Chapter 421 Rock Paper Scissors

Her phone was within easy reach on the coffee table beside the couch.

The ardent kiss made her breath race. She took a deep breath before picking up her phone, "Hello?"

Hearing her low and lazy voice, Chloe shouted On the other side of the phone, "Are you going to fall asleep and miss the meteor shower again? Don't you want to enjoy such a great time with your husband?"

Olive rolled her eyes and complained in her heart. We were enjoying it, but you interrupted us, didn't you?

"Weren't you and Aoba watching the meteor shower at the top of the mountain? Wouldn't it be a waste of your romantic time to call me?"

"I missed you, so I called you. Do you remember when we watched the meteor shower at the beach the year before last, you slept so sound. I couldn't even wake you up. I still haven't figured out if you were really asleep or not. Annie is a child. It's normal that she couldn't be woken up. But you are an adult. Although you're tired from work, you would not be that tired. Did you know beforehand that Ivey prepared a show for you at the time? So you deliberately pretended to be asleep and tried to shy away? Tell me the truth."

"That's why you called in the middle of the night?" Olive felt a headache. This woman was really crazy. on the side was speechless.

When she woke up, what she saw when she opened her eyes was a ray of light coming through the slightly opened curtain, which was reminding her that she had already left the glass room on the roof.

The man slept peacefully next to her. She gently moved his arms around her waist and sat up. When she got out of bed, she leaned over and kissed the corner of his lips. Just then, she was pulled back to the bed.

Alan was awake, but his eyes remained closed. He muttered, "You kissed me secretly?"

His voice was lazy and hoarse, tickling her eardrum.

Olive chuckled and recoiled. Her sleepiness was gone, "No, I kissed you aboveboard."

"Why don't you sleep longer." Alan squinted, reached out, and took the phone by the bedside to check the time, "It's only nine o'clock. Let's go on sleeping."

He was too busy before and was always racing with time. It was really comfortable to sleep with his beloved woman in his arms.

They waked up at one o'clock in the afternoon.

Olive was woken up by hunger. Alan didn't wake her when he got up. She found him in the study who was leaning against the floor-to-ceiling window and talking on the phone.

It was probably Kent on the other end of the line because Alan's tone was relaxed and glib.

"It seems that you had a good night."

"How about having dinner with us tonight?"

"Take your little girlfriend?"

"Of course, then we'll play mahjong and eat with you tonight."

Before Alan could agree, Kent already hung up. He shook his head, turned around, and saw his little wife walking towards him sleepily.

"Don't sleep a little longer?"

"It will be night soon."

"Kent is bringing his girlfriend over for dinner tonight."

"They are really together?" This meteor shower really had the legendary magic charm.

Chapter 424 Who Was Fooled

"I don't know what Microblog is. I am too old to keep up with the trend. All I know is that I have been working in the kitchen for decades and that no mosquitoes can fly into it. I can't figure out where the fly came from. But since it has happened, I won't deny it and pass the buck to others."

He Hua was a straight-forward person, who was already at retirement age, but because he loved his job, he had been reluctant to retire from his position.

Because of his rich experience and rigorous working attitude, Olive was also reluctant to let him go.

"What about you? Manager Wang, what's all about your violent handling?"

Wang Shengsi complained of being wronged, "I didn't do anything violent. I apologized to them in a good manner and wanted to change that dish with a new one. I promised that the meal would be free of charge. The customers agreed. But when I was about to remove that dish, they deliberately reached out and knocked it over. Then they said that I wanted to destroy the evidence. Moreover, the shooting angle in that video is unfavorable for me. So, I can't explain it."

He Hua said, "I have to speak for Manager Wang. Although we always disagree on some things, this time, it is really not his fault. I think those two customers intentionally caused us trouble."

"Then you mean, that fly was brought in by themselves?" Who would be so boring to do such a dirty thing?

"I didn't say that." He Hua said.

"Do we have any information about those two customers?" Olive asked.

Wang Shengsi replied, "No, they left angrily after making a fuss."

"What do you guys think about how to deal with this matter?" Although she knew that this incident would not have a destructive impact on Angel Holiday Hotel, and many netizens took sides with the hotel, the hotel's business would be affected if this matter couldn't be settled properly.

Wang Shengsi said, "Since they spread this matter on Microblog, we will use Angel Holiday Hotel's official Microblog account to clarify it. We'll restore the truth at the time. When this incident happened, they were not the only customers in our hotel. The others are witnesses..."

Olive rubbed her forehead, "It would be great if the truth is so easy to restore. Whether this matter is the negligence of your catering department or a trouble that those two customers deliberately caused, it was a fact that there was a fly in the food. Anyway, it is the responsibility of the hotel and the fault of your work."

"I see." The two men said at the same time.

