Chapter 16

Chapter 16

Susan took a deep breath and then turned around.

Behind her, Yana was holding Timothy's hand and looking at her in surprise.

Timothy clenched his hands slightly before quickly loosening them.

Beside them were several girls, whom Susan recognized as Yana's close friends whom she often hung out with. "What a coincidence," Susan said lightly.

A sweet smile appeared on Yana's face. "Susan, we are going to get engaged. And I suggested buying some ordinary jewelry, but Timothy insisted on getting me the best. I couldn't persuade him, so I had to come to the auction to take a look."

Susan was silent for a moment and said in a soft voice, "Are you getting engaged? Congratulations to you."

"Thank you, Susan. Yana's smile grew sweeter. "Timothy and I will definitely be very happy together. And you must also have a good time with your husband, Susan."

Susan nodded casually, offering her response. Yana looked around and suddenly said, "Susan, where is Ben? Why isn't he here with you?" Susan's lips moved, as she was unsure of how to answer.

One of Yana's friends chimed in with a smile, "Yana, don't ask such questions. Ben is not the type to accompany his wife to buy jewelry, you know."

"Yeah, not everyone is as gentle and considerate as Mr. Leen."

"Speaking of luck, Yana, you're the lucky one."

Yana's friends were all flattering her.

A trace of triumph flashed across Yana's eyes.

But Yana said, "Don't say that. Ben is actually very good; he might just be busy with work."

“Mr. Leen is busy too, but he still made it here, didn’t he? That’s the difference between caring and not caring.” “That’s right.”

Those girls kept talking.

Susan lowered her gaze and said lightly, “I have something else to attend to. Excuse me.”

Since Yana was there, Susan didn’t want to stay in this auction anymore.

“Susan, are you leaving now? The auction hasn’t even started yet, Yana said as if she was caring about Susan. “Vana, you don’t understand. Even though the auction hasn’t started, this is precisely the time to leave,” said one of the girls. “Exactly. If the auction starts and Mrs. Landor can’t afford to buy any jewelry, it’ll be quite embarrassing.”

“I doubt Ben will give her money to buy jewelry anyway.”

“That’s why having a rich husband isn’t enough; it depends on whether he is willing to spend money on you.” The group of friends chatted cheerfully, and Yana was delighted to hear their comments.

When they were done talking, Yana feigned concern and said, “Please, everyone, let’s not say such things. My sister is Mrs. Landor; how could she be short of money? Susan, please stay and at least buy some jewelry.”

Susan had originally intended to leave, but Yana persisted.

So she paused and looked at Yana with a faint smile. “Are you sure you want me to stay?”

“Of course, I hope you can stay,” Yana said, pushing Timothy gently. “Timothy, you want that too, right?” Timothy uttered a word after a short silence, his voice cold. “Yes.”

At that moment, a dark thought stirred in his heart.

Hadn’t Susan chosen to marry Ben Landor for the sake of the Landor family’s power and influence? He wanted her to realize that her choice was wrong.

wrong.

He was willing to give everything to Yana, while Ben couldn't give anything to her.

That was the difference.

Susan's gaze also turned cold, and she said calmly, "Okay. Then I'll stay."

She found a seat at random, and Yana hurriedly pulled Timothy to follow. Yana's group of girlfriends surrounded them.

The auction started soon.

This auction deserved its reputation.

Every piece of jewelry here was a unique masterpiece. Susan had initially wondered if the 200- thousand—dollar entry fee was too expensive, but she soon realized that nothing here sold for less than 200 thousand dollars.

Although the jewelry was exquisite, One couldn't buy everything. Yana was determined to buy the best, so she refrained from bidding on the first few items.

It wasn't until a delicate crown appeared on the auction block that Yana's eyes lit up. The crown was silver-white, adorned with a hundred exquisite pearls that glistened under the lights.

Yana couldn't help but imagine how gorgeous she would look wearing this crown at her engagement party, outshining everyone else.

Timothy noticed Yana's interest and instantly raised the bid from 200 thousand to one million when the auctioneer announced the starting price.

The crowd looked at him in surprise. Yana straightened her back, her smile radiating satisfaction. She loved the feeling of being envied by everyone.

"This crown is not only of considerable value, but it was worn by the first queen of Riowert on her wedding day, making its historical significance quite high. The auctioneer was still trying his best. to promote it.

