

ILY Monster 153

Gray mansion...

The moment Sei put down his cellphone, he walked towards his wife sleeping on the bed. He stood there for a while as he stared at her like a troubled little beast wagging his tail because of his intense hesitation. He was currently thinking whether he should wake her up or not.

She finally fell asleep again... should I wake her up? What if she will feel worse once I interrupt her sleep...?

Moments went by and the troubled Sei remained there motionless. His gaze just locked unto her face, and his eyes were reflecting a gentle gaze as though he was trying to cure her with the power of his loving gazes.

Until time passed and the girl suddenly creased her brows, causing Sei to lean over towards her. Davi slowly opened her eyes but due to the brightness of the room, she immediately shut her eyes again.

Sei on the other hand gently touched her forehead and when he confirmed that her temperature returned to its normal state, he finally spoke.

"Is your head still painful?" Sei then asked when Davi just smiled as she shook her head.

"Your friend said, you should take a cold bath so you will feel better." He added and Davi knitted her brows upon hearing him.

Hinari? Did he ask her?

Davi was about to decline because she still does not feel like she could stand on her own feet yet, but the moment she remembered that time when Hinari just threw her in a cold tub of water when she was suffering an awful hangover back then, she just nodded. Her head was still a mess and she couldn't remember whether it did help her that time or not.

However, all she wanted that moment was for her awful feeling to get away and so that Sei will stop worrying about her.

Thus, upon seeing her nod, Sei immediately helped her sit. He leaned her on the headboard as he spoke.

"Wait a little bit." He said and he rushed out of the room to call the maids. And the reason was because he remembered that time when she declined his offer to help her take a bath.

But to his surprise, the butler told him that the maids already left this morning for their vacation. Leaving him no choice but to immediately return to their room.

"The maids are not around so I will be the one to help you take a bath." He said but the girl who was still in a bad shape didn't respond to him. Instead, she just crawled sluggishly to leave the bed. Causing Sei to immediately move and help her.

"I'll carry you." He then said and the girl just nodded without any word.

The next moment, Sei entered the bathroom with his dearest wife in his arms. He put her down near the shower and the girl sluggishly stood in her feet.

Afraid that she will fall if he let her go, Sei held her waist from the back to support her.

Sei was about to ask her about what he should do next when suddenly, the girl lifted her hand and opened the shower without any warning.

The next second, cold nonstop drops of water fell over towards them. Slowly wetting them both.

That moment, Sei remained unmoving as the water kept flowing towards them. Until the girl in his arms leaned her head in his chest and slightly lifted her face, as if she was asking for the water to fall on her face.

Her eyes were still closed and she felt weak, however, the moment Sei stared at her face being drenched with water, Sei began to look at her with wonders in his eyes. As though the person in his view that moment was the most beautiful person ever existed in the entire universe.

His eyes were locked unto her face for a long while before it gradually fell unto her reddish lips and then down to her chest.

That moment, due to her drenched clothes, Davi's shirt clung tightly to her body, revealing her chest. And as soon as his gaze fell on it, Sei just started feeling unbelievably hot despite the cold water running down his entire body.

He didn't move his hands that were on her waist at all, as though he was suddenly struck by something and he turned into stone. However, within him, his heartbeat began to race like mad the moment he realized their current situation.
