

Read Loving You In Secret by Debbie Meza Free - Chapter 925

Chapter 925

“Who do the voices belong to?” “One of the voices belongs to Tyler Hart.

Do you truly think he’s so poor that he needs to make money off the casino? This auction is nothing but a game of who’s the most audacious for the rich.”

“Wow, so Tyler Hart is here, too? What about the other person? I wonder where he got the courage to bid against Tyler.”

“The other person... Well, I heard that he’s been bidding against Tyler for a few nights in a row. However, it’s a pity ‘ cause he can’t win against Tyler; not when he’s in Tyler’s territory.”

The auction lot closed while everyone discussed the sky- high price. Just like that, ‘the-woman-who-can-win-in-any- card-game’ was sold off at 1.5 million dollars.

A series of awed gasps went around the room; even Vicky thought it was ridiculous that her husband paid so much for a woman who could ‘win in any card game’.

‘Even if that woman is made out of gold, she still won’t be worth a million five hundred thousand dollars,’ thought Vicky. However, she did not stop Tyler from doing so. In fact, she found the whole thing so ridiculous that she started to see the funny side of it.

After a while, the waiter walked over to Tyler’s seat. In the dim light, the waiter took the bank card from Tyler’s hand and walked away with a smile on his face. About ten minutes later, the waiter respectfully returned the card to Tyler, and the latter got up and left the room through a passage specially reserved for the club’s VIP members to use.

‘Is he going to check out what he bought?’ Vicky wondered.

'The-woman-who-can-win-in-any-card-game' was the last of the auction lot, and for the rest of the night, the club put on various performances. Vicky glanced at the direction of the VIP passage then got up and left quietly. Her membership card was of the highest VIP tier, so she was also allowed to use the passage.

However, after walking through the resplendent corridor and entering the lobby, she realized that there was no one there at all. She looked around, wanting to find Tyler, when she suddenly paused in front of a room.

The door to that room was slightly ajar, and Vicky heard a familiar voice coming from inside.

"Tyler, what on earth do you think you're doing? Does Vicky know that you're messing around outside?"

"Mister Sparks, don't you think you should mind your business instead of mine?" replied Tyler quickly in his deep voice.

"Tyler, if you don't love Vicky, you should stop wasting her time and let her-"

"Let her go?" interjected Tyler. "So that the two of you can rekindle your relationship? Is that what you want?"

Harvey's eyes darkened. "Well, you should treat her better if you're not going to let her go. In fact, you shouldn't do anything that can disappoint her."

"Our marriage has nothing to do with you," said Tyler coldly.

"Tyler, you don't want to let her go nor do you want to treat her better, so what exactly do you want?"

"Harvey." Tyler's tone became colder. "What right do you have to say all this to me? Is it because you used to be her ex-boyfriend or ex-fiance?"

"That's all in the past."

Tyler smiled faintly at him. "Your time is over. You can win against me at all and Gloria has already left Stoneford City, so tell me... What are you still doing here?"

Harvey's eyes darkened, and he remained silent.

"Vicky is my woman. Even if I don't want her anymore, you still have no right to be with her," said Tyler lightly.

"Tyler, you can stop all this bullsh*t with me. Just answer me this: do you still love her?" asked Harvey coldly.

Chapter 926

Tyler scoffed and said, "Why should I answer you that?" "Tyler, do you know all the things you've done recently have crossed the line?"

"All the things I've done recently?" Something flashed across Tyler's eyes. "What did I do?"

"Just how many women have you been with during this period?"

"How can I be in the wrong when those women willingly throw themselves at me?" asked Tyler coldly. "Harvey, you must know what that's like since I'm sure many women willingly throw themselves at you, too."

Harvey scoffed and said, "Don't tell me you did nothing more than that with the women who did that to you. From what I've heard, those powerful people who wanted to curry favors from you also sent you some women which you didn't refuse."

Tyler raised an eyebrow. "What? Don't tell me you've never accepted those kinds of women before."

It was a given that turning down a woman from 'friends' in business was as good as giving them a snub. All that mattered in a man's world were money, power, and beautiful women. Therefore, Harvey had been gifted women before but he usually turned them down since he was not interested in this kind of woman.

However, the 'friends' in business who sent him the women did not accept his refusal. They just thought that he did not like the types of women they sent him, so the next time, they would send a new type of woman to him.

This annoyed Harvey to no end, so he would sometimes grudgingly accept a woman just so those 'friends' in business would stop sending the women over. However, he never touched the woman he accepted since he saw them as nothing but a cover for him.

“That’s different. You’re already married, so you can only turn down the women even if it’s going to cause you trouble later,” said Harvey coldly.

“Well, I never heard that rule before,” said Tyler with a smile.

“Tyler, aren’t you afraid that Vicky will be sad if she finds out about this?”

“You not wanting her to be sad is all the more reason you should just keep your mouth shut.”

