

ILY Monster 189

Moments went by before Sei continued walking forward, he finally could see the end of the path. He could see lights coming from the courtyard and his heart started beating even more wildly because of the thought that any second now, he could finally see his wife.

However, for the fourth time, he stopped once again. It was because at the end of the path, another flower was waiting for him. This time, it was no longer a police checkpoint, it was a lethal ambush. Sei, who almost couldn't contain the swirls of emotions within him just stood there looking at the flower on the floor. He pressed his lips and his grip towards the teddy bear in his other hand tightened. It was the first time he ever felt these intense emotions that he couldn't even begin to describe what he was feeling at the moment anymore. He just felt as though, any more than this and his heart will burst.

Thus, the man spent a long while of staring, before he then bent his body and picked the flower called Lily of the valley. He stared at it and once again, his dear wife's voice echoed in his head, stating the meaning of the flower in his hand.

'You've made my life complete...'

That moment, realizing that the words he wanted to tell her was already being told by her instead, a mysterious idea glimmered across Sei's eyes. And the next second, he suddenly lifted his phone and sent a quick message.

Meanwhile, a girl in white dress who almost looks exactly like an angelic character from a certain beautifully drawn Chinese comic was waiting in the romantically designed gazebo. Her long midnight black hair styled into a lovely loose side braid made her look even more breathtaking.

However, the girl obviously looked so nervous as she waits. It was because she already received a message from Kaide minutes ago that Sei already entered the house. And yet, for strangely enough, the man seemed to be taking a bit too long than she expected. And the longer she waits, the more nervous she becomes.

Davi bit her lip as she stood. Well, she didn't expect that confessing was actually much harder than she imagined. She didn't know that she would be this nervous that her heart has been beating oh so loudly since she was told that Sei has arrived. To her, she felt as though confessing was yet the most challenging of all the things she has done before in the name of romance.

And as she thinks about it, she thought that the reason why she was being so nervous was not because this is the first time she will be doing this kind of thing. She thought that she's being too nervous because deep within her, she couldn't help but feel scared. She was scared about what will happen the moment she confesses her love to him. She was scared that after her confession, her adorable Sei might change. She was scared for the possibility that he might reject her.

For the whole three weeks that Davi didn't see him, she realized a lot of things. She realized just how much Sei means to her. Those days he's not with her, Davi realized just how incomplete her everyday turned into when he's not there. She missed him a lot, she just wanted to see him so bad and just keep him in her arms forever.

That was why she decided to confess. She wanted to tell him that she loves him even if she was unsure about his reaction. And even though she knew very well just what kind of situation they're into, she still wanted to tell him everything that she felt, she wanted him to see through her deepest soul. She wanted to just pour everything out and see what will happen next. She wanted to expose herself and reveal her truth to him, wishing that he too could open up with her even for a bit.
