic and in place, right? Is this really a card game?

A certain unscrupulous consortium who only thinks about selling cards all day would be willing to spend a lot of money on such a conscientious game? This looks like I'm transferred to another world!

He suddenly remembered something, and hurriedly and nervously reached out and touched below

Phew, it's okay, the tools are still there.

I just don't know what the function is, whether there are any age-restricted play items in the game or the like.

However, walking all the way from outside the city to here, he didn't seem to see any other players.

This was not surprising at all. There are only less than 1,000 people in the Closed Beta test, so throwing such a small number of people into such a big city, finding another was simply looking for a needle in a haystack.

The slots for the Closed Beta were randomly selected from players from many countries around the world. Under such a huge base, there were only less than 1,000 chosen players in total. If the pre-determined slots were excluded, the ones who are selected were the luckiest among the luckiest.

However, although the players come from all over the world, the language would not be a problem.

In fact, that problem has long been solved since the development of VR online games. Players could choose their own familiar language and interface to play the game. Everything that players come into contact with during the game would be translated into words they are familiar with, and communication and dialogue were also handled by the game's built-in translation system, so there was no obstacle.

In addition, it was quite easy for players to judge their own identities from each other. First, all players had IDs on their heads. In theory, only players could see each other's IDs.

Second, the players walked differently from normal people. As if the floor in the game was scorching hot magma, players like to jump after a few steps, and occasionally they may even roll in place.

According to legend, this inexplicable tradition was left before the popularization of VR technology. Players in those days could only rely on keyboard and mouse devices to play games. Players in those days had a special liking for the two commands "jump" and "roll".

Later, although VR technology became popular, and everyone no longer played games with keyboard and mouse, this "fine tradition" was still passed down by generations of players.

Snow Wave wandered around the city streets with a face full of ty, looking around like a countryman entering the city, as if everything he saw was .

For a moment he even forgot that he was playing a card game until he wandered aimlessly to a dueling hall in the center of the city.

Only then did Snow Wave suddenly realize wait, I seem to be here to play cards?

"The duelist over there."

Snow Wave, who had just walked in the door with a confused face, looked at the sound, and at a glance, he saw a certain square face, a passerby with a mighty physique, walking slowly towards this side.

"A new face that I haven't seen in the gym. Did you just come to this area recently?" the man asked.

Is it a plot quest?

Snow Wave was puzzled and nodded at the same time, "Yes."

"Then do you want to fight a duel?"

"OK!"

Of course, as a player, there was no reason to refuse the challenge of NPC. He speculated that this could be part of a tutorial for beginners in the game.

The two sides quickly came to the open field and stood at the designated position for each other.

"Duel!" x2

It was not until the Duel Disk unfolded and five starting cards were drawn from the deck that Snow Wave suddenly realized a shocking fact

He forgot to confirm what cards were in his initial deck.

When the account was created, the system asked him to choose the initial deck, but he glanced at it and felt that every set was similar, so he picked a set at random and started the game directly.

I forgot to check it out, but there is no problem

Now let's see what I have in my starting hand

Kattapillar, Lightning Conger, Rock Ogre Grotto #2, The Furious Sea King, Mountain Warrior

Wait, aren't these things all Normies!?

Not only all of them are Normies, but there is also no one with an attack power of more than 1,000?

Looking around, the strongest monster in his hand seemed to be the "The Furious Sea King". It was a Normal monster. The card description was "Grand King of the Seven Seas, he's able to summon massive tidal waves to drown the enemy."

Snow Wave wanted to complain at the time you? A monster with an attack power of 800, which enemy can be drowned by you?

As Grand King of the Seven Seas, you don't even have a special ability like "talk to fish", can you be more like trash?

Speaking of which, there isn't even a monster with an attack power of more than 1,000 in this broken deck

No, no, no, it may be just an accident Yes, that must be the case.

Now let the other side see the bond between the real duelist and the deck!

"My turn, draw!"