Harvey’s eyes darkened when he saw how nonchalant Tyler behaved.

“I won’t tell her about what happened recently, but don’t blame me for taking her away from you if you do anything to make her sad again.”

“Are you going to advise her to get a divorce from me, or are you going to publicly abduct her?” Tyler raised his eyes to look at him. “Harvey Sparks, as long as I don’t agree to the divorce, Vicky will be forever married to me, and she’ll never be yours.”

Harvey frowned. He was about to say something when the door swung open.

“So when you said you want to start over with me again, I should take it to mean that you’d be drinking in clubs all the time and leaving me all alone in the house?”

Harvey’s head snapped as he turned, and the look in his eyes changed when he saw Vicky standing by the door.

“Vicky, what are you doing here?”

“I came here to see for myself what’s all the fuss about the legendary auction, of course. I couldn’t help but wonder who it was that spent a record-breaking a-million-five-hundred-thousand dollars on one auction.”

Her eyes never once left Tyler, even when she answered Harvey’s questions.

Tyler’s eyes darkened momentarily, and they quickly returned to calm.

His eyes were like a cold spring-distant and composed. He stared back at her, unblinkingly and silently.

Harvey walked over to stand beside Vicky, but just when he was about to say something, Vicky stopped him with a raise of her hand.

She looked deeply into Tyler’s eyes and asked, “Tyler, don’t you have anything you want to say to me?”

Tyler’s eyes flashed, but after a few seconds of silence, he finally said, “Harvey, would you mind stepping out for a moment?”

Harvey frowned and was about to say he wanted to stay in the room when Vicky beat him to it. "Harvey, please do as he says since this matter is only between me and him."

Harvey took one look at her before leaving the room and closing the door tightly behind me. After he left, the tension in the room became so thick that one could cut it with a knife.

Chapter 927

"Now can we talk?" Vicky asked.

"What do you want to know?"

Vicky found his question so ridiculous that she suddenly burst out laughing. "Do you seriously need to ask me that, Tyler?"

"Well, how will I ever know what answers you're looking for if you don't ask the questions?"

"Don't tell me you think you're the innocent party in this matter."

"If you're referring to all the women in here, well, all I can say is this is just a necessary part of doing business. I haven't done anything with those women."

"Just a necessary part of doing business?" Vicky scoffed, and her gaze turned cold. "Is throwing around a million fifty thousand dollars a necessary part of doing business as well? Don't you think that's going a little bit overboard?"

Tyler leaned against the sofa and crossed his legs elegantly and casually. "Do you know who owns this club?"

Vicky was a little taken aback, but she immediately understood what he meant.

"Tell me... Why are you doing this, then?"

"Well for one, it's because of Harvey... And the other is because..." He looked at Vicky and continued, "I'm getting annoyed at all those people sending me women, so I thought it would save me all the trouble if I just choose a woman in front of them. At least that way I can have some peace. ■"

'So what you're saying is...the work you've been busy doing is just you spending time with all these different women every night?"

Tyler did not like Vicky's tone and attitude. "As I've mentioned, all this is just a necessary part of doing business."

Vicky then recalled her previous conversation with Noah. At that time, she did get a certain feeling that something was off about what he said, but she did not give it much thought.

However, it suddenly hit her that it would be normal for Noah to know what Tyler had been doing since they both revolved in the same business circle. The friend he was talking about was her! He was hesitating whether to tell her or not because he was afraid that Tyler would take revenge on him, so he had no choice but to do it in a roundabout way.

‘Correct me if I’m wrong, but are you saying that the same thing will be happening in the future as well?’

“Yes.”

Vicky did not know what Noah saw nor did she know what Harvey found out. However, Vicky was sure that Tyler had done something he should not have done for both Noah and Harvey to say that he had crossed the line.

It took Vicky a long while to find her voice again.

“I understand that it’s part of your job to build relationships with the other business tycoons, but I’ll never forgive you if you cheat on me.”

Tyler looked at her and said, “I told you, I’ve never done anything with those women.”

Vicky clenched her fists. “It’s not enough that you’ve never done anything with them. Tyler, you’re already married, so you should keep your distance from other women. Do you understand?”

Tyler remained indifferent to her.

‘I’m going to say this one last time, I’ve never done anything with those women. The reason I called out such a high price is because Harvey wouldn’t stop bidding against me.’

“But I remember you were the one who called out the bid first.”

“Are you trying to say that I’m interested in the woman I bade for?” Tyler looked at her. “Vicky Shaw, I’m one of the shareholders in this club. I’m just trying to help the business by driving the prices up. You should know how it works since you’re in the service industry as well.”

‘What if I say I don’t like you doing this?’

“Vicky, I’ve been doing this in all the four years we’ve been married.”

Then, Tyler suddenly remembered something. He paused and stared at her with his deep, dark eyes. “That’s right. I’ve forgotten you don’t have any memory of what happened in the past.”