Chapter 41

In the CEO's office.

"Mr. Landor, this is the latest updated employee form you want," the secretary said respectfully.

Ben looked directly at the Programing Department, where three new names were added.

One of the three names was Susan Miller.

Ben showed a meaningful smile.

Susan tried to avoid him. Now that they were in the same company, he would wait and see how she could continue to do so. At this time, the secretary informed that it was the call from director of the Program Department.

Ben asked the secretary to transfer the call in, and then picked it up.

"Mr. Landor, we've recruited two female employees this time. One is called Susan Miller. Her result is very shocking. She..." Ben's eyebrows raised. Shocking result?

Subconsciously, he thought that Susan's grades might not sound good.

Ben couldn't help but say calmly, "Since she had already entered the company, let's just forget about the interview. Inform her to work hard in the future."

Luke was stunned for a moment, thinking that Ben had already knew the result of Susan's full marks, thus he smiled and agreed. In the next few days, Susan began to work on time so that she spent less time in the Landor residence. One day, she went to work early and had just sat down in her seat.

She found that the atmosphere in the office was a little strange.

"What's wrong?" asked Susan.

Chapter 41

The man next to her quickly shook his head, "Nothing!"

That was completely a rumor. Just delete the post directly. There was no need to inform Susan of that. Others thought the same way. No one, therefore, talked about that.

Why did they still protect her at this time?

Roy queried, "Susan, you haven't logged on the Staff BBS yet, have you?"

Staff BBS?

Susan frowned.

Inside the Storm Group, there existed a Staff BBS for employees and they could register anonymously or with the real name. Basically, as long as their comments were not too excessive, the group would not interfere.

Even an employee anonymously scolded Ben once.

Ben didn't delete the post, and just pretended that it didn't exist.

It was also because of Ben's permissive attitude towards the Staff BBS. Many people liked to chat casually on it. But Susan was occupied with her new project, leaving no time for the Staff BBS.

"Check it yourself, gloated Roy.

"Susan, there's no need for that. It's all bullshit."

"Totally ridiculous."

"We all found it silly after reading it."

Other programmers said one after another.

Susan raised her eyebrows, while she was really a little curious.

She typed her employee number in and entered the Staff BBS.

Then, she saw a red post which went viral.

The title of this post.

ND

Chapter 41

“Shocking News! Unspoken Rules in Storm Group! One Knows Nothing Is Actually Admitted to the Company!” Unspoken rules? One knows nothing was actually hired?

The headline was not very sensational, but it touched the nerves of the employees. in the Storm Group. Because those who could enter this company were all elites, who were all proud of being admitted to it. They all got the offer after numerous obstacles and difficulties.

But someone, who couldn't do anything, was actually admitted to the company as well?

They couldn't help but look it through.

The content of the post was even more exciting.

According to its content, a few days ago, a group of people came for an interview in a department of the Storm Group. As a result, the director of this department. took a female employee's hands compulsively.

The poster ambiguously portrayed the process of how the woman entered the company through unspoken rules.

And the woman who entered the department only stared blankly at the computer every day. For so long, she had not done anything at all. The director still had a very good attitude towards her, and even told her to take her time and not to worry.

At the end of the post, the poster stood on the side of all the employees, condemning the woman that her admittance to the company was completely an insult to all the other employees with real competence.

Unfortunately, she could only get angry secretly at the director in the high position. There were many details in this post.

Moreover, the last sentence in the post did arouse many people's anger.

That was true. They worked so hard to get into this company, but someone just

Id & NGBBB B

Chapter 41

used small tricks and competed with them at the same starting point?

How come?!

Someone immediately started to find this woman out.

It was simply too easy.

The Programming Department was the only one which held the interview. recently. There were two female recruits. Then check the entry photos.

Roy Kelin... emmm she didn't have the qualification to get a casting couch at all. Then it could only be Susan Miller.

Then the director should be Luke Colle.