Adhering to the principle of making miracles with great strength, Snow Wave used the greatest strength in his life to draw the sixth card from the deck and then he was dumbfounded.

Psychic Kappa, attack power 400, defense power 1000. Card Description: An amphibian with a myriad of powers to shield it from enemy attacks.

Snow Wave: ""

Forget it, this duel is no hope. Anyway, the first one is just a lesson for the novice.

"I summon Psychic Kappa in defense position. I end my turn."

[Psychic Kappa, DEF 1000]

Snow Wave was too lazy to struggle. He only hoped that the NPC on the opposite side would quickly knock him down so that he could confirm what the situation of his initial deck was.

"My turn, draw!"

Looking at the cards in his hand from the other side, he actually showed a very struggling expression Snow Wave couldn't help but wonder: There is only one Normie with 1000 defense power on the field, why are you struggling?

Then he saw a card played on the opposite side: "I summon Battle Warrior in attack position!"

[Battle Warrior, ATK 700]

Then the other party gritted his teeth as if he was unwilling: "Hey, Battle Warrior's ATK is not as high as Psychic Kappa's DEF, so I end my turn."

Snow Wave: "?"

Brother, are you kidding me?

You can't solve a Normie with 1000 defense power?

"My turn," Snow Wave said, "then I summon The Furious Sea King!"

[The Furious Sea King, ATK 800]

"The Furious Sea King, attack Battle Warrior!"

The Furious Sea King roared and rushed up, without saying a word, he raised the harpoon in his hand oh no, it was the divine weapon trident. With one blow, the fighting fighters on the opponent's field were buried under the halberd.

"Ugh!" The NPC duelist raised his hand to protect his face.

Passerby NPC duelist, LP 4000 LP 3900

Snow Wave suddenly realized that maybe he could still win this duel.

Because the card on the other side Maybe even weaker than him!

After 20 rounds of (chicken) dragon and tiger fight, the battle between the two sides has officially entered the climax! The whole duel situation was extremely thrilling. The duelists on both sides traded monsters continuously, biting each other's LP tightly without letting go

In the end, Snow Wave was superior in skill and won the duel in a thrilling manner.

(Actually, he finally drew Great White with an attack power of 1600, and then the opponent couldn't get rid of it)

When the duel was over, Snow Wave wiped off his sweat and felt that this kind of duel between Normies could be fought so fiercely, as if it was the first time in his life

He then walked around the dueling hall for a short time and found that most of the duelists here were similar.

The NPCs seem to just keep slapping the Normal monsters to slash them when playing cards. There was no construction or combo at all, and even spell and trap cards don't seem to be seen much.

Those stronger ones were just duelists who had monsters with high ATK or high level. After watching the battle for a while, he couldn't help but think

As long as I have a Cyber Dragon in my hand

He soon noticed that a large group of people gathered in the battle area not far away, and the three floors inside and the outside blocked the venue.

What's going on? Is that a competition?

Snow Wave quickly approached, and casually asked a passerby in the crowd, "Well, may I ask what's going on here?"

The man also explained enthusiastically: "Tonight, someone will challenge the new Duel King of this gym! The fight has already begun!"

Duel King?

Snow Wave's eyes lit up.

Could it be the protagonist Yugi Mutou?

He didn't realize that he had automatically ignored "of this gym" part.

Snow Wave squeezed in desperately, barely seeing the duelists on both sides through the gap.

On the left field is a shirtless, dark-skinned muscular man (Snow Wave: Why do you have to undress for a card game). However, this one should be a mob who could be ignored directly.

As for the duelist standing on the right, Snow Wave's first reaction when he saw it was

Fuck, so handsome!

He could clearly see that this character's art style was different from other NPCs. At first glance, Snow Wave felt that the artist has taken care of, and there is a high probability that he is an important role in the game.

Is it an important NPC?

"Fight!" The young duelist on the right spoke up, shouting loudly, "Elemental HERO Nova Master, attack directly!"

Snow Wave almost fell on the spot due to being shocked.

