

ILY Monster 412

In what seemed like no time at all, Davi and Hinari finally finished getting ready. Hinari had her instructions that once they were done, she was to call Zaki to let them know and to await for further instructions.

Hinari then went and took a call while Davi looked at herself in the mirror. She almost didn't recognize herself. She studied this stranger staring back at her and she was shocked at what she saw. Davi moved to touch the mirror when Hinari came back into the room and startled her.

Hinari had received her next instructions and that was to bring Davi to the venue. Everything seemed to be in place and all that was left was the ceremony.

Thus, Hinari escorted Davi to the car waiting downstairs to take them to their destination. The car's windows were once again purposely covered so she couldn't see a thing outside.

"Davi, you're so... so... beautiful. The most beautiful bride I've ever seen." Hinari said as the car slowly moved.

"Thank you. Hinari, thank you so much for everything. You don't know how thankful I am for having a best friend like you. You're the best of all best friends in this world." Davi replied and the two embraced each other.

"Hehe. Back at you, my dear. I will always be your friend forever. "

When the car finally stopped, Hinari told Davi to close her eyes since she couldn't put the blindfold on anymore, as her make up would be ruined. Hinari also asked her to put on an earphone, amusing Davi. What were they were up to?

The bride then obediently followed Hinari's instructions so that she wouldn't spoil whatever surprises Sei had prepared for her this time.

Hinari helped Davi walk and after a few moments, Hinari finally told her to open her eyes.

Davi stood there as Hinari removed the earphone inserted from her ears. Her lashes fluttered and her eyes slowly opened. As soon as she saw what was in front of her, her mouth slightly hung open in shock.

She gasped slightly and her heart was immediately enveloped with overflowing emotions. She almost couldn't believe her eyes.

She couldn't believe that Sei had chosen for their wedding to be held at a beach. The entire place was decorated in white motif, making the place look so dreamy. The vast, blue water was splashing softly behind the altar. All the flowers that Davi gave him during her confession were everywhere and everything was just so breathtakingly beautiful.

Davi stood there rooted when Hinari suddenly spoke.

"You're groom actually asked me years ago about your dream wedding and I remembered you telling me back then where you wanted to have a wedding with your beloved, so I told him. Hehe." Hinari said and Davi couldn't even utter how thankful she was for all these people who love her this much.

"Okay, okay, don't get emotional here, my dear. Your beloved is already waiting." Hinari added and Davi nodded.

Hinari then took off her shoes and then Davi's as they stood by and waited for their cue.

There were not many people in the venue. Well, Sei invited only the most important people in their lives. His family were all gathered around as well as hers. Even the Zhao elder had been invited, signifying Sei's forgiveness and acceptance of this side of his family. In addition to family members, Davi's special force team were actually there lurking secretly to attend their dearest genius former member.

At that moment, when everyone saw the bride standing there, everyone gasped as they looked at her. The bride was just so breathtakingly beautiful that everyone's jaws dropped with awe. Her face was luminescent, like she was glowing. Her face was covered with a thin layer of makeup as she already had a perfect complexion and she only needed minimal touch ups like blush and lipstick. Her face resembled a goddess' beauty, unmatched by anyone else in the world. Supermodels and actresses didn't even compare to her beauty.

Their eyes then slid down past her chin to her neck and stopped on the magnificent necklace that hung around her neck. The necklace hung around her neck perfectly, like it was made for her. The chain was made up of small sparkling diamonds and where they met in the middle, hung a full moon-shaped diamond that sparkled. Everyone knew that this necklace was the legendary heirloom every queen of Country J wore from generation to generation. It was also one that Sei's mother wore at her wedding and so he wanted Davi to also carry this tradition on, in his mother's memory.

Their eyes then travelled downward further to the dress that she was wearing and they couldn't help but let out a soft gasp as they looked at her. The guests were speechless as they looked at her wearing this breath-taking wedding dress. Although it had a simple design, it was absolutely a masterpiece designed by a god level designer. The off the shoulder bodice was made from the softest silk and lace. The long lace sleeves had very intricate designs woven in them. Her bodice, which went to her waist, also had the same intricate designs. A white bow separated the bodice from the bottom of the dress which was made of silk and flowed down like a soft A-shaped waterfall around her. The dress rippled at her every move. She looked like a fairy tale princess.

Sei's princess.