"I hope that while you are stating clearly what happened, you will also make a deep review of your own work mistakes. And..." Olive looked at He Hua after a brief silence, "I wonder if, after this incident, the kitchen could have an open day every week and make a commitment to our guests about food safety and sanitation."

"This is a very good idea. We are willing to accept the supervision of customers. It's okay even if every day is an open day." He Hua expressed his approval with slight anger. He had worked in the kitchen all his life, and he didn't feel good being questioned. However, he had some concerns, "Should we place limits on the number of visitors? If everyone wants to visit our kitchen, we can't work."

Annie said, "Yes, mommy told me that if someone kisses the frog's little mouth, the frog will become a beautiful little prince."

"Then don't you want to do that?" Ada tempted her to kiss the frog.

Annie curled her lips in disdain, "That's a trick for a three-year-old kid. I'm five years old. Aunt, I won't be fooled by you."

"..." Fine, Ada admitted that She was defeated by this little brat, but she was more and more interested in this kid.

"Annie, let the frog go and wash your hands quickly." At any rate, it was a life. Olive was worried that she would kill it accidentally, so there was a slight sense of sternness in her voice.

"Mommy, can I keep it in grandpa's fish tank?" So she could observe it every day and see if it would give birth to tadpoles.

"No."

"Why?"

Ada felt that if she was asked to answer this question, she would probably say that the frog would eat the fish in the grandpa's tank or the fish would eat the frog.

But Olive didn't answer like that. She said, "This frog lives in nature, and its home is in the lake of this community. If you keep it in grandpa's fish tank, it will lose contact with its parents and siblings. If you were it, and one day you were abducted by bad people and taken away from your mom and dad and grandparents, and you could never see them again, wouldn't you be sad?"

The little girl nodded vigorously, "Yes."

"Should we release the frog then?"

"Okay!" Although she was a little reluctant, she ran out very obediently and put the frog in the grass near the lake. She watched it jump away before running back and washing her hands.

At this moment, the doorbell rang. Kent and his little girlfriend came to eat with them on time.

Kent's little girlfriend was called Janetta Wen, who was shy and polite. She gave Olive a bouquet of white flowers as soon as she walked in. She was a little embarrassed and said, "I don't know what you like. I saw someone selling gardenias on the way. They were very fragrant, so I bought a bunch. I hope you like them."

Chapter 426 Be an Onlooker of Their Happiness

When Olive received the call, she was very busy and wanted to say, can we make it another day?

This unexpected matter caught her off guard. What happened on Microblog made her feel that this was not a simple case of unclean food but a deliberate attempt to get Angel Holiday Hotel into trouble. Otherwise, there would not be so many hired netizens who made this incident a trending topic.

Being in a trending topic was not bad. At least, Angel Holiday Hotel became more famous. Maybe this was a good chance for Angel Holiday Hotel. What she should consider was how to win publicity and the trust of customers for it.

She asked Alan to wait for a while. Alan said, "Okay, take your time."

But after waiting for half an hour, he saw Olive coming with a heavy face.

"Did you hit a snag at work?" He asked.

"That was obvious to you?" Olive didn't think he could see anything from her expression. She adjusted her state in the elevator before she walked out.

"Tell me what happened."

"Something went wrong in the catering department, but it's almost resolved." She was waiting for news from Ivy.

She had a conjecture, but had no complete evidence. Therefore, she couldn't convict that person directly.

"Mom, how can you ignore me." Annie poked her head out between the two seats.

"I'm sorry, baby, Mommy was so busy this afternoon. Sit back." Olive turned her head and kissed her daughter's little cheek. Unexpectedly, she was slightly taken aback when she saw a familiar face.

"Olive, nice to see you." Ada chuckled, remembering the humiliating thing of that day.

Alan held the steering wheel in both hands and introduced, "Ada Hoyle, the craziest one in the Hoyle family. You'd better be careful, in case you would be fooled by her."

Olive smiled, "That proves that she has an obsession in a certain field. I guess she is obsessed with the clothing business at present."

Ada cheered, "Olive, you are awesome. You don't know how mean my brother and Aoba are. They will only discourage me. If you were in the back seat, I would hug you. You understand me."

Alan shook his head, "We only want you to be down-to-earth. You wasted your money again in Paris, didn't you?"

"Yes, but I came back with a few orders, which proves that some people like my work and that of our company's designers," Ada argued.

"I guess what you earn from those orders is not enough to cover the expense of your promotional activities."

What Alan said was true. Ada had no confidence to refute.

"No worries," Ivy said.

Olive smiled, "I gotta go. We have guests. I'll invite you to dinner another day."

She did not hear the man's disappointed sigh.

Back in the dining room, she sat down. Kent kept asking Janetta to marry him, but Janetta didn't want to and kept refusing him. Alan watched them bicker silently.