With the added historical factor, the value of the crown further increased, prompting immediate bidding from the attendees. Timothy confidently joined the bidding and continued until it reached 2.6 million.

The highest bid came from Timothy.

"Yana, I can't wait to see you wearing this crown."

"Yeah, it will look absolutely stunning."

The ladies already began to flatter Yana.

The smile on Yana's face became even brighter.

"2.6 million dollars. Do we have any higher bids? This kind of jewelry is not only beautiful but also worth collecting. The auctioneer enticed.

"Three million dollars." A cool, clear voice suddenly rang out, raising the price by 400 thousand!

After reaching this point, the bidding had already slowed down significantly from what would be considered a reasonable price for the item.

The sudden increase of 400 thousand surprised the crowd.

And it seemed to come from Susan's side.

The bidder was exactly Susan.

Yana's smile faltered, and she asked, "Susan, why did you raise the price?" "Oh, it's nothing." Susan said casually. "I just think this crown looks quite nice."

"Do... Do you have money?" Yana couldn't help but ask. "Don't worry, I'm Mrs. Landor, and I do have some money," Susan replied calmly.

The words "the Landor family" and "Ben" were sensitive topics, and more eyes turned towards them.

Everyone realized that this woman was none other than Ben's wife, the subject of rumors and speculation. Some had even placed bets on how long she could endure living with the cruel Ben.

Seeing the attention, Yana grew even more pleased and continued loudly,

Yana's words made the auctioneer hesitate.

He was now unsure about selling the crown to Susan.

Susan bit her lip and gave Yana a piercing look.

But Yana didn't hesitate and exchanged a defiant glance with her.

"What I want can only belong to me. Susan, you are too naive to compete with me," Yana thought. Just then, a cold, indifferent voice spoke up. "Interesting."

Susan turned to look back and was stunned.

It was Ben! Why was he here?

Ben, with an expressionless face, descended the steps step by step.

His appearance was so horrible that people instinctively avoided his gaze. Ben walked up to Susan.

And he looked at Yana, saying, "Why should my wife have to listen to your nonsense over a mere couple of million for a trinket?"

Chapter 17

Chapter 17

"A mere couple of million and a trinket..." Everyone fell silent after hearing Ben's words.

Yana felt overwhelmed by Ben's imposing presence.

She couldn't understand why Ben had suddenly appeared and was speaking up for Susan.

Could it be that Susan had truly tamed this tyrant? That couldn't be possible!

Yana's thoughts were in disarray.

Timothy pulled her behind him and looked directly at Ben. "Yana means no harm; she's just concerned about Susan."

"You're on a first-name basis with my wife now?" Ben sneered. "And you call this 'no harm'? Then what would you call 'harmful, Timothy? If you find such a woman appealing, maybe you should get your eyes checked!"

"Timothy..." Yana started to cry, aggrieved.

Timothy hugged Yana pitifully and then turned to Ben, saying, "Mr. Landor, as a grown man, is it really appropriate for you to intimidate a defenseless woman like this?"

Ben couldn't help but laugh at what he found amusing. "When all of you were ganging up on my wife, did you find it inappropriate then, huh?"

Timothy frowned and looked at Susan. "Susan, Ben doesn't know, but you know exactly that Yana has always been thoughtless in her words."

Thoughtless?

Susan looked at Timothy calmly, as if she was staring at a complete stranger.

Her expression made Timothy's heart skip a beat.

Ignoring Timothy, Susan took Ben's hand and looked at him with rare tenderness. "Thank you." What was there to thank for?

Ben felt a bit awkward and intentionally lowered his tone “Well | just don’t want to see you embarrassing me in public. “Alright, | won’t from now on,” Susan replied, smiling at him.

Ben was at a loss for words.

Chapter 17

He knew she would just laugh it off.

Ben became more and more uncomfortable.

“| don’t like it here. Let’s go,” Susan then said.

Ben glanced at Yana, who seemed downcast, and raised an eyebrow. “We don’t often come to events. like this. Why rush to leave? Besides, you need a few pieces of jewelry.”

Ben calmly pulled Susan back to her seat. Yang was so ashamed after being scolded by Ben, but she was also a little reluctant to leave directly.

In the past two months, this was the only upscale jewelry auction they had attended. If she left now, she might have to settle for some ordinary jewelry.

No, she couldn't accept that!

With determination, Yana gritted her teeth and returned to her original seat.

