Chapter 141: Do You Still Remember That Accident Which Happened to Our Father

Bad things have come. A girl had better not drink with a group of guys, especially when they held malicious intention. If a girl really wanted to drink beers, she could not be too great-hearted and frank and should pretend that she would get drunk easily in case that someone came to urge her to drink. As for Olive, she was really good at drinking beers and she would not easily get drunk. So those men might gather together to toast to her in order to fuddle her. Because once she drank with one man, she needed also to do others a favor.

Even if Olive always liked to secretly drink her father's beers when she was young, of course found by his father, and finally has been expert in drinking beers under the influence of his father, she could by no means keep sober when those men came to drink with her with many kinds of alcohol such as beers, wine and liquor. Luckily she didn't drink too much so she wasn't drunk and just felt a little stomach distended. When she wanted to go out to get some fresh air and go to the toilet, she was stopped by them because they thought that she didn't care about their feelings.

It was Alan who spoke at such an embarrassing moment, "Don't force her! It is not glorious that you guys embarrass such a girl. She just wants to go to the toilet, and she will be back anyway."

Hearing such words, those men no longer prevented Olive. She felt like a bird out of the cage and rushed to the toilet. Then she started to curse those men in heart one by one, but when it came to Alan's turn, Olive had a feeling that her heart quivered and she felt a little touched.

She has stayed in the toilet for nearly 10 minutes and actually she was not that willing to go back to the box. So she started to play mobile games on the corridor where there was a window nearby.

"Hey, are you okay?" suddenly a voice that came from behind scared her.

When she turned back, Alan's face came into her eyes, and she replied in a bad tone, "I am fine."

she did not know how and who to ask for help. Fortunately, she found the local villagers and dragged him to the road with a simple cricket to stop the car and go straight to the hospital for first aid. At that moment, she was really afraid of his family, but he told her that there was a mole in his house so that his whereabouts could not be revealed. At that time, she knew that the wealthy families might not be as fine and enviable as they looked, and they had to be always on guard against their families or relatives who were coveting property. Indifference was prevailing in their families, sometimes even the closest person

Chloe Malan was in a trance, "What are you talking about?"

"Someone forced me to leave him." In fact, she should have thought that she shouldn't fall in love with a man like him who was born in such a home. She shouldn't love him despite everything. But love is coming, she can't resist it.

"Who?" Chloe Malan closely questioned.

"Ophelia Meyer, she said she is Alan Hoyle's fiancée. She led to the father's car accident and warned me that it was just the beginning if I didn't leave him again." Although it passed five years, Olive Steele has always understated it, the fingers would still be clenched unconsciously. It is an insatiable anger and hate.

"Gosh, there is such a vicious woman, Alan Hoyle's eyes are really not well." Chloe Malan completely satirized after taking a sip of cool air, but she frowned after a while. "But have you said this to Alan Hoyle? As your temperament, how can you be willing to change from a true girlfriend to the other woman? I don't believe that you are obedient when you are threatened. It is not your style."

"I have thought about doing this. It was just that Ophelia Meyer could find him, those who wanted to put him to death must know his whereabouts. Although he deliberately give up the heritage of his family, those people did not intend to let him go. Ophelia Meyer is vicious, but the one point she said rightly is that they can protect him."

Chloe Malan cursed: "Don't listen to her. She just threatened you."

She knew he was a blind man, she abandoned him. Who would like to spend the rest of her life with a blind man? Only you, a fool, would treat him regardless everything. When you almost finished treating his eyes, the woman would come out and get a big bargain. It's so disgusting. "

But Olive Steele said, "Alan Hoyle was

Chapter 143: Then Do You Still Love Him?

This was originally a simple matter, but Olive thought deeper and farther than she did,"How about the truth had become clear? I've broken up with him, I don't want him to fight for Annie's custody with me in the end. Alan's mother has also spoken to me, even if Alan recognizes Annie, the Hoyle family will not recognize Annie's identity. I don't want my child to be hurt, nor do I want my parents to worry. Anyway, Alan is going to marry Ophelia, so I will just make use of this opportunity to achieve their end and deny it to the end. They've all left Luo city now, my life is finally calm again."

Having said that, Ivy who sitting beside her and listening quietly didn't think Alan had completely given up on her. If not, how could Alan ask Dave to give her a dress and choose his waitingbar deliberately?

Alan was investigating him, how could he be unaware? Dave came here today, perhaps to show him, the men's intuition was sometimes more sensitive than women. Alan was probably not as simple as Olive thought.

In Chloe's questioning, Olive added some details. From beginning to end, Chloe heard with feeling shocked, walked distressedly over to hug Olive, "Olive, were you so bullied by them like this and still silent?"

Olive said faintly with smiling, "Nothing, it's already gone. I have no other requirements right now, I don't want to be rich or noble, I just want me and my family to be safe and healthy and live happily. I am satisfied to be with you."

Ivy originally wanted to ask Olive if she wanted to teach them a lesson, but when he heard this, his mind of asking was temporarily suppressed. When he opened his mouth again, he asked, "Then do you still love him?"

Although we are weak, we may not be able to defeat them, but we have to expose the ugly face of the daughter of the so-called famous family, don't we? He had indeed just returned from the desert, and he hadn't had a bath for days. His body smelled of dust, and his beard was unshaven. His long beard made him look old, but not so old as to be called grandpa. What a rude little girl!

"How rude are you! Speak respectfully to your elders. Didn't your parents teach you? Don't call me grandpa, call me uncle."

The man looked so fierce that people kept their distance from him. Though they were all watching him, Annie tugged at his thick black beard as he bent down to speak to her. Children were not afraid of evil forces.

