The Innocent Wife of Scheming President

Chapter 411: The Hoyle's Second Young Lady

“No matter what, I’m happy because it’s arranged by my wife.” To be able to be together every day, watching her smile and having her sleep in his arms every night, for him, it was already very satisfying.

Actually, he knew what his honey wanted to do. He actually had a plan too. He just didn’t say it, intending to give her a little surprise. However, since the little girl was so proactive, he let her make the arrangement. It was also a kind of happiness for him to enjoy it.

His honey was a very honest person, the kind who lived life at ease and wouldn’t pursue those fancy things. But the occasional romantic stuff was an icing for their relationship.

At 4:30, Peng, the driver, was in front of her hotel’s door on time.

After her car accident, Alan had completely confiscated her car key. Even if her hands no longer had problems with strength, he still refused to let her touch the steering wheel.

She knew it was because he was worried about her safety, fearing that the same thing would happen for second time. She didn’t try to show off anymore to not increase his burden.

Regardless of his relaxed appearance in front of others every day, she could actually feel his spirit running at a high speed. He had too many things to consider, and everything needed to be detailed. The scope he had to control was too wide, and everything needed to be alike. He couldn’t make the slightest mistake, otherwise it would be a waste of all his previous efforts.

Such days weren’t a day or two, but for many years, which showed how much pressures he had.

So, one day, after he took a bath, she was blowing his wet hair for him. Then suddenly she found a few white hairs were hidden under his thick black hair. Her heart jerked.

Now, there wasn’t something he wasn’t worried about. Even if she felt that his worry was unnecessary, she would try not to do it and cooperate with him as much as possible.

Although this looked very unfree, she didn’t feel imprisoned. She just needed to wait for those things to be completely over, then she could live with her heart’s content again.

Soon, he said.

She didn’t ask for when. She just wished that everything would be safe.

Olive asked Peng to drive her to the supermarket. Humans couldn’t function properly on an empty stomach. No matter how romantic the date would be, she couldn’t have empty bellies. So, she felt like there was really nothing new about her arrangement.

It was just that when she walked to the fresh food area, the feeling of being peeped once again provoked her sensitivity. The feeling was so strong that she could tell the person was standing not far from her left.

Who was that person?

She pretended not to sense anything, and continued to pick beef seriously. She scanned over the direction of the target, still nothing.

Was that person's alertness too high that they were highly good at pretending to be an ordinary citizen, or was she too paranoid?

This feeling was haunting her entire time at the supermarket. There was obviously something wrong, but the person hid in the crowd like they were wearing an invisible cloak, making her unable to distinguish.

But sometimes, once she competed with something, it meant that she wasn't that easy to give up.

The sun in an early summer had already begun to feel warm. If there was such a person at outdoors, even if a group of people was standing in front of her, she wouldn't feel surprised. But they were at indoors, and the lights in the underground parking lot weren't that bright. It could even be said that it was a little dark. Olive unconsciously raised her hand to cover it, but she couldn't distinguish the direction. All of her surroundings were white, covering her vision.

Their scene had frightened Peng who had just parked his car. He didn't even know how he got out of the car, rushing over.

The blood in the woman's face was completely drained. She thought it couldn't be that bad, right? There would be someone shred her to pieces if something happened to Olive. She immediately closed her eyes and pushed away Olive, then she could only hope for the best. After all, the car was fast, she couldn't win even if she wanted to run.

The sharp rubbing of the tires against the ground stopped abruptly in her ears. The woman even smelled the heat coming from the engine. The car lights had gone out. She was dangerously just three fingers away from it.

It was a false alarm. The woman felt a chill on her back.

The driver poked his head out of the car window and scolded, "Do you want to die? You walk without your eyes open."

The woman patted her chest and smiled awkwardly at the driver.

Peng helped Olive who fell to the ground to stand up. His courage was almost gone. His boss' degree of anxiety towards his wife wasn't like other ordinary couples'.

"Madam, are you okay?"

The woman also ran over and nervously asked, "How are you?"

"I'm fine." Olive patted off the dust on her body. She didn't expect that at the very moment of her death, the woman would push her out of danger. "Who exactly are you?"

Peng had answered her question in surprise, "Second young lady? How could it be you?"

He was too far away from her just now, and he was blocked by cars and pillars, so he didn't see the person who was chasing Olive.

Olive was stunned, "Second young lady."

"Why can't it be me?" The woman rolled her eyes. But since she had been exposed, she couldn't have her fun anymore even if she wanted. She had to put away her naughty temperament and introduced herself in a serious manner, "Hello, sister-in-law. I'm Ada Hoyle. I've heard of you for a long time. Please excuse me if I've offended you in our first meeting."

They stirred up trouble for a long time, but it was just a misunderstanding. Olive wanted to ask what her sister-in-law was playing.

But she saw her clasped her hands again, pleading, "This joke almost got too out of hand just now. Please don't tell my brother, or he'll skin me."

Olive returned the phone to her, still having lingering fears about what happened just now. The way her husband's younger sister appeared was really special.

Her sister-in-law was a really funny person. Her appearance was like a thrilling and unexpected first to speak, “Second young lady she usually like to have ever been tricked by her, what do you think? But, second young lady treats us, workers, to worry about the problem of getting along with her husband’s younger headache. ### Chapter 413: Husband Hoyle's Preach

Between her scream, Olive giggled and ended the call. Good thing that Chloe wasn't by her side, or she would be strangled to death.

She walked into the kitchen humming and put on her apron, looking like a housewife.

Alan, who was at the office at the moment, stared at the unexpected guest who suddenly appeared in front of him. The corners of his lips were slightly raised, "You finally show your face after arriving at Luo City for a long time? Are you done with hide and seek? Has your curiosity satisfied?"