Did he just say Elemental what! ?

Chapter 18: Can You Help Me Find A 'Polymerization'?

What did he just say?

Elemental HERO?

Is there any Elemental HERO in the DM era of Yu-Gi-Oh!?

Snow Wave quickly opened his eyes and watched in shock as the hero wearing red and gold armor and flying cloak released a scorching shock with his bare hands. The LP of the muscular guy on the opposite side instantly returned to zero under the heat wave.

There can be no mistake.

Even if he heard it wrong just now, Snow Wave has already recognized the domineering heroic monster on the field Elemental HERO Nova Master, who has never appeared in animation or comics. It was an original Elemental HERO of the real card game in reality.

However, now is the era of Yu-Gi-Oh! DM! Shouldn't Elemental HERO be a series card that only became popular during the GX era?

Could it be that In fact, the Elemental HERO series has actually been released at this time, but the protagonists in the animation have never met it before?

It seems that this is the only way to explain it.

Anyone who knew a little about the Yu-Gi-Oh! series should know that the most famous user of the Elemental HERO deck has been Yuki Judai, the protagonist of Yu-Gi-Oh! GX. In the minds of many players and viewers, Yuki Judai was basically the master of HERO in Yu-Gi-Oh! As long as you saw a HERO deck, you would naturally think of this character for the first time.

At this time, Snow Wave naturally reacted like this in his heart.

It was still in the early stage of DM, so naturally, Judai should not appear in the stage of the story.

Could it be that this overly handsome NPC in front of him has something to do with Jaden Yuki?

For example Is he Yuki Judai's father who never appeared in the anime?

how is this possible!

Snow Wave immediately forced himself to dismiss this unrealistic idea.

A key NPC, definitely a key NPC!

Snow Wave, based on his many years of experience in games that require superb skills, including but not limited to Zuma, Connect Animal, Tomgirls of the Mountains, etc., was instantly convinced that he had encountered a key NPC in the game!

Maybe trigger a hidden mission?

Snow Wave immediately felt excited.

According to the game's instructions, Link World will be a game with a very high degree of freedom. Quoting the director's original words: "We want players to see the game as a whole new world because even our development team can't fully control the development of the storyline. We think this will also be a big highlight of the game."

Although the saying "even the development team can't control it" was regarded by most as a deliberate exaggeration by the designer to create a gimmick, the game truly had a high degree of freedom and a large number of hidden quests.

Of course, Yuei Vu also noticed the existence of Snow Wave.

As we said before, players have IDs on their foreheads. According to the setting, NPCs could not see IDs, so this was generally the basis for players to identify each other.

However, Yuei Vu was not an ordinary NPC. With his own panel, he can also see the player ID, and could identify the player's identity from the crowd at the first sight.

Today's duel was over, and after the crowd cheered and roared, they all dispersed. Yuei Vu was thinking about how to get in touch with this player first, but he didn't expect that the other party would immediately run over with a face full of enthusiasm.

Yuei Vu thought for a while, and recalled the opening routines of online game NPCs in his mind.

"You are a new face here. Are you a duelist?" he said.

Snow Wave quickly nodded.

"Well, then can you do me a favor?"

If it's a normal conversation, asking a stranger like this for the first time would undoubtedly only get the other party's "are you crazy" eyes.

However, players were such a strange species.

Hearing this, Snow Wave's eyes lit up, and he hurriedly nodded like a chicken pecking rice: "Yes, yes! There is no problem at all."

[Whether to issue a quest to the player Snow Wave?]

It did come.

At this time, Yuei Vu deeply felt that his primary school teacher really didn't deceive him and that reading more books was indeed beneficial. Thanks to his extensive reading of books before, he has read all kinds of online s including "Traveling into the game world and becoming an NPC", and he knew all kinds of setting routines well.

Perhaps because his own panel could interact with the player's game panel, he may now be the only NPC in the entire World Link who could edit and release custom quests for the player on his own.