She could let Susan have the crown; there were better treasures to be found later, anyway!

The crown was respectfully handed to Susan by the auction staff.

Yana glanced at it, her heart aching, but she had to pretend that she didn’t care at all.

Perhaps because of Ben’s presence, the pace of the auction seemed to inexplicably quicken.

After several pieces of jewelry were sold, Yana spotted a necklace she liked.

She was about to ask Timothy to bid on it.

“Two million dollars,” Ben said indifferently.

“Okay, the necklace will be delivered to you immediately, Mr. Landor,” the auctioneer declared without waiting for other bids. Timothy's expression darkened. “Wait a moment. Others haven't had a chance to bid yet!”

However, the auction staff simply ignored him, and the necklace was respectfully handed to Ben. Ben cast a casual glance at Timothy, not uttering a word, but it felt as though he had said everything. Timothy instantly became furious.

He had grown accustomed to receiving praise as a business prodigy, but today, reality had humbled him.

The subsequent jewelry items, especially the valuable ones, were all effortlessly claimed by Ben. Whenever he made a bid, no one dared to compete with him, and the auction staff eagerly brought the items to him. Since Ben's offers were fair, the auction house didn't feel any loss.

In fact, they saw it as an opportunity to establish a connection with the Landor family and considered it a great profit. The auction ended in a weird atmosphere.

It wasn't until Ben and Susan left that the atmosphere gradually livened up.

“Wow, who would have thought Ben would show up at an event like this?”

“I just did the math; he practically bought out the entire auction. He spent a total of 26 million!” “That's some serious splurging.

“Didn't they say Ben was ruthless and pushed his ex-wife into the sea?”

“Rumors are just rumors. Despite his rough exterior, he seems quite nice to Susan.”

"He sure knows how to spend money. | wish | had married him!"

"Even with all that money, | don't know if | could handle that intimidating face..."

"Yeah, you've got a point..."

Although Ben still had a blemished reputation due to his facial injury, public perception of him had subtly shifted. Yana listened, and it drove her almost crazy.

No matter what the rumors said about Ben, he was indeed showering Susan with extravagant gifts. Could it be that Susan would one day completely fall in love with Ben?

Timothy's heart trembled slightly.

Timothy, do you think Susan is intentionally targeting me?" Yana continued to cry.

Timothy, almost reflexively, said, "Susan is not that kind of person. It's all because of Ben."

Yana's gaze shifted briefly, but she quickly softened her tone. "Yeah, | think so too."

But she slowly clenched her hands after saying that.

"Susan! You're nothing more than my blood bank. Why do you get to enjoy Ben's favor, and why does Timothy still have you on his mind?"

Outside the auction house, Susan looked up at Ben and smiled with pursed lips. "What's wrong?" Ben raised his eyebrows.

Susan kept smiling. "I thought you weren't going to talk to me anymore.

Susan sensed Ben's resistance to her in the morning.

Ben felt even more uneasy, but his face was still cold. "Don't misunderstand. It was that driver who called Grandpa and said you were being bullied. Grandpa called me and asked me to come over! That's why | was forced to put aside my work and come here."

While speaking. Ben became resentful about Susan being such a coward in front of others. "What's with you? You're Mrs. Landor. How could you let that kind of person bully you?"

Wrong

"The driver?" Susan was stunned for a moment.

The driver who popped out from nowhere smiled awkwardly, "Mrs. Landor, Mr. Landor asked me to follow you all the way, but | didn't want to disturb you, so | secretly followed behind to protect you."

"If this kind of thing happens again in the future, don't call me. Just tell the people in the auction house and throw the troublemaker out, understand?" Ben glanced at the driver.

"Got it," the driver responded immediately.

"People of the Landor family are not cowards like you." Ben glanced at him in disgust. "How could Grandpa assign you such a task..."

As Ben was teaching the driver a lesson, he saw that Susan was still laughing.

Ben was speechless. "What are you laughing at?"

Susan's eyes curved as she laughed. She took Ben's hand and said seriously, "Ben, thank you." Her eyes were bright and looked even prettier than the moon at night.

Ben winced indifferently. "There's no need to say thank you. If people know that you, Mrs. Landor, can't even afford a few pieces of jewelry, they must think I am very stingy! So, I'm here for my reputation, not for you. Next time, if you are still so incompetent, I will never help you again."