Olive was so afraid that she would run up to her. She was afraid that Annie would annoy him. Ivy pulled him over, smiling, "it's okay. He's a friend of mine."

Little Annie was made to laugh, her eyes and eyebrows bent with laughter. She said, "Mom Chloe taught me a word, uncle beard, do you want to hear it?"

"Well. OK." He pretended to listen carefully. Although he looked fierce, he really liked the little girl. He felt that the little girl was brave, and that it was rare for a child not to be afraid of him, and she was a little girl!

Because of his rugged appearance, and he had a marked scar on his face, which extended from his eyebrows to his ears. The first reaction of a child of her age seeing him was either to cower behind the adult's back or to cry in terror, as if he was the devil. He was very sad.

The little girl was an exception, breaking his record for being isolated from children.

"You are an old man but you don't respect others." She held out her little finger and said the words carefully, counting each word. This sentence made the man angry.

"Never mind. You don't know how many children have been frightened by my face and how many grown-ups have feared me, so it's so funny that your daughter should dare to take liberties with me. I like her." Dave smiled at her, followed by the scar on his face, then seizing Annie's small and unruly hands and holding them. "Little girl, quickly call me teacher."

"If I don't accept my birthday present from my godfather, he won't be happy. I can call you teacher, but you have to fight all over the world, as you have to be a very strong man to be my teacher." It was a phrase she had learned from The Karate Kid and she knew it by heart, she saying them more and more fluently.

Since Annie's been watching too many cartoons, Olive was worried.

Although the hotel was open all year round and got busier towards the end of the year, Olive took a day off for Annie's birthday. Although Annie's birthday was celebrated every year, as Annie had lost the love of the father, she didn't want her daughter's life to have more regrets.

As Annie was born in the evening of the lunar year, early in the morning, someone rang the doorbell. The delivery boy delivered a package, Olive signing the receipt and opening the package to see. She found a beautiful simulation doll with a little bit of fantasy.

Today, Annie, the birthday girl, was the best, dressing up gorgeously and rushing over. "Wow, SD doll, is it for me?"

"How do you know it's an SD doll?" Olive was curious.

"Ailsa's dad bought one for her on a business trip to Japan, and then she brought it to kindergarten to play with me." Annie hugged the doll fondly.

Olive saw a card in the box on which was written. "Happy birthday to Annie."

Who sent it? It was not signed one's name, the handwriting being strange.

"Okay." Annie closed her eyes carefully, folded her hands, and mumbled silently. Then she opening her bright eyes, blew out the four candles.

Olive went to turn on the light, and as she looked back, she saw Dave joking with Annie. "What did you wish for?"

"I won't tell you." Annie said to him, looking mysterious.

"Why?"

"Because wishes don't work when they're spoken." Annie said very seriously.

While chatting over dinner, Olive learned that Dave was going to open a martial arts health club in Luo city. All the procedures and venues have been completed, and the coach has been invited. After the Spring Festival, students would be officially enrolled, but Annie was the only student that he enrolled personally.

Olive felt a little flattered, knowing that it was because of Ivy.

Olive was doing the dishes after dinner, the living room was full of people's laughter with the lovely child, Annie. Olive's mother sneaked into the kitchen, closed the door, and placed the bowls, which Olive had poured into the dishwashing liquid, in the sink for washing, she pretending to mention casually.

Having made it for a long time, Xenia finally got a decent one. Olive gave her the thumbs-up sign, "You learnt faster than I, I wasted my mother's whole basin of flour to learn it at first. You are more talented than me."

"Really?" Xenia temporarily forgot those worries and said happily, she completely didn't know that her face was stained with white flour at this moment. She went out of the kitchen after the dumplings were put into the pot, when everybody saw her, the whole room roared with laughter.

When Chloe saw her face, "Xenia, what makeup are you wearing?"

Xenia was very confused, "I'm not wearing makeup."

She knew that Ivy didn't like women with heavy makeup, so she did nothing but just wiped some cream on her face to moisturize her skin and protect it from the wind and cold.

"Here, there's flour." The Olive's mother wiped her face with smiling.

All right, the Olive's mother didn't wash the soy sauce on her hands that she got from cooking the Soy Sauce with Pig's Elbow just now, with a few horizontal and perpendicular stroking, she made her face like the painted face, this time everyone laughed to themselves more than ever.

Especially Annie, who rocked her body backward and forward on Dave's shoulders, her little hands held two pinches of his hair to balance the body.

"Hey, little guy. Be gentle, you almost tore all my hair off." It was so hurtful that Dave grimaced in pain and shouted, he quickly took her down.

Annie reached out and touched his head, "It's also good that tearing all you hair off, I watched the monks of Shaolin Temple on TV had no hair."

"Well okay, Big Beard, then next time, don't forget." Annie advised repeatedly.

Dave couldn't help sighing, "Oh, Annie, you are such a tough little guy and hard to get along with, I bet when you grow up, the guy who marries you will suffer a headache from you."

"That's not gonna happen, I'm not going to marry a coward who's going to get a headache from me." Although she was a little girl, her tone was very big.

"Wow, such a little girl has a big tone." Dave and others laughed.

In fact, he knew that she was comforting him. The dumplings wrapped with coins must have been

That New Year's Eve, although invisible, he remembered it all his life.

Alan looked over at Ophelia's drooping eyelids, tilted the corners of his mouth coldly, and took her hand.
"Go back to your room, it's cold outside."

"Well, good." She seemed a little sleepy. His palm was very warm. She would hold it tightly for a

When he got into the room, he released her hand. "I'm going to take a bath."

Ophelia rolled into the quilt, with a blush on her face. There was his refreshing breath in the quilt. There