The specific content of the task and the task reward can be freely edited. With this task system, he can easily use the reward to instruct the player to run errands for himself.

If he was not afraid of being disliked by players, it may not be impossible to edit strange requirements such as "running in circles", "learning to bark" or even "pushing your ass" in the quest

Ahem, of course, Yuei Vu was a serious NPC, so naturally, he wouldn't issue such a boring quest.

In the quest reward section, he could usually choose rewards such as special items, EXP, or crystals for drawing card packs in the system card pool.

Of course, he could also choose to use cards directly as mission rewards.

It's just that if he chose items, crystals, or cards as rewards, it must be from Yuei Vu himself. In other words, if the crystal was given to the player as a reward, his own crystals would be reduced.

The same was true for cards. He could only use the cards he already owned as rewards for players.

Yuei Vu thought for a while and felt that the useful cards must be kept by himself. Only those cards that he couldn't use or had more than three copies in the card library were suitable to be released as rewards.

(Note: According to the rules of Yu-Gi-Oh, you can only put up to three cards in a deck of cards with the same name.)

He couldn't deduct EXP from himself, but as an NPC, there was an amount of EXP that can be released every day. Its upper limit was related to his own level and title status.

The so-called title status refers to the honor obtained in various dueling competitions. For example, Jonouchi was the runner-up of the Duelist Kingdom, and Yugi Mutou was the champion of the Duelist Kingdom and the only designated Duel King.

If he could have the unique title of Duel King like Yugi, the upper limit of EXP value that could be released every day should be very impressive.

Hmmm It's a familiar setting again.

However, this setting seemed reasonable. Otherwise, if he could give the player his EXP, his level would decrease, then Yuei Vu could repeatedly jump between level 1 and level 2, repeatedly farming the crystal reward given by leveling up

After Yuei Vu thought about it, he released the first quest he edited for players.

"I still lack a Polymerization' spell card here." He said, "Can you help me find a Polymerization'?"

Chapter 19: The 'Yu' Prefix

"Looking for a Polymerization?"

Snow Wave felt a little strange.

Shouldn't the NPCs you meet in the novice villages usually give you some very simple quests? For example, let the player go and move some bricks, bring some bread, and so on.

Snow Wave had automatically thought of the old grandfather in the blacksmith shop in Newbie Village, waving his hand and saying, "Young boy over there, I see that your bones are exquisite. Can you help me to dig some ores in the mine?". freeweb(n)ovel

However, when this NPC came up, he asked for a Polymerization It's like the old grandfather of the blacksmith said to you, "Young boy over there, I lack a good sword. Why don't you go and buy me a legendary one?"

Why do I feel that this old grandpa is a bit pitiful

No, there must be something tricky.

Snow Wave quickly activated his brain and thought about it, and suddenly felt that he had found the reason

The answer is, this is definitely not a novice NPC!

This should be a huge side quest or maybe even the main quest, a key NPC that was very important in the middle and late game!

It was conceivable that when the player's level improved and the game progressed, basic cards such as "Polymerization" should be redundant. Giving this NPC a Polymerization should be a very simple condition, and a high probability was the key to starting a series of quests!

But now the problem was coming. Although "Polymerization" was a card that could be seen everywhere He didn't have that everywhere card on his current initial deck!

Snow Wave started scratching his head in a hurry.

How can this be done?

Keep this quest for now, and then bring Polymerization back to pick it up when my level is high?

But what if this NPC is snatched away by other players at that time?

He thought it was very possible. If there was really an important plot hidden in this NPC, he would definitely be noticed soon.

Not to mention that this NPC was so handsome that just seeing him made a man doubt his life. It was only a matter of time before other players find out.

It would be a big loss for such a handsome ah, no, an important character to be taken.

Obviously, he came first.

Seeing that Snow Wave was sweating profusely there, Yuei Vu took no time to remind him in "kindness": "You are a new duelist from other places, are not familiar with the environment, and don't know how to get cards, right?"