For a while, a lot of people outrageously poured into the post and cursed, while some others directly reported this event to the senior management level.

From last night until now, this post had been on the Staff BBS as a trending topic for unremitting eight hours. Susan was speechless when she finished the post.

13:27

"Susan, don't be too sad. Those people are scolding badly, but they also..." Roy said hypocritically.

"It's you who posted it," said Susan and stared steadily at Roy.

Roy's heart beat fast and she quickly denied, "It's not me. Don't slander me!"

Susan looked at her calmly, "There are many details in the post. It's impossible for those who aren't from our department to write it down."

"It's really you," Jaron glared at Roy.

Roy gritted her teeth and said in a panic, "How come? Maybe it's someone else who's dissatisfied with you." The post was indeed from Roy.

At the midnight yesterday, the more she thought about it, the more unwilling she became. As soon as she jumped in head, she anonymously posted it.

After sending it, she was a little afraid to be exposed.

But on second thought.

39% 13:27

The way that Susan entered the company was so unreasonable. Roy resented so much, not to mention that those old employees were probably even more dissatisfied with it.

At that time, so many people were not pleased, and no one could pin the blame on her.

So at that moment, Roy gritted her teeth and denied it at all.

“What the hell! Who else would be dissatisfied except you?” an old 4 big

“That’s ridiculous.”

“You are good at making up stories.”

When Susan said this, everyone instantly locked their target on Roy without hesitation.

Roy was dumbfounded on the spot.

Susan had been in the company for several days and didn’t do anything. How could the others not be dissatisfied at all? How could they assure that it was she who posted it?

“I’ve told you it’s not me,” Roy refused to admit it anyway.

Thanks to the free atmosphere in the Storm Group, no one would track the source.

of the anonymous post, even if it was to scold Mr. Landor.

If they couldn’t find out the person, nor convict her!

In the meantime.

In the CEO's office.

The secretary looked at Ben hesitantly.

Chapter 41

“What’s the matter? Just say it.” Ben had been in a bad mood recently.

Originally, he thought that if he put Susan in front of his eyes, he would meet her frequently.

But he didn't expect that he was so busy with a big project recently.

"Mr. Landor," the secretary hurriedly answered, "Today, there are quite a few employees who are complaining about a person." "Who?" Ben frowned..

"Susan Miller from the Programming Department," said the secretary) quickly, "They reper that she ehtdred the company through unspoken rules." The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

She was suspected of getting a casting couch from the senior management level?

Ben raised his eyebrows.

It didn't seem to be wrong to some extent.

After all, he was also a senior manager of the company, and Susan was his wife.

Was it open to the public that he made some under—the—counter deals for Susan?

"Oh? Do they know who is that senior manager of the company?" asked Ben pretentiously.

He thought that if the employees knew it, he would make it o. eH ttthe public deejy eas behing. At worst, 'he would personally pay Susan's salary. The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

"They got it," said the secretary.

"Tell me," Ben raised his eyebrows, calmly in his heart..

Since everyone knew it, they could just announce it to the public. After the announcement, he could also meet Susan justifiably. While Ben was thinking about it, he heard the secretary say, "It's Director Colle of the Programming Department."

Ben was stupefied.

Chapter 42

Chapter 42

It was hard to tell Ben's mood from his badly scarred face.

But at that moment, the secretary saw his face suddenly darken. Obviously, he was riled up. "Luke?" Ben said coldly, rage pulsing through his veins.

"Yes." The secretary spoke rather timidly.

He thought, "It made sense that Ben was furious.

Starting the business with chips, the company was a global leader in electronic information. It meant that the Programming Department mattered the most in the Storm Group.

Only when the Programming Department produced more fruitful scientific results. could the Storm Group continue to gain an edge on competition.

As the head of the Programming Department, Luke was Ben's trusted subordinate. Yet Luke had lured a naive girl to have sex with him. He betrayed Ben's trust and there was a reason for Ben's irritation. Good luck with that, Luke."