"Okay, I understand." Susan nodded, with a smile on her face. "But I just want to thank you." Ben had no idea what to say.

He felt like he was cold enough! How could Susan still smile so happily?

"Okay, if there's nothing else, I'll go first." Ben decided that leaving was the best option. "This woman doesn't seem to have a normal brain. If I stay with her any longer, maybe I'm going crazy, too," he thought. "Wait a minute. Susan grabbed his coat.

She didn't use much force, but Ben subconsciously stopped.

Ben was speechless again.

He raised his eyebrows and said, "Give me your phone."

Susan handed over her phone immediately.

Ben quickly typed his number into her phone and saved it.

Just call this number if you need help in the future.” Then Ben added, “Of course, you'd better not call me because I'm busy.” “Well, don't worry. I'm not one to frequently encounter difficulties.” Susan put her phone aside carefully.

Ben frowned.

Since his face was so scary, he believed no woman would fall in love with him.

But he vaguely felt that Susan kind of liked him.

He wouldn't allow that to happen.

He was destined to spend his whole life punishing himself, so he decided to distance himself from Susan because he didn't want to drag another person down.

He knew Susan should fall in love with a normal man.

Ben said in a plain tone, with his eyes darkened. “Susan, there is something | must tell you. | will never truly be with anyone in my life. You are my wife, and | will give you everything | have except for my love.”

When he let his ex—wife leave before, Ben felt relieved rather than sad.

But now, Ben somehow felt a little uncomfortable when he said that he would let Susan go if she asked him.

He suppressed the feeling and looked at Susan indifferently.

Even if Susan liked him before, she should give up after she knew how cold and heartless he was to his ex-wife. But what he saw now... was actually Susan's bright eyes.

You really are a good person." Susan's eyes were shining brightly.

Ben was shocked.

Ben was a little stupefied. What Susan said seemed to be quite reasonable. "Am I really a good person?" he wondered.

Expectations faded. You don't have to do this. I won't ask for anything that doesn't belong to me. Ben looked at Susan and a voice sounded in his mind. "Oh my god. This woman must be crazily in love with me!"

"This woman is really stubborn. If I really ignore her, will she cry all day long? That's not what I want." At the thought of this, Ben had a headache.

"I have something to deal with! See you!" Not knowing how to face Susan's bright eyes, Ben ran away as quickly as possible after saying goodbye.

Watching his back, Susan chuckled softly. The so-called tyrant was gentler than she had thought. Susan was in a good mood when she came home with so many jewels.

Despite receiving a call from Ben shortly after arriving home, informing her that he wouldn't be returning tonight, Susan didn't feel sad but wanted to laugh.

She thought that Ben was deliberately distancing himself from her. But this time Ben seemed to be quite stubborn. He didn't go home for the following week.

Before Charlie wanted to call Ben and force him to go home, Susan received a phone call.

Chapter 19

Chapter 19

It was a call from Jane.

In a gentle voice, she asked Susan to go home, saying that her family missed her. Susan was touched.

Since she could remember, Jane had never talked to her so gently.

"Does this mean that Mom actually loves me? Are they actually worried about me after I married into the Landor family?" With this thought in mind, Susan felt moved, so she agreed to go home for dinner.

She was only going to have a simple meal with her family.

However, when Charlie heard that Susan was going back to the Miller residence, he said, "This is Susan's first time returning to the Miller residence after the wedding! We must attach great importance to it!"

He turned around and ordered the servant, saying, "There is a pair of nice bracelets among those jewels that Susan auctioned. Go get them! Also, fetch the sapphire necklace from my collection. And..."

Charlie kept giving instructions, and Susan got dumbfounded by that.

She said hurriedly, "Grandpa, it's going to be a simple meal. There's no need for all this trouble."

"No. You're a member of the Landor family now, and I can't let people look down on you," Charlie said firmly. Helpless, Susan could only let the servants dress her up in luxurious attire.

"These are gifts for your family. I'll have a servant accompany you later to help carry them," Charlie said, pointing to a pile of gifts in the living room.

Penelope was shocked. “Dad, are you going to let her bring home so many presents?”

“You know nothing.” Charlie didn’t even look at Penelope, and he continued, “And the car is also very important.” “Grandpa, there are so many cars in the garage. Any one is okay,” Susan said.

“No! That won't do!” Charlie firmly denied it. “Just wait. I will let you return home with grace. tonight.”

