The Innocent Wife of Scheming President

Chapter 281 Fight my master!

Chloe Malan bit the apple in her hand and smirked, "He is pretty much getting a daughter for free. So why don't we spice things up for him?"

"Well, just don't go too far." Olive Steele's mother said.

"I know, Mom. Don't worry." Chloe Malan grinned.

On the other hand, Alan Hoyle took on a cab and told the driver the address.

It was a martial art gym that reminded Alan of the man, Dave Chou. He remembered Dave Chou was the best friend of Ivy Aldington, while now that man was the master of martial art for Annie.

Fifteen minutes later, Alan found the place where Annie get trained after the guidance of the staff.

The little girl of his, and a group of children, were practicing movements in the sun, with sweat hanging on their little faces.

Several children could not hold on and fell to the ground, but his daughter was still steady, with the little mouth roaring loudly.

His little baby was awesome.

Alan did not want his daughter to suffer, but just as Olive said, she needed to practice martial art master the ability to self-defense and strengthened her body.

Olive, in fact, had been living in the shadow of threats, so she wanted her baby girl could possess a survival skill so that she would save herself in an emergency.

Dave Chou was glad to fight with Alan Hoyle though.

Alan Hoyle frowned, "Sweetheart, your mommy doesn't like me fighting. She will be angry."

"It's just a contest. Besides, if you don't tell her, the master doesn't tell her, and I won't tell her, Mommy will never know!"

But Alan did not want to do it in front of his daughter, "Why do we have to compete for no reason?"

"Because I want to know which one of you is better!"

"And then what?"

"Do you want it or not? I'll go and play if you don't!" That meant, if Alan did not do it, she would not go with him.

Dave Chou smiled, "Mr. Hoyle, I heard that you are very skilled, and I wanted to learn something. Since Annie is also interested, why don't we just have a contest?"

"Alright, but if I win, you need to answer me a question." Alan stood up slowly and smiled.

Dave asked, "What's that?"

"I haven't come up with one yet." There were many questions, but there was only one opportunity. Naturally, he wanted to grasp the most critical one.

Dave Chou had long been immune to Annie's behavior. When Dave saw her climb an old tree to see the bird's nest for the first time, he also had the same expression as Alan Hoyle, but this little girl could still laugh at him on the tree, and since then, he did not treat her as an ordinary child anymore.

This baby girl looked like a well-behaved and ingenious kid, but actually, she was sneaky and quite courageous.

Dave Chou stepped up the attack while Alan Hoyle was distracted. As a man mastering a martial art, while he was paying attention to all directions it was necessary to remain calm as well. If a man was disturbed, then he was giving his opponent a chance to defeat him.

"Excuse me." Alan had no intention of fighting anymore, because, at this moment, the safety of his daughter was most important, while Dave refused to let him go. Step by step, with fierce fists, he blocked the approach of Alan to Annie.

"Mr. Chou!" Alan Hoyle was angry.

Dave Chou smiled, "My apprentice can handle things herself, so Mr. Hoyle can stop worrying."

But that was his daughter, there was no way he could not worry, "So, you refuse to move aside, Mr. Chou?"

"Defeat me, and I'll get off your face."

Alan charged to him and they fought again.

Alan Hoyle rubbed her little nose slightly. "You little thing."

While Annie was plausible, "Boys shouldn't touch a girl's butt, don't you know that?"

Well, he could not argue with that, because the five-year-old child already had gender consciousness.

Seeing the backs of the big one and little one, Dave Chou rubbed his chest and frowned.

"I didn't expect that Alan Hoyle had such good skill." He spoke to himself, "There are still more things I don't know about him."

After leaving the gym, Alan's assistant drove the car and was waiting on the side of the road. Alan Hoyle went into the car with Annie and got to KFC.

Olive Steele texted him that she would be home in half an hour.

After waiting in the line with Annie for ten minutes, Alan went back to the car with a fried chicken bucket. At this time, the little guy sat in her seat and asked: "Uncle weirdo, what is a gold digger?"

Olive Steele looked at her daughter amusedly. She wanted to be close to her father, but he just pretended not to care.

Though the soft, little lips touched his face slightly, Alan Hoyle was pleased. He was fully aware of how his daughter thought.

"Okay, let's go home." Olive said with a smile.

They got into the elevator where a young woman with a four-year-old child was in.

Olive smiled faintly as a greeting. She knew the woman was a neighbor, but they were pretty much strangers, because Olive had no time to spend with the people in the neighborhood, and she hated to gossip with them.

While Annie, who followed Olive's parents everywhere in the community, knew many of their neighbors. She gave a sweet smile and greeted, "Auntie Wang."

The woman never moved her eyes away from Alan Hoyle after they entered the elevator, "Oh dear, Olive, is this your boyfriend? He's really handsome!"

Annie was like in her happy land once she arrived home and she asked: "Grandma, where's my puppy?"

Alan Hoyle asked Olive Steele, "You guys have a puppy?"

