Chapter 511 He Is Tone Deaf

Chapter 511

Isabella realized that she must have been experiencing a string of bad luck lately as she found herself encountering numerous unfortunate events.

In the middle of the night, Bloom Flowers fell headfirst and directly hit her head, needing three stitches on her forehead.

Despite not seeking medical attention at a hospital, the incident left her unable to sleep.

Without a word, Seth unexpectedly appeared at Courtney's residence, and Isabella had a hunch that his presence was intended for her, with the cake being a gift for her.

With a lot weighing on her mind, she decided to skip work the following morning.

It wasn't until the afternoon that Natasha personally came to pick her up, mentioning the upcoming cruise.

“We’re boarding tonight?” Isabella was taken aback by the swift pace of events.

Natasha drove with a cheerful smile, saying, “With all the facilities set up, wouldn’t it be a waste if we didn’t use them?”

Isabella refrained from inquiring about the significance of the cruise.

No one would spend such a sum for a lover, especially since Seth had never splurged on her before.

Dariel seemed a bit off with Natasha.

“Make a call, have everyone from your office join us. It’s Saturday tomorrow, so everyone should be on board.” Natasha casually gestured, displaying great generosity.

Isabella pondered the idea and realized it was a perfect occasion for a celebration, considering they hadn’t had a party yet, making a cruise an ideal choice:

After spending the afternoon engaged in various activities, they arrived at the port at six o'clock in the evening.

Dariel and his group were already on board, although Isabella failed to spot them.

Cruise ships and yachts are distinct entities, resembling a five-star hotel floating on the sea.

Upon meeting Phoebe on board, the girls erupted in cheers.

Expenses were abundant on the ship, escalating as you ascended.

Isabella opted for the standard area, leading her office colleagues to a private room for singing and dining.

“The promotional video was a huge success. Let’s raise a toast to Miss Symons!”

The room resonated with cheers and clinking glasses.

After a few drinks, everyone relaxed, engaging in singing and games.

Isabella found herself at the center, continuously being toasted.

Suddenly, a knock at the door interrupted the revelry.

Amidst the loud atmosphere, only Phoebe went to answer the door.

As Isabella sipped a glass of wine handed to her by a male colleague, the room fell

Leonard took the lead, followed by Seth and Courtney. Bloom Flowers still had gauze

The presence of these elite Imperia individuals downstairs rather than enjoying themselves upstairs left everyone in shock.

“A celebration feast. How could we forget to invite the male lead?”

Mandy emerged from the crowd, looking delighted as she winked at Isabella.

Isabella remained speechless.

“Come on, make some space for everyone.”

The locals were reserved while Leonard and his group effortlessly mingled, breaking the ice swiftly.

Feeling a bit tipsy from the drinks, Isabella was approached by Seth, whose subtle gentlemanly fragrance overpowered the room’s cheap perfume.

What a peculiar fellow, not content to enjoy life upstairs, insisting on descending to

The music resumed in the private room, with everyone singing along.

At one point, someone requested Ariana to sing.

Isabella raised her hand and remarked, “He can’t carry a tune.”

Only Isabella sighed in front of the jukebox.

“Any song by Annette will suffice.” Ariana had materialized behind her at some point.

Isabella was momentarily taken aback. “A German song?”

“Yes, Seth can handle it.”

Isabella nodded and selected the song on the device.

Ariana was correct; Seth could indeed sing, and his pitch was surprisingly accurate.

“These two make a perfect pair,” a young girl whispered in Isabella’s ear.

Isabella remained silent and naturally did not finish listening to the song. She quietly playable.

Since there was no audience, it didn’t matter if she played poorly.

She only knew how to play “Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star” and played it sporadically.

Isabella turned her head and felt him resting his forehead on her shoulder.

Their bodies were pressed closely and it looked particularly intimate.

Isabella immediately stepped back. “Don’t try anything. I’m a friend of Natasha.”

The men chuckled at her statement.

“It doesn’t matter who you are.”

What?

Isabella’s eyes flickered, unsure of who these people were.

They weren’t afraid of Natasha and not even afraid of Seth.

If they were hired thugs, she wouldn’t just be locked up.

And the leader seemed genuinely concerned about her safety.

Before she could think more, the woman brought in by the men had already entered with a set of clothes.

The lock on the cage was opened...