Seeing how spirited Charlie was, Susan thought for a while and didn’t refuse. She just smiled and responded, “Then I'll follow your arrangements, Grandpa.”

Soon, it was time for dinner. Charlie asked Susan to wait at the door in advance, saying that the driver would come to pick her up soon.

Susan then obediently waited at the door. Before long, a silver—gray SSC Tuatara stopped at the door.

Susan was a little shocked. She had seen a lot of luxury cars, and she knew the price of an SSC Tuatara car was at least ten million dollars. The one parked at the door was even a limited edition, worth even more.

“Isn't that a little over the top?” she thought.

When Susan was still lost in thought, the car window was rolled down, and she saw Ben look at her impatiently. “Go get in the car. “Ben?” Susan was surprised...

“Don't misunderstand... Ben said.

Susan stopped him, “Yes, I know. It was Grandpa who forced you to go with me.” Ben didn’t say anything. Although it was true, why did he feel something wrong? Smiling, Susan got into the passenger seat and turned to him, saying, “Thank you.” “Why do you say ‘thank you all the time?’” Ben couldn’t help but say.

“I can't help it. You're just too kind,” Susan said.

Ben wanted to tell her not to praise him again.

But after thinking for a while, he decided to remain silent.

Seeing Susan coming back to the Miller residence together with Ben, the Miller family was obviously confused and did not know what to do.

Carl was the first to act. He greeted Ben warmly. “Mr. Landor, I didn’t expect that you’d come too. Susan, why didn’t you tell me in advance that Mr. Landor would come with you?!”

Susan was just about to speak when Ben said in a cold tone, “We are married. Is it strange that we come together?” “No, absolutely not,” Carl hurriedly replied. “Dinner is ready. Susan, please invite Mr. Landor to join 1. us. Susan pulled Ben’s hand gently. Ben showed her great respect and took a seat with her. Except for the Miller family. Timothy was also present.

Originally, Carl was going to talk to Susan about something during dinner, but since Ben was also here, his plan had to be canceled.

Therefore, he didn’t say anything else, only asking Susan and Ben to taste different dishes. Jane also kept serving food for Susan, acting like a loving mother.

Looking at her parents’ loving faces, Susan felt a little warm inside.

“Although they love Yana more, I’m not completely ignored, right?” Susan thought.

After dinner, Carl took Ben and Timothy to his study.

Therefore, only the ladies were left in the living room.

“Susan, you must be feeling very pleased today,” Yana said sarcastically.

“I’ll take that as your envy of me,” Susan replied nonchalantly.

“I envy you? You...” Yana wanted to retort, but Jane pulled her hand and then said softly, “Susan, your sister is young. Sometimes she speaks without thinking. Don’t take it personally.”

It was rare for Jane to say such things. Susan felt warm and shid, “Mon, it’s okay.”

“I know you are a good girl,” Jane said with a smile. “After all, you and Yana are sisters. A little conflict shouldn’t turn you into enemies, right?”

Susan also showed kindness and said, "Yana is always my sister."

"I'm glad you think so." A somewhat embarrassed look appeared on Jane's face: "Now, Yana's in a bit of trouble. Can you help her?"

"What is it?" Susan asked, a bit surprised.

She looked down and spoke slowly. “Since it was an auction, it means anyone could buy the jewelry. How can you say | was competing with you?”

“Susan, what do you mean? You're refusing to return the jewelry to me?” Yana's voice became sharp.

As Jane put down the cup in her hand, her expression became stern. “Susan, you are now a member of the glorious Landor family, so you look down on your own family, right? Ben is a moody man. Do you think he'll always be as good to you as he is now? Giving the jewelry to Yana just means taking the Landor family's money to our family. If our family gets rich, we can provide more support for you. Besides these pieces of jewelry, you should try to get more of their money to us in the future. This will ensure that even if Ben grows tired of you, you'll have a backup plan. Don't you think so? Mom is thinking about what's best for you.”

Susan wanted to laugh, but she couldn't.

She simply said in a calm tone, “Since you know Ben is moody, did it ever occur to you that he might get angry and take it out on me if | did as you suggested?”

Based on her understanding of Ben, Susan actually knew that he was not that kind of person, but she said that on purpose.

“It doesn't matter if he gets angry as long as he doesn't take back what he gave you. Susan, money is always the only thing that matters.” Jane tried to persuade her.

