"You actually have the guts to talk about being fair? How can a king and a peasant be equal? Isn't the reason that you were able to survive all these years because of the title of Mrs. Lewis? Get a divorce if you dare." Jaydon raised his chin arrogantly and his words were ruthless.

"I will. I'll definitely divorce you when I get the chance," shouted Alita. Deep down, her heart felt bitter.

Jaydon was stunned by Alita's words. Panic and surprise appeared in his green eyes. "What? What did you say? I dare you to repeat yourself."

Alita was also shocked by herself when she lost her cool. She licked her lips, turned her head, and held his hand. "I'm tired. Let me get some rest."

Jaydon wrapped his arms around Alita's waist forcefully. A fierce look appeared in his eyes. "If you say the same thing again. next time. I'll take it for real. By then, I'll throw you out of the Lewis family even if you begged me with tears. Knowing that Alita didn't mean what she said, Jaydon breathed a sigh of relief At the same time, he had to threaten her to prevent her from saying the same thing again.

He wanted this woman to be his for the rest of her life no if he didn't like her anymore.

Alita smiled. "If the day comes, I'll leave without hesitation and never come back."

Tears welled up in Alita's eyes. She sniffed, pushed Jaydon's hand away, and turned on her heels to leave.

In an instant, tears trickled down her face and Janded on the back of her hands. She lifted her dress and quickly headed. upstairs.

Downstairs, Jaydon looked at the woman walking up the stairs. All he could think of was her smile just now and the phrase, "If the day comes, I'll leave without hesitation and never come back "With that thought in mind, his heart ached.

"She has a point. She's free to go wherever she wants. She's a part of me now. Getting rid of her would be like getting rid of piece of me. That's why my heart aches.

After having a shower, Alita changed into some fresh clothes. She then opened the window and went to lie on the bed in white pajamas. She had made up her mind. If Jaydon came to have sex with her, then she wouldn't refuse. But she would prefer it if they just got a good night's rest.

Feeling the cool breeze, Alita felt sleepy and slowly drifted into deep slumber.

A scream woke Alita up from her dreams. The noise seemed to have come from the garden downstairs. Because her window was open, she was able to hear the scream loud and clear. She quickly got out of bed and looked out the window. Vw(w).nOvelW(o)rm.cOm

That was when Alita saw Jaydon leaning against a tree under a streetlamp. He was bent down and covered his legs with his hands. There was also a painful look on his face. This caused Alita's heart to skip a beat. Jaydon, what's wrong?"

"I was just bitten by a snake."

A snake? Alita's heart skipped a beat. The word snake sent a shiver down her back. She then quickly ran down the stairs and headed towards the garden.

"Don't come any closer. Go back inside!" shouted Jaydon. It was dark, so he was scared that the snake was still nearby.

Alita ran over to Jaydon without any hesitation and helped him up. "Let's head inside."
