

Irresistible 911

Chapter 911 The Enthusiastic Guard

Crystal's POV:

With the exception of the cars owned by the royal family, all other vehicles had to go through a thorough inspection. Once checked and approved, only then would the cars be allowed to enter the imperial palace. It had been so long since I last stepped foot in these grounds, but right now, I was entering the palace as an Alpha. I had become accustomed to how I was living my life the past few years that it had slipped my mind how strict the palace was when receiving visitors.

I did not apply for approval in advance, so I had to walk to the gate to have my arrival recognized. I slid out of the car, grabbing an umbrella on my way out, and strode towards where the guard was. The rain brought gloom as it poured hard, but I maintained a smile intended for business cracked on my face before I handed the guard my ID card and job certificate.

Chapter 912 Meeting An Old Friend

Crystal's POV:

I still had an hour left before the banquet commenced. But the time I had left diminished after wasting some; my thoughts drifted far during the tour with the guard.

I had never been away for too long before. I began to wonder what the kids were doing right now. Would they eventually find out that I was not there? Would they misbehave when they did find out I was not around? But in fact, I hadn't received any call from the pack, reporting how the kids were. With the absence of the calls, I thought it safe to assume the children were doing just fine and there was simply nothing to report.

I missed the kids so much that I wanted to go back to my room, lock myself there and have a video call with the kids before the banquet. It was decided; I spoke out of turn, interrupting the guard.

Chapter 913 Awkward

Crystal's POV:

"I've heard that the Silver Moon Pack is a place brimming with art and culture. I'll definitely visit it if I ever have the chance," I muttered casually, trying to avoid any awkwardness between us. However, I was terrified that Warren would recognize my voice, so I spoke softly and with pauses. He must certainly feel that I was very arrogant and strange.

The guard next to us was also puzzled. He scratched his head and watched me carefully.

I cleared my throat and asked the guard to leave us, so that Warren and I were alone.

Chapter 914 First Meeting In Five Years

Crystal's POV:

Panic seized me. My first instinct was to hide, but that was dumb. He was here to see me. What was the use of hiding?

Before I could calm down, there was a knock on the door.

I nearly jumped and rushed over to lock the door, but as soon as I turned around, I realized that it was already ajar. Soon, the door was pushed open from the outside.

It was Rufus.

Chapter 915 A Tough She-wolf

Rufus' POV:

I looked coldly at the masked she-wolf in front of me. When faced with my questioning, she was hesitant at the beginning, then guilty, and then later she became sharp-tongued. She was shamed into anger. She was arrogant and held contempt towards royal power. In a word, she looked down on me.

I just wanted to ask her why she didn't come to the imperial capital to pay her respects to me, and she had so many excuses.

The most frustrating thing about it was that every excuse sounded just reasonable, rendering me speechless.

Chapter 916 A Sneak Attack

Crystal's POV:

Rufus struck me suddenly, leaving me with no time to react. Seeing that I almost fell down, his conscience seemed to kick in and he caught me in time.

But as soon as I heaved a sigh of relief, he tossed me to the ground again.

Was he serious?

I was furious. I rubbed my aching back and nearly cursed out.

But my common sense held me back. This man was now the lycan king. I would have to show him some respect.

But this thought aggrieved me. I never had to think this much before telling him off before.

Chapter 917 Stop Loving Her

Sylvia's POV:

As soon as I entered the dormitory, I ran to the window and discreetly take a look at Rufus. He was standing just outside the entrance, smoking a cigarette all by himself.

There was a full moon hanging in the sky tonight. It cast a long shadow behind Rufus as he was bathed in the pale radiance of the moon.

I bit my lips tightly and quickly stepped back, feeling distressed.

"Why are you feeling sorry for him now after you just hurt his feelings on purpose?" Yana didn't hide her dissatisfaction as her voice deepened.

Chapter 918 The Missing Children

Crystal's POV:

At that moment, my heart stopped beating in my chest.

The news almost knocked me out on the spot.

With trembling hands, I picked up my phone clumsily. I couldn't even turn on my phone because my fingers were shaking. When I finally managed to turn the device on, I found that there was no signal. I was so anxious that I wanted to smash the phone on impulse, but soon, I heard a series of beeps from the phone, indicating that its signal had returned to normal.

I quickly unlocked the phone and many missed call notifications popped up.

Chapter 919 Check The Body

Crystal's POV:

After leaving the imperial palace, I went to the place where the group of merchants should have been stayed.

I searched the underground parking lot of the most expensive hotel in the imperial capital thrice, but couldn't spot the vehicle I'd seen in the surveillance video.

I took my phone out and opened the maps app. I retraced the route of the caravan and searched the road inch by inch.

Finally, in a forest near the suburb, I stumbled upon the remains of the car and saw the bloodstains that covered the ground. The surrounding area had been cordoned off, and soldiers were cleaning up the scene.

Chapter 920 Watch The Surveillance Footage

Rufus' POV:

I sent the others away and watched the surveillance footage in the corridor outside Sylvia's ward as I sat alone in the control room.

After hesitating for some time, I finally managed to click on the video.

The video showed Blair knocking on the door and entering the ward not long after I left. About ten seconds later, he closed the door and stayed inside for 25 minutes before leaving.

Omar's eyes widened in realization. He finally knew why I was so gloomy. "W-What the hell... What was Blair doing?"

I didn't say anything.