If you want to buy a card, you can go to the "Dream Card Shop" on the side of the road two streets away. A small number of common cards can be bought directly, and most cards can be obtained randomly from card packs. "

That's right, he was advertising the store where he worked part-time.

The cards that players buy from the card shop couldn't be used by themselves but they could give these cards to Yuei Vu!

Of course, Yuei Vu wouldn't take anyone's cards for free. He would also allocate crystals, experience points, and money (although he currently didn't have any) as a reward for completing the quest.

Snow Wave's eyes lit up, as if he had suddenly found a way out. But then he thought of something, and his brows furrowed again.

Because he didn't have a single penny!

How could he buy a card pack without money?

But fortunately, he met Yuei Vu, a model NPC who was considerate, caring and patient, and continued to "guide" him: "Or if it is during special events in some stores, some customers may be randomly given some cards and coupons, and you can use the card coupons to redeem for some cards that you can't usually buy."

Snow Wave continued to frown.

Even if you say that, how could I have a card and coupon for a new account

Wait a minute, I seem to really have one?

Snow Wave's eyes lit up, and he finally realized this after Yuei Vu's repeated hints.

Each new account created by players has a card coupon presented by the system.

As mentioned earlier, the NPC account of Yuei Vu also had that gift. However, his card coupon was used to exchange for the spell card "Last Day of Witch", which was designed to kill Spellcasters. By the power of that card, not only did he get a quest reward "Dark Magician", but he also seized Pandora's deck.

The card coupons couldn't be exchanged for anything useful, and Yuei Vu's exchange was already more than worth enough.

That's right, now he's eyeing the card coupon that came with the player's initial account

Should I directly exchange my card coupon for "Polymerization"?

Snow Wave opened the list of cards that could be exchanged for, checked it back and forth several times, and began to get entangled.

Even if I keep this card coupon it doesn't seem like it can be exchanged for anything useful?

Well, why not just give it to this NPC?

But he was still hesitant because after all, it was a gift for the novice period. There was only one piece in total, and it would be completely wasteful if he didn't get any card useful from the quest

After struggling for a while, he raised his head and saw the clear and bright eyes of the NPC in front of him, and suddenly made a decision in an instant.

MMD, a real man should never hesitate!

Snow Wave loudly answered: "Yes!"

[Are you accepting the quest from Duelist Yuei Vu?

Yuei Vu?

When Snow Wave saw the name appearing in the quest pop-up window in front of him, he took a breath.

Wow, is still an NPC with the "Yu" prefix!

There were two well-known laws of Yu-Gi-Oh: One, anyone whose name had the "Yu" prefix was a monster. Two, those whose name had the "Yu" prefix and had a hairstyle that resembled a certain animal or plant are even more monsters among monsters.

For example, Yugi, Yuki, Yusei, Yuma, Yuya their hairstyles correspond to starfish, jellyfish, crab, lobster, and tomato (It seems that it's mostly seafood?)

An NPC as handsome as an illustration in a light , using the famous elemental hero and even has the "Yu" prefix! If I say this is not an important NPC, nobody will believe it.

Snow Wave immediately chose to accept the quest. Then he did not hesitate to exchange his only card coupon for a Polymerization, then handed it to Yuei Vu.

Yuei Vu took this Polymerization and nodded slightly.

Yes, yes, good children can be taught.

The coupons that come with the system's new account couldn't be exchanged for anything good, and Polymerization was already the only card that was useful to Yuei Vu.

In this way, as long as he went to con ah, no, to release a quest to the next lucky player, he would have three Polymerization cards.

He didn't give the crystal reward for the first mission (after all, he himself was in short supply right now), and of course, he didn't have any money, after all, he still hadn't received his first month's salary. Therefore, he allocated more than 300 experience points to Snow Wave from the daily quota.

Of course, it was impossible to cheat players.

Everyone in business pays attention to prestige, and the same went for being an NPC. Yuei Vu was well versed in the principles of sustainable development. If the chives were cut too hard and the reputation among players was stinky, it would be not easy to get benefits in the future.