The secretary sighed inside.

Ben gritted his teeth, "What are these based on?"

The secretary hurriedly answered, "Well, there is a post on the Staff BBS."

"Send it to me. Now."

The secretary sent the webpage to Ben immediately.

Ben frowned with anger after reading it.

How foolish and stupid Susan was!

To be admitted to the company easily, she should never have turned to Luke.

Though somewhat curious, the secretary didn't dare to check what Ben was doing. He could only speculate, "Ben couldn't help but respond to the post, right?"

Well, it seems that this really caused the crowd to be angry."

Ben had turned off the computer as the secretary made a wild guess, "Done."

The secretary wondered what was done.

He picked up his phone with curiosity and wanted to click on the 'favorite' post. But he found that the post was gone.

He thought, "What's wrong with that post!

Something wrong with my phone?"

The secretary kept clicking on the link, but the link was not valid.

"Sir... The post was deleted." The secretary said hastily.

Ben glanced at him, "So what?"

The secretary soon realized it, "Ben, you..."

Ben sneered, "I don't mind some anonymous complaints. But this post is totally different. It's immoral. It slanders others, which has violated the laws. Therefore, it should be deleted as soon as possible."

The secretary was even more confused.

He thought, "You don't have to do it yourself.

It seems that you are anxious."

"I will go to the Programming Department myself. Arrange that." Ben ordered. The secretary froze.

Ben glanced at him, his face void of emotion, "Any problems?" che Chapter 42

39% 13:28

"Nope." Startled, the secretary delayed the five-minute meeting till half an hour later.

At the Programming Department.

The crowd fixed an angry look at Roy.

Though there was no direct evidence, they assumed it was Roy who was behind it.

Roy was panicking first but soon she calmed down and acted recklessly.

At this time, Luke walked in.

“Luke.” The crowd greeted him.

Luke seemed to be not affected by the post, judging from his emotion.

He said flatly, “I believe you’ve all read it.”

“Yep.” The public nodded embarrassedly.

Luke took a glance at Roy.

Roy looked away with a guilty look.

Luke sneered.

He explained emotionlessly, “Such a rumor has impacted Susan and me greatly, but it’s not that hard to address it.” It was simple, indeed.

All were gazing at Luke quietly, waiting for his next words.

“Post the grades,” said Tom calmly.

The grades would lay the truth bare and stop the rumour.

“Really?” Roy questioned. “Wouldn’t it turn into a bigger controversy?”

Roy thought Susan got a rather low grade and Luke didn’t want her to be ashamed.

“Don’t worry.” Luke gave Roy a faint smile.

Others cast a weird look at Roy.

Chapter 42

It might cause some discussion if everyone knew the grades.

Roy had thought the grades would never help Susan out.

Not knowing what Luke meant, Roy affected a calmness she did not feel. “Alright.”

“Go and announce the grades on the forum.” Luke randomly asked an employee to do so.

“Got it.” The man quickly clicked the Staff BBS.

He said in surprise after he found the post deleted, “Luke, the post has been deleted and there are more people who make suspicious and anonymous comments on it.” Luke frowned, “It doesn’t matter. Just post it.” “Okay.” The man responded.

He was about to edit.

At this time, someone said the boss was coming.

Susan imagined, “Our boss?

Ben!”

Upon hearing Ben’s name, Susan panicked.

“Why? What is Ben doing here?

It’s said that ordinary employees could hardly get the chance to see him.”

“Ben knew it?” Luke frowned, “That will be great. I intended to sort this techim. Net Sutil all on the table.” The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

Chapter 42

Will he think that I’m-not only a scheming whore, but also a shameless bitch?”

Susan trembled and sweated with fear.

She was reluctant to see Ben right now.

She didn’t have the nerve to do so.

Susan gritted her teeth and stood up, "Luke, I feel sick in my stomach."