Susan really burst into laughter now.

They claimed to be doing it for her own good, but did they really consider her at all?

Susan stood up calmly, and the joy she had when she arrived here was gone, replaced by deep sorrow.

“Sorry, I can’t help you. I’m going home with Ben.” As Susan was speaking, she was about to go upstairs to find Ben. She found that she would rather stay at the Landor residence than here!

Seeing Susan going up the stairs, Yana got anxious. She followed quickly and reached out to grab Susan, saying, “Susan, stop. I’m telling you. You must give the jewelry to me...”

Yana did it on purpose.

“Mom, it hurts so bad.” Yana burst into tears.

This time Yana was cruel to herself and let herself fall badly. There was blood slowly flowing out from her forehead now. Jane panicked. “Yana! You’re bleeding!”

Bleeding might be a small matter for most people, but it was a matter of life and death for Yana.

Once she started bleeding, it was difficult to stop, and she would have to go to the hospital. Most of the time she had to receive a blood transfusion.

Bleeding? Yana wasn’t worried at all. This was exactly what she wanted. She had bled before. Every time, nothing happened to her.

Yana quickly exclaimed in tears, “Susan, I know you don’t like me, but you know what disease I have. Yet you pushed me down the stairs. You were trying to kill me!”

“Susan, how could you do this to your sister? What did Yana do to deserve that?” Jane snapped. “What's going on? What are you arguing about?” Carl heard the noise and came out of the study. $

“Dad, Timothy. Yana cried even louder, “Please ask Susan for me, what did | do to deserve such a treatment.”

Noticing the blood on Yana’s forehead, Timothy panicked, rushed over, and picked her up. “Timothy, | bled so much. Am | going to die?” Yana sobbed.

“She needs a blood transfusion right away.” Carl glanced at Susan and said firmly, “Go to the hospital and transfuse your blood to your sister.”

“Yes, it was you who pushed your sister down. You're responsible,” Jane said.

Everyone gathered around Yana, while Susan was feeling helpless, like a small boat struggling against the waves in the sea. 2/4

Susan said slowly, “I didn’t, push her.”

“Look at Yana! You said you didn’t push her. Then did she fall on purpose?” Jane was angry, Susan looked calm and said, “You wouldn't believe me if | say she fell on purpose, would you?”

“Susan, | can forgive you for pushing me, but please give me a blood transfusion, or | will die, Yana begged Susan in a low voice. However, a light of slyness flashed through her eyes.

It hadn’t been a month since the last time Susan had a blood draw. She had two blood draws last month and lost 1200cc of blood. Such a short amount of time wasn’t enough for her to recover.

If Susan were to give Yana another blood transfusion today, there was a high possibility that it would harm Susan’s health.

“Susan, as twin sisters, why am | so sick while you are so healthy? This is not fair! This time, not only will | take the jewelry from you, but I'll also make you experience what it feels like to have a weak body,” Yana plotted in her mind.

“| remember you said that you had already found another person with a blood type compatible with hers,” Susan looked at Carl and said.

Carl frowned and said, "Yes, we found one, but that person only promised to give Yana regular blood transfusions. It's not time yet! Susan, why are you bringing this up now? Don't you want to give your sister a blood transfusion?"

"You promised me that I've paid back what I owed to Yana." Susan's voice turned cold.

Fearing that Susan would bring up the truth about the marriage, Yana hurriedly pleaded, "Susan, please don't pursue the matter of you pushing me, but are you going to watch me die?" The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

While speaking, Yana curled up in the embrace of Ben and said pitifully, "Timothy, I'm afraid. I don't want to die."

Timothy handed Yana over to Carl and Jane. Then, he sat at Susan and said to Susan, "Give Yana a blood transfusion." The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

Susan felt like laughing. "What if I refuse?"

"Then don't blame me for taking you to the hospital by force," Timothy said coldly. Susan stubbornly stood still, not moving.

Timothy walked towards her step by step.

Staring at this man, Susan felt desperate.

Chapter 20

This was the man she had loved for ten years. How ridiculous! Timothy walked up to Susan.

He was silent for a while and then reached out to grab Susan's arm. Just then, a tall figure suddenly stood between them.

With a hint of sarcasm in his scary face, Ben sneered, "What? Didn't they all think I should? I want my wife to give Yana a blood transfusion? Does Yana even deserve that?" The content is on Read the latest chapter there!