At 10 a.m., Seth emerged from the billiard room and was handed an invitation to the top-floor casino.

The casino was outsourced and had little connection to Dariel.

The ship was now out at sea, and the casino games were shady, so he decided not to partake.

“What’s going on? Who’s challenging you?” Dariel inquired.

Seth hadn’t paid much attention initially, but he casually opened the invitation after hearing about the challenge.

Isabella is on the top floor.

“D*mn it!” Dariel couldn’t help but curse upon reading the contents.

Seth threw the invitation aside and immediately called Isabella.

Unsurprisingly, the call did not go through.

“She’s probably already in their clutches,” Dariel remarked.

Seth’s face darkened, and he was about to instruct Jordan to bring people up.

“Wait.” Dariel grabbed his hand and said, “You go upstairs first and ensure Isabella’s safety. Dealing with this group of scoundrels is straightforward. Isabella might be in danger if she’s with them.”

As soon as he finished speaking, Seth changed direction and went straight to the top floor.

The top floor was the most extravagant place on the cruise ship, with the casino stakes

Daniel didn't manage it himself, so he outsourced it to others. He didn't expect them to

As the elevator opened, everything was golden.

The Shaffer Family had reserved half of the venue, and the atmosphere instantly became tense.

The venue was entirely open-air, surrounded by glass.

The attendees were predominantly from affluent backgrounds.

Steven was seated at the largest table.

"Mr. Shaffer, did your wife run away with someone?" No one dared to laugh, but the excitement in their eyes couldn't be hidden.

Seth sat down with a cold expression. "Start the game."

"Why the rush?" Steven chuckled and signaled for the bell.

The casino's manager came over, a man in his forties or fifties, who couldn't stop smiling when he saw Seth and Steven.

“Gentlemen, this round has a special surprise courtesy of our casino.”

The people around stood up to watch.

Seth pursed his lips in silence.

The people around were all skilled gamblers. Even if they couldn't see her eyes, they knew she was a beauty.

The red skirt was alluring, and the high-altitude surprise made people excited.

"Are you satisfied, gentlemen?" The manager observed their expressions and called the Seth placed his hand on the gambling table and suddenly raised his hand.

Jordan understood and immediately directed people to enter.

A collective sigh arose from the crowd as they were barred from witnessing the unfolding scene.

The manager was also a little disappointed and ordered the game outside to be broadcast live.

Before he could finish speaking, Seth's gaze swept across the room.

"Take off what's on her face," Seth said coldly

Seth raised the stakes high, making the manager almost kneel to him. The higher his Indeed, he had chosen the right person.

“Get her out here,” he ordered.

Isabella’s face was covered with an electronic black ribbon that could be remotely unfastened.

Suddenly, the button came undone, and an intense light shone down.

She closed her eyes and took a moment to adjust.

Looking down, she saw the gambling table below.

Unluckily, she never expected to be deceived while watching a magic trick.

She couldn’t gauge the power of this casino or whether Seth could take her away.

her to breathe, and she was sweaty.

She glanced down and saw Seth and Steven each holding a card.

“Are you ready to reveal your cards?”

“It’s no fun with just one card.” Steven put down his card and said, “I raise.”

The atmosphere became tense and serious.

“Gentlemen, are you ready to reveal your cards?”

Three cards were already on the table. It was time to reveal.

On the other hand, Steven kept looking up, clicking his tongue several times. “Such a

Isabella heard him speak and cursed him in her heart but couldn’t help feeling fearful.

She was worried that Seth would lose, and she didn’t want to go with Steven.

The casino was so audacious that it might have been involved in organized crime. She wasn’t sure about the extent of the Shaffer Family’s influence on the surface, and she didn’t know if Seth could handle it.

Her mind was in a mess, and although she was covered in sweat, her hands and feet were cold.

“Reveal.” Sethr’s voice rang out.

There was another wave of excitement outside. Sixty million bets were rare, although Steven didn't raise the bet anymore and just agreed to open the cards.

Neither of the two men moved, leaving it all to the dealer.

Steven's first card was an eight, a good start.

But on Seth's side, his card was an Ace.

In blackjack, the Ace represented eleven.

The card was too big. It was easy to go over twenty-one with the next card.

Isabella felt a sinking feeling in her heart as Seth held three cards in his hand, and the two subsequent cards couldn't average more than five. Otherwise...