"In the balcony," Olive then turned to Alan, "Yeah, it's a Chihuahua."

Alan followed Annie to the dog who was all white and was sitting beside the flowerpot.

"You're raising them well." Alan looked at the goldfish and said to Olive's father.

"I do?" Olive's father was happy, "You have goldfish, too?"

And then the two men started to talk about it.

Chloe Malan, who was sitting on the couch to paint her toenail, glanced at the balcony and then turned to Olive who was helping her mother in the kitchen, "Girl, you man can flatter."

"What, you jealous?" Olive smiled.

Olive Steele's parents looked at each other and found compliments in both eyes. As for their views, a wealthy man like Alan Hoyle could be peremptory, but he was able to take the household duties from their daughter willingly and the food he cooked did is delicious, which meant that he was a good husband.

Money was not the only issue for marriage.

Alan was enthusiastic as if he was at his own home, "Bon appetit, everyone!"

Chloe Malan mumbled, "Ass kisser."

While Olive's parents did assume Alan was playing up to them at all. For his status and power, there was no need for him to do such things. He loved their daughter which made these things natural.

"You cook a lot, Alan?" The sense of distance was broken a lot when Olive's father called him Alan.

He smiled to reply, "Kind of. I usually cooked when I was tired of work. It's both an exercise and enjoyment for me."

"So, you mean Olive won't be stuck in the kitchen after the marriage?" Chloe narrowed her eyes slightly.

Almost every ordinary girl married into the rich and powerful family was required to be a housewife, which was a hidden rule.

Back then, she was asked to stay at home to be a housewife as well. That made her useless after the divorce. Without the encouragement and help of her friends, Chloe might never survive that hardship.

Outside, Olive Steele handed the car key to Alan Hoyle, “Drive safe.”

Alan gave her a hug, “Your parents started to accept me. In my opinion, we can get registered tomorrow, what do you say?”

“There’s no hurry for that.” Olive leaned her head against his chest.

“Well, at least I am.” Alan gently caressing her hair, “So that I can stay for the night at your house.”

“Knock it off, you.” Olive twisted his skin in the arm slightly.

“What? I meant sleeping on the couch.” He looked at her blushing face and smiled.

“Asshole.” She punched him in the chest.

“Well, on the couch with you.” Alan took her hand and kissed it, “For real, honey, let’s do it tomorrow, or I don’t feel reassuring even hugging you to sleep at night. Please?”

Olive looked at him, smiling, “But I really can’t. There’s an important meeting tomorrow.”

This kind of interest Aoba Hoyle had on Chloe Malan differed from the impulse that he used to have on the other women. He did not know what it was but just could not resist it.

So twenty-four minutes ago, it was nearly noon, and he could use some company. Yet when he called Chloe, she just told him to find her.

"Track me down if you can." She sounded drunk.

Aoba had no idea where he could find the drunk woman in a city unfamiliar to him, but when he decided to just find a random place for lunch, here she was, puking her stomach out on the side of a trunk.

God knew how much she drank.

He carried her into the car while Chloe just smirked.

"Not in my car, I'm warning you."

His words did not work at all. Two minutes later, she squirted everything left in her stomach on his pants, and together with the smell of alcohol, Aoba almost threw up in his car, too.

Driving back home at maximum speed, he helped her to the bathroom for emptying her stomach before leaving the comatose woman on his bed.

"Ugh."

He then threw his filthy pants into the waste and went to wash.

But three minutes later, the door of the bathroom was opened, and somehow, Chloe staggered in.

Next thing Aoba knew, she started to undress in front of him.

“Hey, wakie wakie. I don’t mind watching your strip dance, but don’t call me an asshole when you’re sober tomorrow.”

But she just kept on what she was doing.

Inside the bathroom, the steam clouded everything...

The Innocent Wife of Scheming President

Chapter 290 I apologize to you.

Look, this was her mother who could do this just for getting much money from her. Money was indeed the root of all evil.

Chloe Malan looked at the woman in front of her coldly. The woman was crying really poorly. The first time she cried so much in front of her, she almost felt softhearted. But now, even if she was accused by the public, even if others threw bottles to her when she was on the stage, she would be tough. The banknotes in her hand were torn off one by one, torn into pieces. She threw them into the air, falling down like snow.

Others were shocked. Aoba Hoyle's angry voice sounded, "How can you be like this? She is your mother anyway."

Chloe Malan watched him walk out from the crowd. He helped up the woman on the ground, and then approached her, as if she had done something heinous. His eyes which she originally felt sexy fixed on her indifferently.

Yes, she and he were not familiar. What happened yesterday was just an accident. Was it possible to expect this stranger to understand her? She smiled, but tears almost came out, "My mother? Is she worthy of being my mother?"

Aoba Hoyle shook his head, seemingly regretful, "It seems I really don't understand you."

She raised her head and said to the woman, "Mom, my dear mother, this is the last time I tell you no matter I have money or no money, I will never give you and my so-called father a penny in the future.