Luke was stunned for a moment, "Susan, hang in there. Let's tell the truth to Ben first."
"... Selena blanched.

She knew both Luke and her were innocent and that the truth could be clear to all. But what if Ben didn't believe it?

Although the probability was tiny.

He might turn a deaf ear to her explanation.

Susan was somewhat concerned.

More importantly, she wasn't prepared to see Ben in the company.

Noting Susan's uneasiness, Roy thought Susan was nervous du guilt. So she held svéedn's hand tightly and Said with a smile, "Susan, just explain it to Ben. He would give you justice." The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

Susan's being seized with panic confirmed Roy's belief.

Roy couldn't come up with other reasons for Susan to be guilty. Therefore, she held Susan's hand tightly, not letting her get away. "Roy." Susan planned to shake Roy's hand away.

But she failed.

And Ben arrived.

Chapter 43

Chapter 43

Roy's attention was drawn to Ben's long legs.

Roy's heart throbbed as she focused on Ben.

Roy dreamed. "Young and promising as the CEO of the Storm Group is, he is rather low-key and mysterious. What exactly does he look like? Is he stunningly handsome?"

She looked up with an expectant look, only to find Ben's scary face. Disappointed at Ben's appearance, Roy couldn't help but scream in shock.

She thought to herself, "This monster is the CEO of the Storm Group:

What a horrible man he looks like!"

Hearing Roy's screaming, the public frowned and looked at her.

Realizing that she had been frivolous, she got embarrassed instantly.

But she got better when she found Susan looking down at the floor.

She grabbed Susan and said to Ben, "Ben, you come for the post, right? This is Susan."

Ben wrinkled his brows and replied indifferently, "Oh?"

It was hard to tell Ben's mood from his voice.

Unsure about Ben's mood, Susan bowed her head nervously.

"Susan, I advise you to come clean to Ben since he has already known it. There was no use for you to keep silent. Ben might go easy on you if you are honest enough. Am I right?" Roy made her suggestions to Susan before she turned to Ben. "Sir, Susan is wrong this time, but she is good-natured. Please be lenient to her for my sake."

Roy was quite satisfied with her words.

But others were disdainful of her, darting a contemptuous look at her.

After a while, Ben cast an icy look at Luke and asked indifferently. "Who is this?"

Chapter 43

"New employee, Roy Kelin." Luke put on a wry smile.

"New employee? I thought she became the director instead." Ben mocked, stone-faced. Ben thought, "Who was she and why she dared to say 'for my sake?'

I didn't think she was somebody."

Roy was pale at Ben's scorn and gritted her teeth, speaking no more words.

"Ben, you've come just at the right moment." Luke took a deep breath, "I intended to explain for the post. I've decided to post the interview grades of the three new employees.

"Post their grades?"

Ben frowned and glanced at Susan subconsciously.

He got no idea about Susan's performance during the interview.

"Their marks could be seen on the Staff BBS." Luke said slowly, "Now, Ben, I'd like to report their grades since we are all here." Ben raised his eyebrows and said nothing.

Susan was not bad since Luke wanted to announce their grades.

Ben was somewhat curious now.

He wondered what kind of grades Susan would get.

"OK, Jaron." Luke said flatly. "Eighty."

Jaron's eyes widened. He got panicked in retrospect.

He knew eighty was the threshold score of the Storm Group.

He couldn't be admitted to the company if he got one single point lower than it. "Then, Roy Kelin," Luke started as he glanced at Roy.

Roy was kind of excited while waiting for her score.

She thought to herself that she got at least eighty points since she had been Chapter it admitted.

No worse than Jaron.

Luke said slowly as Roy saw herself high, "Sixty."

Roy was suspicious about her marks, "Sixty?"

"That's impossible!" Roy screamed.

Luke ignored her and continued, "Susan Miller."

At this point, Luke paused.

Roy immediately suppressed her panic, expecting a lower score given to Susan. "Full marks." Luke enunciated each word carefully.

