

ILY Monster 100

Sei-er remained thunder stricken while his thumb was still in her mouth. He couldn't even move as his gaze was just glued unto her.

And the moment he felt her hot tongue licking his wound, something unthinkable just popped in his head. It was a strange thought that immediately astounded him even more.

That moment, Sei actually just imagined himself suddenly kissing her, and shockingly, the kiss in his imagination was nothing like the way he kissed her before. It was an unexpected thought that he never once fantasized about in his entire life, causing him to question himself if he was still himself.

At that point of time, everything he was feeling were all new and unknown to him that he couldn't even begin to describe them. To him, all those feelings were strange. They are feelings that he thought never exist.

Meanwhile, the moment Haru saw the current fluffy and sweet scenario, he immediately dragged Yijin out of the kitchen, telling him, they're going out to buy a soy sauce.

Davi on the other hand, instantly started turning red all over the moment she realized what she was doing.

Shoot! I actually just sucked his finger reflexively. What to do now? What if he'll think it was gross?

Thinking about his reaction slowly made Davi fell anxious. She was always doing it to her little brother and to herself, but she was worried it might not okay for him. Thus, she thought about explaining the pros of licking a wound to escape the awkward situation.

As soon as she was sure that the bleeding had stopped, she then slowly let go of his thumb and she began to talk as fast as she could.

"This might sound stupid and unreal but I swear, licking a wound was actually a good thing. You may not believe it but saliva actually contains antibacterial and antiviral components. Also, it actually also has tissue factors that help clothing. And it's not only that, licking would also be an another way of wiping off pathogens so it can serve as a substitute of clean water. And also, saliva even has factors that speed wound healing and finally, it's a natural pain killer. I've even read that saliva was six times more powerful than morphine. It's quite amazing right? It's amazing right?"

Just after her fast-forwarded explanation, a deep silence followed, as if a certain noisy crow just flew above them.

That moment, Davi turned even redder when Sei-er didn't even made a sound. She then struggled finding a word to say but before she could think about something, Sei finally talked.

"Mm. It's amazing," he said and revelation instantly dawned on her.

"Y-you don't think it's gross?" she asked hesitantly when the man instantly answered her with a clear

"No."

Upon hearing his answer, Davi's reddened face instantly turned bright as a wide smile was carved across her beautiful face.

"Is it still painful?" she asked again when the man shook his head.

"Wait for me, I'll go get a band aid," she added and she took the knife in his hand.

"Don't touch anything, okay?" she said as though she was a mom sternly instructing his son to behave before she finally left.

Sei-er was left alone in the kitchen and just like an extremely obedient little beast, he just stood there without touching anything.

However, a short moment passed by and he slowly lifted his hand. And his mystifying eyes started brimming with a certain inexplicable emotion as he stared at the little wound his wife just licked.