Janetta was not used to Kent's overly intimate physical contact with her. She was annoyed and glared at him. If they were in her house, she would hit him hard.

This girl was quite tough. Olive thought. Even though that tough look flashed across her eyes, it still exposed her stubbornness.

"Kent, will you stop it?" Janetta gritted her teeth and said. She felt embarrassed. Especially the smiling eyes across the table made her feel uncomfortable.

Kent said with heartache, "I'm very serious. Why don't you believe me?"

Because you are a playboy and there were too many gossips about you. Can any woman who takes love seriously believe you? Olive wanted to interrupt and answer like this.

But Annie said before she could open her mouth, "Uncle Bai, you are so lame."

"Huh?" Kent squinted his eyes. This was not the first time he had seen this child. Last time he had lunch with her father and her. He had been all through with the strange thoughts in her head. They were not in line with her age. "What do you want to say, little brat."

"Uncle Bai, your proposal is really bad. There are flowers and rings in boys' proposals. Boys would get down on one knee and kiss the back of girls' hands. Then they would ask girls, will you marry me? But you're just like a bully landlord who takes away a girl from a good family. Of course Janetta will not marry you."

Annie amused everyone with a look of contempt. Even Janetta couldn't help but laugh.

"This is the last year of my college. After I finish the thesis defense and get my graduation certificate, I can leave school. I originally found a job, but he screwed it up. Then I found other jobs, but I was resigned inexplicably for different reasons after I worked at them for a few days. Janetta was agitated, and her voice was a little higher. Her face was full of anger.

Olive thought for a moment, and asked, "What's your major?"

"Financial Management."

"If you are interested, you can work at our Angel Holiday Hotel. It is recruiting some talents in need."

Janetta froze for a moment, and said in disbelief, "Really?"

Olive smiled softly and said in her heart. Kent, for the sake of you and my husband's long-time friendship, I would keep this girl for you. I didn't despise you, but with the way you pursued her, you would only tame her on the surface. Sooner or later, she would be scared by you and hide from you.

"I won't give you a high position and salary. After all, you are only a graduate with little experience. You need to start from the grassroots level. If you want, you can call me at any time. I don't think Kent dares to threaten Angel Holiday Hotel. Although I am not as strong as him, there is a tiger behind me who would get angry at any time."

Olive's humorous words made Janetta laugh, and her expression relaxed.

"Actually, I never thought that someone like me could meet characters like you and Mr. Hoyle. At that time, when I was pressed hard by him, I said to him helplessly, if you can be as faithful to me as Mr. Hoyle is to Olive, I can be as devoted to you as Olive is to him. And then he actually laughed."

Janetta paused and continued, "At that time, I thought he was laughing at me. From the very beginning, he told me that he didn't believe in love. But he told me that he believed in love again because of your persistence, and then told me that he knew you guys and was your best friend. I didn't believe it at all. He was like a gangster. How can he know people like you? He and you are simply from different worlds. Your life values and attitudes towards love are completely different. At best, he knew you two, but he couldn't be your friend. He saw that I didn't believe him, so he made a bet with me."

Chapter 430 Ada's True Thoughts

"Is she? That's not what she likes to do, and it's a waste of her ability. She didn't even sign a contract with you. Besides, I just adopted Janetta as my sister. For the sake my husband, you should humour me, shouldn't you?"

After hearing this, Janetta was stunned. She was adopted as Olive's sister? Thinking she had heard it wrong, she looked at Olive incredulously.

Olive smiled, and gave her a reassuring look. Kent sensed her calculations and turned to Alan, "Are you going to look on?"

"I think it's a pretty good idea." Alan smiled, and patted his shoulder with his palm. "At least, it's much more relaxing for Janetta to work with my wife than to work with you."

"Are you still my good buddy?" Kent despised him, "What a henpecked man."

It was a shame for men to be called henpecked men. But he didn't think so, "The joy of being a henpecked man is something you can't enjoy now."

Ada wiped her wet hair, walked out of the bathroom barefoot, stood behind her, and said, "Olive, thank you."

Olive looked back at her, smiled and continued making the bed, "No worries, it's just making bed, not a big deal."

"I mean, thank you for giving my brother a happy life. He missed for a year since our father died, and he has never laughed so heartily since he came back. So, whether my mom agrees or not, you and my brother should be together firmly. I will support you." Ada turned to her, sat on the bed and made a cheering gesture to her.

This gesture was of great significance to Olive. Another member of the Hoyle family accepted her from the bottom of her heart. She couldn't help but smile, "If I don't insist on being together with him, your brother's efforts will be in vain, won't it?"

From the moment she made up her mind, she never thought about giving up. Although the road ahead was long, it was not without hope.