Roy seriously doubted it inside.

Other programmers had long known the truth and they were pretty calm.

But Jaron and Roy were in great shock.

Jaron still had his control over his face.

Roy just freaked out and she stood up abruptly, her voice shrill and harsh, "Impossible! That was impossible. I don't think she was that good. Luke, please be honest with her mark. Though you would like to defend her, stop the lies."

"All the interviews have been recorded," said Luke impassively. "You could watch the video if you are not convinced." "Then show me! I'm not convinced." Roy said without hesitation.

"Ben?" Luke looked at Ben, wondering his reaction.

Ben noted that Susan still remained quiet while Roy had already lost her control. He agreed, "As she wishes." "Alright." Luke answered tersely and instantly arranged the video.

Actually, panic registered Roy's face when she saw Luke was composed as usual, but she tried hard to comfort herself. Chapter 43

She said to herself inside, "Susan couldn't get a full mark. Luke must have hed

Yes, Luke lied about Susan's mark"

Luke soon got the video after a few minutes.

Ben asked to project the video on the super big screen.

The recorded interview videos of Susan, Jaron and Roy were being played at the same time, each of them occupying one part of the screen,

Roy's eyes were riveted by Susan's interview.

The video was so clear that Susan's typing fingers were seen clearly. The video soon showed the scene of the first question.

And Roy was impressed by the question.

It was no easy task and she spent half an hour to find out the faulty code. As for how to make amendments, she didn't have a clue about it.

She couldn't figure it out.

She believed Susan couldn't either.

On the screen, Jaron and Roy cudgeled their brains.

Yet it took Susan merely one minute to find out the problem.

Roy was speechless.

She continued to comfort herself, "Susan was just lucky!"

After Susan found out the faulty code, she immediately wrote with the coder the bug. The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

It didn't take her long and the code was perfect after being fixed. Roy looked awful.

But no one ever mentioned Susan's ability.

So he thought Susan didn't do good.

But it was the reverse.

Susan showed her talent in it and hard work.

Then why would she keep a low profile all these years?

Ben couldn't help but glance at Susan.

She still bowed her head and didn't look at him.

Ben failed to restrain his laughter.

Chapter 44-

Ben quickly withdrew his gaze before he swept around and asked, "Do you have. any questions about Susan's ability?" The color drained out of Roy's face and she didn't dare to say anything.

She now felt that she was being laughed at.

She believed Susan was admitted to having sex with men. But it turned out that Susan was great at the interview. She gained a rather low point herself.

"Good." Ben nodded, "Release the interview video and announce the rumormonger after finding out his IP address."

"Checking IP address?" Roy's voice shrilled, "Ben, | assume we never check the IP of anonymous commenters." That was why Roy dared to spread the rumour.

Ben threw her an emotionless look, "It's because no one has violated the law. before. They just made some minor complaints while this person slandered others and deliberately did harm to the victim. | shall do the justice."

Roy gritted her teeth and trembled with fear.

How could that be?

They would soon know it was her by investigating the IP address.

If this matter was announced in the whole group, it would be recorded in her profile and she would definitely not be able to work in the Storm Group.

And no companies would accept a person like her.

She would get dim future since then!

In fact, everyone knew it was Roy who posted.

At that moment, Luke was indescribably relieved. He glanced at Roy and said, "Okay, I'll investigate the IP immediately." It was not difficult for them to investigate an IP. The thing was whether it was allowed to do so.

Now that Ben agreed, it was reasonable.

Roy knew this too.

Roy broke down before the investigation kicked off.

"I did it wrong, Ben. I was wrong. Roy cried bitterly and wanted to cling on to Ben's thigh.

Ben raised his foot in disgust and kicked Roy away.

Roy didn't dare to complain at all and she ran to Luke, "Luke, I'm sorry. I...

Luke turned around scornfully.

He was married and had a good relationship with his wife.

