

ILY Monster 231

"Miss, D-did you hear what I said just now?" Zaki asked hesitantly when Davi just tilted her head a little.

"Just now? Aren't you talking about flowers?" she said innocently and Zaki coughed.

Cough, cough, thank god she didn't heard the 'de'... sigh... that was close...

Davi's words made the troubled look in Zaki's eyes immediately disappear and he smiled at her.

"Are we going home now Miss?" he asked and Davi entered the car before she replied.

"Mm, let's go home." She said and the car started moving.

"Uhm... Mr. Chen, what time is your flight?" she asked and Zaki turned towards her.

"Six hours from now, Miss. Why?" he replied and Davi sighed in relief.

"I'm planning to wrap these presents myself so I'm glad I still have plenty of time to do it." Davi replied and Zaki smiled.

Time passed and they finally reached the Gray mansion. The three men went straight towards Sei's study room while Davi stayed at the living room to wrap the presents.

Davi started working intently when the butler in disguise entered the living room after surveying a certain place. He watched her for a while until a certain idea popped in his head.

"Where is Sei?" he whispered to butler Gou and when the butler told him that they were upstairs, Mr. Mikazuki immediately moved towards the stairs.

Upon reaching the door, the old man knocked. Sei was the one who opened the door while Zaki and Kir were immersed in their serious discussion.

"What are you doing here? Stop hiding inside this dark den of yours and go help your wife. She needed help from you." The old man said and Sei's eyes immediately widened.

"Did something happen? Where is she?" he suddenly asked anxiously and the old man who was confused with his reaction could only reply immediately because of the sudden severe troubled look in his eyes.

"Downstairs. Why are you su---" the old man couldn't finish his words. Well, it was because, Sei instantly dashed away as though something bad just happened with his wife.

"The young master might have misunderstood what you mean sir. He might have thought that something bad happened and she needed his help." Butler Gou explained and Mr. Mikazuki asked again.

"Is he always like this?"

"Yes, he worry too much when it comes to her." The butler replied and the old man's eyes narrowed. His eyes were filled with determination and awe as he moved towards the stair to watch them in secret. Well, the old man was still in his observation stage. He thought that he should observe them close so that he could see when is the right time for him to do the moves hidden in his sleeves.

Meanwhile, Davi raised his head the moment she heard a noisy fast footsteps that seemed to be rushing towards her when suddenly, Sei was already in front of her and he held both of her shoulders.

"A-are you okay? Did something happen?!" Sei asked with an extreme worry flashing across his eyes as he breathed heavily, causing Davi to feel stunned for a bit.

"I-i'm fine. What's wrong?" She replied and Sei scanned her body as though he was trying to ensure that she wasn't hurt anywhere.

Looking at how anxious he was, Davi raised her hands and held his face to make him look at her.

"Sei. I'm alright and nothing happened, okay?" she said earnestly and after a long while, Sei calmed and the next second, he hugged her tight.

"Sei, did something happen?" Davi asked as she caressed his head gently when Sei pulled away and he stood. He lifted his hand and landed it on his own shoulder as he talked.

"I think, I misunderstood something again. Sorry." He said as he picked the fallen ribbon on the floor.

Looking at his saddened expression, Davi felt her heart being tugged the moment she realized he was being worried too much for her again. That moment, Davi wanted to just lift his spirit up so she held his hand.

"Come, I'll teach you how to wrap a gift box." She said as she smiled brightly and Sei's unpleasant feelings slowly disappeared. He was about to nod obediently but when his eyes fell towards a pink little box, wrapped beautifully and perfectly, he hesitated.

Noticing his gaze locked onto the small box, Davi chuckled softly. It was because, suddenly, Sei's expression changed and he looked as though he already realized that making such a thing might be impossible for him.

"Don't worry, I'll help you, let's wrap this one together." She said happily and Sei just couldn't decline her.

However, for some reason, Sei didn't like the idea of him wrapping a certain present for someone else when he didn't even wrap a gift for his dear wife at all. Thus, the next moment, straight as ever, Sei spoke.

"I will wrap a gift only if it's for you." he said with his usual honest gaze and Davi's nose almost bled.