"Brother, you're such a two-faced. You clearly knew I've been following you guys for days, but you're not batting an eyelid. What are you up to?" Ada muttered, making her happy, but it turned out that everything was under his cold eyes. Boring.

Alan shrugged, "Since you like to follow, I let you follow until you have enough. It's not affecting my life with your sister-in-law."

"Emperor Calm," Ada threw him two words, then finally asked, "By the way, did you tell sister-in-law that I was following you guys?"

Otherwise, how could she be caught so easily?

"She already knew that someone was following her without the need for me to tell her. Her alertness is stronger than you think. If you continue to follow, I have no doubt that she can catch you with her cleverness." Alan raised an eyebrow at her with an expression that read 'if-you-don't-believe-you-can-continue-to-try'.

Ada sighed inwardly. There was no need for her to try anymore. She had already been caught.

Alan looked at her disheartened expression. Suspiciously, he said, "Don't tell me the reason you're standing in front of me now is because you've been caught by her."

"No way. You're too underestimating me." Ada bulged her eyes. Her eyes maybe could show off her lies. It would be embarrassing for her if the scene in the parking lot was seriously exposed.

Besides, she couldn't let him know what happened today. Otherwise, when he heard that his woman was almost staged into another panic because of a car, he would directly throw her out of the window of his office.

Before she had ever met with her sister-in-law, she had heard Aoba mentioning on the phone many times that their eldest brother cherished his wife very much, making her current standard for choosing a spouse was almost based on her eldest brother.

However, her sister-in-law, who she had quietly observed for a few days, didn't disappoint her. Ada had initially thought that Olive was a delicate woman who needed to live under the protective wings of a man, but now it looked like when she was being fierce, Ada couldn't tease her too.

This kind of soft woman with hardness was the type she liked.

"I missed you. Can't I come to see you?" As if to dispel his doubts, Ada added another sentence.

"Oh? You can miss me? I really don't expect that," Alan was obviously suspicious of her.

Ada curled her lips, "Of course you don't care. Now that you have Olive who cares about you, how do you still care about my existence?"

"Why? Jealous?" Alan

Her punch was nothing more than an itch that tickled his heart, "I'd like to see what Mrs. Hoyle is up to."

Olive pressed her lips, "Come on, I just want to have a romantic meal with you."

Alan smiled, "Then, Mrs. Hoyle, what have you prepared? I am really hungry after a busy day."

The plates on the table were all covered. He couldn't see what they were, but he knew the dishes were probably very rich.

Olive tilted her head and said, "What does Mr. Hoyle want to eat? Maybe I've prepared it."

"Why are you looking at me like that. Is there anything on my face?"

Olive's eyes moved. She blinked twice, pretending to be cute, "Mr. Hoyle, when did you become a relationship expert?"

Alan smiled, "Kent is smart, but his EQ is really low. He always likes to use his own standards to demand others. That girl is tough and stubborn and has a generation gap with him. Naturally, they would break up."

"Since that girl doesn't like him, he'd better stop pestering her." Although the age gap didn't matter in relationships, there needed to be resonance between two lovers.

"That girl may indeed have fallen in love with him, but it takes time for her to realize that clearly."

The spectators see the chess game better than the players. Sometimes Alan was anxious for Kent.

Sometimes you kept meeting people whom you didn't like, while you would never have the chance to be with the one you liked even though she was around.

Few women could resist Kent's charm. Faced with the many tempting conditions this man brought out, that girl was stubborn and even scolded Kent for being a hollow shell with only money.

There was no scream, but a long exclamation was heard, "Wow! It's so beautiful."

Everything in front of her was like a bizarre world. Olive turned around and jumped on Alan, "Honey, you're just like a treasure chest. You could prepare it for me in advance after it came into my mind? You are awesome."

"It's called lover's hearts are closely linked. We are perfect for each other." Alan held her waist and was glad that his small action could get her a pleasant night.

"Didn't the teacher have a go at you for your bad attitude?"

"Yes." Olive pouted, looking very innocent, "I didn't know what dream meant at that time. All I knew was how to eat, drink and play. The teacher asked us to write "My Dream", but I didn't know what to write. So, I wrote something irrelevant and handed it in. Then I was criticized in front of the whole class and was punished to stand in the corner for an hour. Last year, I even ran into that teacher on the street, but she no longer knew me."

Alan touched her head to comfort her, "My dream at that time was not just a perfunctory composition for a teacher. Since I was young, I understood that my dream was just a dream. It could not become a lifelong career, so I developed it and the racing car I was obsessed with later into a hobby."

"I knew you like car racing, but you never mentioned you like astronomy."

She never thought that he would be a fan of this. From business to astronomy, the span between them was so great. She felt very surprised and realized that she had only a rare understanding of him. Alan seemed to be capable of everything and all-around. Maybe he would give her more surprises in the future.

The moon was a barren place, but the ancients gave it a beautiful and sad myth, which showed the richness of their imagination.

"Honey, there are so many stars in the sky that they can even dazzle people's eyes. Why do you like to observe them?" Although she found them beautiful, she could never develop them into a hobby. It was so profound.

Alan sighed and said, "Every time I stand in front of the universe, I feel that no matter how great a person's achievements are, he will always be so small in front of the vast sky. I like the feeling of being insignificant, which makes me feel I should continue to explore my potential."

"Honey, can I give you a nickname?" Olive turned her head and blinked at him, her eyes glinting in the darkness.

"Huh?"

"Brother Inspiration." Olive didn't hide her joking tone. Perhaps, this was the difference between people. She would only marvel at the beauty of the dazzling starry sky, but would never link it to the truth of life. So, it was not strange that he had achieved what he had.