The benefits still have to be given. Only by letting the players see that they were doing well could he keep the chives ah, no, these respectable duelists for a long time.

But he was too lazy to go back and open the card pack now, so he might as well fill up the three Polymerization cards first.

Although it was a worthless basic spell card, it was still very important to the HERO deck.

So he took out a flyer with the address of the "Dream Card Shop": "I need help with some things. At seven o'clock tomorrow morning, if you are interested, bring as many friends as you can and come here to find me."

It really was a quest series!

Snow Wave was overjoyed, and nodded again and again like a chicken pecking at rice until Yuei Vu had already left the gym and disappeared out of sight.

Chapter 20: Yuei Cannot Escape Fae

Leaving the dueling hall, Snow Wave began to search all over the city overnight to find friends who would log in and play cards together.

Because it was a quest issued by an NPC, the other party's intention was definitely not to let him grab a random passerby on the street to make up the number but to ask him to gather other players by the team function to find him together.

However, this was not easy.

As previously said, the total number of players in the Closed Beta test was only three digits. If such a small number of people were randomly thrown into Domino City, the probability of encountering another was really not high.

Snow Wave has been wandering around and hasn't encountered any other player yet.

The night was getting darker and darker, and the noisy neighborhood gradually quieted down. There were fewer and fewer pedestrians on the road, and most of the local NPCs have gone home to sleep.

So there were only a few types of people left on the streets of Domino City: drunks, gangsters, people with ulterior motives and players.

Players did not need to sleep in the game, and players who logged in for the first time, of course, had no place to rest in this world.

So in the middle of the night, players either logged out, or stayed in a dueling gym (the dueling gyms were open all night), or they could only roam the streets.

In this way, the probability of wanting to meet other players would be slightly higher.

Snow Wave wandered around for several hours, and finally found a companion who also had an ID above the head.

Snow Wave rushed up to take a look, only to see that the ID on that player's head was "Blame My Chest For Being Too Small".

Wow, she's still a girl, so lucky!

Snow Wave hurried up and excitedly ran up: "Wow, this little sister, are you a player?"

The girl turned her head, she had long hair, and big eyes, and she was very cute.

"Are you a player too?"

"Yes, yes, it took me a long time to finally meet other people, almost makes me think I'm playing a single-player game."

"Haha, yes, after all, there are few people now." The girl smiled.

"Then do we want to play together? I just received a quest"

At this moment, a rough male voice interjected: "What's the matter?"

Snow Wave followed the sound and found that a certain male player appeared from behind the corner.

The ID on this player's head was "Blame Me For Not Rubbing Too Much".

Snow Wave: ""

Damn!

It turns out that they are a couple!

The girl turned her head and explained, "Oh, that's right, this brother"

"just passing by." Snow Wave snorted and waved at them, "Ha, then you guys play slowly, I'll go first!"

After speaking, he quickly ran away without waiting for the two to reply.

Why did I get a face slap when playing a game?

Do an Incel (1) like me not deserve even to play games?

Snow Wave continued to move forward angrily.

The street lights also went out one after another, and fewer and fewer lights were on in the urban area, and the streets gradually fell into darkness.

Snow Wave couldn't help shivering. He couldn't help being surprised by the authenticity of the game again. He even restored the uncomfortable feeling of walking in the city at night. It was really realistic and incredible.

After wandering around the city for an unknown amount of time, he finally met his next companion.

This time it was a male player. The character pinched by the other party has a round face, a round head that was infinitely close to a bald head, a pair of black-framed mirrors on the bridge of the nose, and a strong physique.

Snow Wave fixedly looked at the ID on the other side's head, it seemed to say "Yuei Cannot Escape Fae"? (1)

Even the ID is spelled wrong. It's scary to be unlettered. Snow Wave thought.

But it didn't matter.

Snow Wave quickly stepped forward to greet him warmly: "Brother, are you interested in doing a quest together?"

