

Chapter 59 The Boss's Daughter

"If I had known that you had bought my life-saving money with your body,I should have died.Lavinia,how can you be so stupid!"

Lavinia and Erik had been sensible since childhood.She worried less about her children as a mother.In addition,she often got sick because of poor family conditions.Judy felt that she owed too much to her children.

When Judy learned that her daughter had sold herself for money and was defiled,Judy was crashed.She sat on the sofa feebly,and her eyes lost their brilliance when she looked at Lavinia.

"Mom,who told you that I traded my body for money?I admit that I broke up with Evans on purpose,but it was because I found true love.I had someone I liked.I borrowed money from him,and I didn't do what Evans said."

Lavinia held Judy in her arms with distress.

Judy was frustrated because of this.Lavinia wished she hadn't left just now.Otherwise,she wouldn't have given Evans an opportunity.

That man,when did he become so annoying and pervasive?

"That's good.I don't want you to suffer from pain like me in the future.Although our days are tough,we make money by ourselves.You still have a brighter future.I only have you and Erik now."

Judy and her daughter cried at home, and Evans was much better than them.

After visiting Judy and going out, he bought a grapefruit in the supermarket, peeled off the grapefruit skin, and rubbed it on his hand several times, thinking that this would dispel bad luck.

Seeing that it was still early, Evans had planned to take half a day off. But after thinking about it, he immediately gave up his thoughts.

He had also worked in the new company for a period of time. Every day, he signed in at the earliest and got off work at the latest. There was no employee who was more progressive than him.

Excellent employees naturally got the attention of the manager. When Evans returned to the company, he met the boss Clark, and he quickly said hello to Clark.

"Mr. Clark.."

The voice was neither humble nor supercilious, which was the only thing Evans learned from Lavinia. He saw that Lavinia had accomplished many things because of this temperament.

And people seemed to be happy about that.

"Evans, I heard from the personnel department that you took time off to visit your elders at home. Are you all right?"

Clark smiled all the time.

"Fortunately, my mother was just discharged from the hospital. Thank you for your concern."

Evans bowed his head. He actually still had some papers to deal with, but Clark didn't seem to end the topic immediately.

"Well, if you have nothing else, I will do the data first. The calculation amount in these two days is a bit large."

Clearly, it was more useful to say more words to please the boss than to figure that data. Evans would rather work hard than flatter Clark. However, the more so, the more appreciated Clark was about Evans.

"Evans, do you have a girlfriend?"

Clark was afraid that he couldn't have another chance to ask Evans if he left right now. It was the first time that Clark asked the employees personal questions. Clark was flushed after asking.

"Don't be kidding. If I had a girlfriend, I wouldn't stay in the company all the time. But I still hope to find a girlfriend and have my own home early."

Evans made no mention of Lavinia. For one thing, they just broke up. And for another, he could not fathom the true purpose of Clark's question.

"Do you really want to find a girlfriend?"

A smile appeared on Clark's face.

"How about I introduce you to a girl? My daughter has never been in love with anyone seriously. She is simple, and I think you are very suitable."

Clark's daughter?

Evans never expected Clark to introduce her daughter to himself. Evans thought that if the niece or something. If Clark's words were true, wouldn't Clark's company be his?

Evans was calm on his face, without revealing secretly pleased, but he had already made plans in his heart.

"You must be kidding. Everyone knows that your daughter is gorgeous and highly cultivated. I don't deserve her, actually. I still should work overtime to contribute to the company."

Clark said so many tempting words. He was not convinced that Evans was unmoved. As a boss, Clark felt frustrated for the first time.

"What I said just now is absolutely true. If you think it's okay, I can arrange for you to meet Kiko. What if you like each other?"

Clark couldn't wait to call Kiko now so as to settle the relationship between them as soon as possible.

Clark had seen many rich young people, but there were too few people like Evans who could bear hardships.

"Thank you, Mr. Clark. I have to go to work first, and I can't drag the project team back."

Evans didn't promise, but he didn't refuse immediately. After he left, Clark immediately called Kiko and said what the conditions were in Evans. Kiko said she could have a meet with Evans.

Since Kiko promised, Clark paid more attention to Evans in the company.

Originally just an ordinary employee, Evans, who was exposed to some basic information, quickly broke the promotion restrictions, and even many secrets that were not disclosed to the public could sometimes be exposed to Evans.

Erik's overtime days were like being pressed the pause button. The company leader suddenly said that he was sympathetic to the special situation in Erik's home. So he stopped letting his company work overtime, but the overtime pay was still received, which was regarded as the welfare given by the company.

Erik didn't feel anything was wrong. He only thought that the welfare treatment given by the company was good, and he thanked the leaders of the company. He couldn't wait to spend the rest of his life here repaying the kindness of the leaders.

Only Chris knew how much relationship and time he had used to get Lavinia back to the villa in the suburbs as soon as possible.

On the first day, when Lavinia's brother was allowed not to work overtime, Lavinia was forcibly picked up by Chris.

Chris was driving at the intersection of a road not far from Lavinia, and gave Lavinia a choice, whether he would pick up Lavinia himself or Lavinia would go downstairs by herself.

After living for so many years, Lavinia had never seen a man more shameless than Chris.

Judy had not yet accepted the existence of Chris, and the man coming up now was undoubtedly adding fuel to the fire and pissing Judy half to death.

After thinking for a long time,Lavinia compromised with Judy and said she would go to school.Only then did Lavinia panic and run to the place designated by Chris to meet him.

"After waiting for so long,I thought I was really going to pick you up upstairs."

Chris extinguished the remaining half cigarette in his hand and let the air pass through the car,which made Lavinia sit in the co-pilot.
