

ILY Monster 395

When Davi received this bouquet, Little Shin didn't run away anymore. It seemed like little cupid's job was finally over.

Noticing this, Davi bent down and she attempted to touch him. When the boy didn't step back, Davi then took it as a sign and she immediately embraced him tight.

"Baby..." she uttered and Little Shin hugged her back. They were embracing like they've been separated for months, when it hadn't even been a day since she left him. Somehow, as she embraced him, Davi felt like Little Shin was a little soothing energy ball. Embracing him calmed her wild heartbeat, giving her the power to keep going.

After a few moments, Little Shin was the first to pull away from their embrace and he held Davi's hand. Like a little gentleman, he led his mother towards the door, as if he was the father leading his daughter in to the altar as they slowly walked down the pathway of lights.

As soon as they reached the door, Little Shin then let go of her hand and he looked at her, giving her the sweetest smile as he gestured at her to go. He was just so breathtakingly adorable that Davi couldn't help but bend again and kiss his cheeks thrice before letting him go.

She patted his head and she breathed in deeply before she finally stepped out of the door.

At that moment, Little Shin watched his beautiful mother as she walked away. He just stood there when suddenly, someone called out his name softly.

"Little Shin... Little Shin... come here!" someone whispered and the little guy immediately moved towards the couple who just came out from hiding behind the curtains.

"Uncle, Auntie, mom is already out." The little guy whispered back and Hinari bent and pinched his cheek gently.

"Good job my boy. You're so amazing!" Hinari praised him while Zaki simply ruffled little Shin's head.

"Okay, let's go to our next mission. Hopefully, those four will do their part properly." She continued when Zaki held Little Shin's hand before he started walking. Hinari then immediately held Little Shin's other hand as Zaki spoke.

"Don't worry, those four won't mess up." He said and the babysitters and their baby finally moved forward.

When Davi finally reached the courtyard, her eyes went straight to that gazebo and just as she expected, Sei was there, dressed in a gorgeous suit. He looked like a prince waiting for his princess to arrive. His suit was black and he wore a white shirt with a smart black tie. The suit fitted him so well, showing off his well built muscles. The diamond cuff links he wore sparkled in the moonlight and he absolutely looked so damn dreamy. He was just too stunning and handsome, as if he was a perfect immortal man from the realms of the gods.

He was standing in the same spot that Davi was standing on back then when she was waiting for him. This scene made her heart start skipping a beat again.

Davi didn't even take a step yet. Somehow, she wanted to imprint this picture to her memory of Sei waiting there for her so she stood there for a while longer.

When she finally imprinted this scene in her heart and mind, Davi then started walking slowly. Their eyes were locked onto each other's.

Except for the dim light of the pathway and the dim light beside Sei, the entire courtyard was actually dark, so she couldn't see how this special place had changed.

As Davi stepped on the dimly lit pathway, she was stunned when the lights were suddenly turned off and the only ray of light came from the moon above.

Davi looked at Sei but she didn't speak. She just took another step closer when suddenly, out of nowhere, tiny twinkling lights floated around her.

At that very moment, Davi thought that she must be dreaming because it seemed like she had awakened countless fireflies when she took a step. Was this the reason why Sei wasn't moving at all?

Davi gasped in awe. She was awestruck but her feet continued moving slowly. As she continued walking forward, more and more fireflies floated everywhere. It was as if, there were millions of them, illuminating her path to her Prince.

The scene was just like a magical fairy tale. Davi felt like it was a dream but it wasn't a dream or a figment of her imagination. The fireflies all started lighting up with every step she took and she couldn't believe it. Did Sei breed fireflies in this garden these past five years?

Davi was speechless. Her eyes widened as she looked at the magical garden she had walked into. Her gaze landed at the unmoving Sei, just looking at her as if a goddess just descended from the heavens.

As Davi moved closer and the fireflies flew between them, Davi's heart was beating so wildly that she could hear it loud and clear.

Every step she took was like a countdown, as if the moment she reached him, she wouldn't be able to control herself anymore.

Davi saw that Sei's hands were also hidden behind him and she could see some part of a bouquet so upon seeing another small round table just beside the aisle, she placed the bouquet in her hand down onto it.

After putting the flowers down, she returned her gaze to Sei and she continued walking towards him, their eyes never leaving each other as the fireflies glowed creating a beautiful effect.

When Davi finally stopped before him, Sei finally moved.

He slowly reached out his hand and gave her another bouquet of red roses.

Upon receiving them, Davi's heart finally reached its limit. It was because the bouquet consist 99 roses, which means, 'I will love you 'till the day I die'.

Davi's eyes welled, however, before she could even react, the man before her suddenly knelt on one knee, holding a small open box in his hand.

"Davi, will you marry me, again?"