The player turned around and said, "Ah? What quest?"

"It's given by a special NPC. Seems like a chain of quests." Snow Wave said, "He asked me to find other players to form a team and go to him together at dawn. "

"Oh? Chain quests?" Yuei Cannot Escape Fae's eyes lit up behind the lens.

The quests that the novice could receive were actually very limited. At present, the best way to level up seemed to be to play cards with people in the dueling arena. Playing a lot of cards made it easier to receive other quests when the level is slightly higher.

It's really rare to be able to hit a chain quest at this stage.

Fae couldn't escape and came up and said, "What is the reward for the quest?"

"My last quest asked me to hand him a Polymerization, which I redeemed with the coupon. The reward gave me hundreds of experience points."

Fae was stunned for a moment. Although he didn't speak, the expression on his face was clearly just that?

Exchanging the card coupon for a few hundred experience points?

Why do I feel this NPC is a pit trap

Fae coughed and patted his shoulder: "Brother, I think there may be something wrong with this NPC. You may not know much about playing games. Some game planners just like bad fun, so they will arrange some trap quests for you to complete. These quests are complicated, but the reward is useless"

"But that NPC's name is Yuei Vu." Snow Wave said, "And he uses Elemental HERO deck."

"Hey, it has nothing to do with you Wait a minute, what did you say he used!?" Fae's eyes lit up, and a tactical push-glass frame came hurriedly, his face was full of writing thirsty.

"UhElemental HERO." Snow Wave said, "I saw him summon Elemental HERO Nova Master' with my own eyes, a fusion monster that has never appeared in the animation."

"Hidden plot, definitely hidden plot!" Fae was excited, "and there is a high probability that the hidden plot is related to the plot development of GX in the later stage of the game!"

He patted Snow Wave meaningfully on the shoulder, staring at him with burning eyes behind his glasses: "This is what I owe you. We will be brothers from now on. Feel free to say anything if you need help! I will do my best to help you."

"No problem, Brother Yuei Cannot Escape Fae!"

"It's too ugly to be called like that." Fae waved his hand, "Just call me Brother Fae."

"Okay, Brother Fae!"

He seems to be a nice buddy who attaches great importance to friendship. Snow Wave thought.

The first friend he met in World Link Online was such a good friend, Snow Wave felt that his future as a duelist was brilliant.

The next morning.

Yuei Vu got up very early today, and before dawn, he came downstairs yawning.

But he didn't expect that even if he got up so early, when he got down, he could still hear Ito Chika busy preparing breakfast in the kitchen.

It seemed to be like this every day since he came to this store no matter how early he got up, Chika would always get up before him. Often he came out of the bathroom after washing, and the steaming breakfast was already on the table.

It made him wonder if Chika was actually a robot, the kind that didn't need to sleep at night.

After washing up and coming to the table, Yuei Vu immediately started to eat today's breakfast and kept looking out the window at the same time.

Although the time he set yesterday was seven o'clock in the morning and it hasn't arrived yet, it could not be ruled out that Snow Wave would actively come ahead of time.

He was curious what kind of player Snow Wave could bring.

"Waiting for someone today?" Chika quickly noticed his abnormality.

"Well, that's right." Yuei Vu nodded.

Sure enough, it was just after 6:30 when Snow Wave excitedly appeared outside the store and brought a new player as agreed.

Yuei Vu glanced at the new player through the window and felt that the other player pinched this round face, this round hairstyle, these black-rimmed glasses, and even that vivid and wretched expression

Then he noticed the ID on the other side's head

Yuei Cannot Escape Fae? ? ? (2)

TL's Note:

1. Incel: An abbreviation of "involuntary celibate", means a member of an online subculture of people who define themselves as unable to get a romantic or sexual partner despite desiring one.

2. I'm not sure about this ID's meaning. I think it's a misspelling of an idiom: "You cannot escape from fate." Moreover, the main character feels this ID is disgusting, so I decided to translate it like this.