Fortunately, he got the video to back him up, or it would be so hard for him to defend himself.

If not, he might end up divorcing with his wife.

Roy wanted to be forgiven with her insincere apology?

That was not going to happen.

Luke's manner was so cold and distant that Roy was left with no choices but to beg Susan for mercy.

"Susan..." Tears streamed down Roy's face. "You could justify yourself with the video and no one would question you anymore. Since you are not affected badly, please go easy on me. I won't do it again."

Roy burst into a rage of tears.

Susan was forced to look up at her.

This time, Roy was really in a state of panic.

Her crying added to her messiness and ugliness.

Seeing Susan look at her, Roy thought Susan was going to forgive her and thus she deliberately cried louder. "The announcement will ruin my career. You're so kind. You won't be so cruel, However, Susan said nothing and just quietly watched her cry.

At first, Roy kept begging and crying, but after a while, she realized that something was wrong, so she stopped. Her eyes were red from crying and she looked at Susan resentfully.

It was at that moment that Susan calmly asked, "Did you post it?"

Roy nodded because there was no need to deny it now.

Susan asked her, "When you posted, did you know that it would hurt Luke and me?"

Roy was stunned for a moment, and then she spoke for herself, "I just said it for fun. I didn't expect that people would believe it. I really didn't know what would happen."

Susan put on a grim face.

Though Roy was apologizing repeatedly, she didn't mean so and now she still blamed others instead of herself. Susan asked impassively, "How old are you?"

"Thirty." Roy answered subconsciously.

"Well, I thought you were younger." Susan jeered. "I would have forgiven you if you were merely a kid. You know, kid has a less— developed brain, having no idea of the consequence."

Roy was speechless.

Afraid to see Ben, Susan turned to Luke, "Luke, I just want to work. I hope this could be dealt with earlier." "Don't worry." Luke looked at Susan and was more satisfied with her reaction.

Luke was glad that Susan showed little sympathy to Roy.

“Thank you.” Susan said.

"I looked up to her, too."

Roy stamped her foot in anger as she read the post.

The employees of the Storm Group were careful about the words and they wouldn't swear even when mocking. Therefore, it wasn't the disdainful remarks that made her annoyed.

She couldn't figure out why the public would concentrate more on complimenting Susan instead of criticizing her. She took a deep breath and wanted to further read the pages.

Then a dialog popped up on her screen.

"Sorry, you have been stripped of the right."

Looking at the notice, Roy collapsed in the chair.

Working in the Storm Group was the highlight of her career.

She was keen to show off after being admitted. As a result, she was proud to gain envious eyes from her friends. She had thought she was blessed with gift and was a bit above herself.

But now the truth smacked in the face.

She packed her things and left the company in a daze.

Chapter 45

Susan glanced at Roy and then lowered her head.

She was a cold fish. She wouldn't care about Roy's future.

She showed little interest in Roy. No need.

At noon, she put away the document she was reading and was to have lunch at the canteen.

"Susan, I am eager to learn from you." Jaron rushed over.

Susan was somewhat amused, "You flattered me."

"I mean it!" Jaron looked at Susan with respect; "Susan, do you know the other three men of full-marks?" "Huh?" Susan asked casually.

"One of them usually lives in foreign countries. He takes charge of the technological business of the Storm Group abroad,"

"One studies the core chips with his teams in his own building, making contributions to half of the scientific results of the Storm Group,"

"That was really something." Susan raised her eyebrows. The last one was really low-key." Jaron said in hushed tones. "What do you mean?" Susan was interested.

"He had joined our company at the beginning. His works spread through the core technologies of the company. But I asked around the office, and no one knew who he was.

Behind all the core technologies?

Susan was surprised.

“Then he is not just a programming genius but a versatile talent. There’s such a master in the world. Marvelous.” Susan thought.

“Anyway, you would be as outstanding as they are and | shall take the opportunity to make friends with you.” Jaron said with a smile.
