

Jagged 1711

Chapter 1711

No one dares to underestimate a powerful country with extremely powerful industries. This is especially true when this powerful country is facing a crisis of life and death. Such a powerful country will inevitably explode with extremely powerful combat effectiveness at the last moment. Even if Germany is the most powerful country in the world, it has to deal with it carefully. Otherwise, it will inevitably pay a heavy price.

"Marshal Raeder's concern is understandable. However, we have made complete preparations. In addition to the three army groups A, B, and C, Army Group D is also on standby. If necessary, they will ship to the United States to fight in the shortest possible time. The newly formed group armies can also be sent to the United States to fight. Even, we can once again transfer more troops from other slave countries to the North American continent." Qin Tian said.

Marshal Raeder nodded. If this is the case, then the German army is very well prepared. Army Group D has three armies. In addition, there are 12 group armies in the country on standby. Although 10 of them are newly formed armies, it can be seen from the performance of the 25th and 26th armies on the North American continent that they also have very strong combat effectiveness.

Plus Germany and mainland servants can be mobilized. Then, once the German army's war on the North American continent does not go well, more reinforcements can be dispatched to land on the North American continent in time. The war potential of the US military has basically been tapped. Once they suffer a loss, it will not be so easy to make up for it.

"Marshal Manstein, this battle is also very important to the empire. Therefore, we need to send a competent person to North America. Who do you think is suitable?" Qin Tian asked.

Marshal Manstein couldn't help frowning. Marshal Bromberg, commander of Army Group A, Marshal Guderian, commander of Army Group B, and Marshal Rommel, commander of Army Group C, are all representatives of the Imperial Army. They are all marshal-level people. Plus there's the navy and air force to coordinate. Ordinary people are simply not qualified to subdue them.

"Your Majesty, let me go to North America myself!" Marshal Manstein said.

Marshal Manstein, as the Minister of the Imperial Army and the Chief of the General Staff, is unparalleled in terms of official position, military rank, and seniority. It is undoubtedly the most appropriate for him to personally come forward to command the German Army, Navy and Air Force in North America.

Qin Tian nodded, he also thought so. Now, there is indeed no more suitable candidate than Marshal Manstein.

"Okay, Marshal Manstein, you will be the commander of the North American theater. I hope you will be able to win this time and defeat the greatest enemy of the United States for the empire." Qin Tian said.

"Yes, Your Majesty." Marshal Manstein replied.

"Everyone, although the empire is now at war with the United States and island countries at the same time. However, the United States is the greatest enemy of the empire. As long as we can defeat the United States in one fell swoop on the North American battlefield, then we will be able to win this war. I hope, we can defeat the United States in the shortest time and at the lowest cost. This time, the battle against the United States requires the cooperation of the three armies of the empire." Qin Tian said.

"Yes, Your Majesty!" Everyone replied.

"Everyone, get ready, go to the airport tomorrow, and go to a place with me. There is something that I need to let you take a look at. It can be regarded as a complete peace of mind for you." Qin Tian said.

The three marshals were a little surprised, but they still didn't say anything. They knew that Qin Tian wanted to keep it secret for the time being.

On the second day, Marshal Manstein, Marshal Raeder, Marshal Albert Kesselring, as well as a group of senior generals of the Imperial Army, Navy and Air Force in the country, as well as senior officials of the Imperial Cabinet, a group of dozens of people took five planes The transport plane, protected by a squadron of Luftwaffe TA-152 fighters, took off from Berlin.

The fleet headed south, flew over the European continent, crossed the Mediterranean Sea, and landed at a field airport in central Libya.

When everyone passed through the porthole and saw the yellow sand all over the sky, they couldn't help being stunned.

"Where is this place? Is it the Sahara Desert in Africa? What is His Majesty the Emperor bringing us here for?" Many people have a doubt in their hearts.

After everyone got off the plane, they changed to cars. After traveling tens of kilometers in the desert, they arrived at a camp.

"Your Majesty, where is this?" Marshal Manstein asked the question in everyone's mind.

Qin Tian smiled, and then said to everyone: "This is a secret scientific research institution of the empire. I brought you here today because I want to see their achievements."

Marshal Manstein and a few others immediately knew what it was. In the entire empire, there are only a few people who know that Germany is conducting research in this area.

"Doctor, is everything ready?" Qin Tian asked.

"Your Majesty, you are ready." Dr. Oppenheimer, who is in charge of this scientific research project, said.

"Then, let's start!" Qin Tian said. His time is precious, and it is impossible to stay in this desert for a long time.

"Yes, Your Majesty. Please follow me." Dr. Oppenheimer led the way.

A group of people came to an underground fortification made of reinforced concrete. Through special windows, you can see the outside. The entire underground fortification, the outer layer is reinforced concrete, and the inner layer is also isolated with lead plates.

The staff distributed special anti-radiation glasses to everyone.

"Let's get started!" Dr. Oppenheimer issued an order.

At this moment, more than ten kilometers away from the camp, there is a high platform more than ten meters away. On the high platform, there is a cylindrical metal container.

Suddenly, the metal container burst into dazzling light, as if a sun had erupted here.

Accompanied by a violent explosion, a black cloud like a mushroom shot straight into the sky.

The shock wave spread around, sending sand and rocks flying.

The abandoned locomotives, tanks, armored vehicles and trucks placed around the high platform were all overturned by the shock wave.

In addition, some livestock such as pigs, cattle and sheep were also burned to cinders in the blink of an eye.

Everyone in the underground fortification was shocked by this scene. Even though they were far apart, they could still feel the destructive power of it.

"Oh my God! What exactly have we researched?" Even Dr. Oppenheimer, the project leader, was also shocked.

"This is a weapon capable of destroying a city." Marshal Manstein looked serious.

"This is also a sharp weapon to make the empire invincible." Qin Tian said with a smile.

Chapter 1712

"Your Majesty, this weapon is really terrifying. Even a city can be easily destroyed. If it is on the battlefield, one such weapon is enough to destroy the enemy's 100,000 elite troops, or even more. Marshal Manstein asked excitedly.

The other military generals also blushed with excitement. There is no doubt that this is a weapon that subverts their three views. It can be said that they never thought that there would be such powerful weapons and equipment in the world. As the Kaiser Qin Tian said, after Germany has such a weapon, it is already invincible.

"Your Majesty, no one can defeat the Empire except God!" Imperial Prime Minister Vahit also said.

"Everyone, although the empire has achieved success in this weapon, there is still a long way to go before it can be put into actual combat. First of all, this weapon is still very large. How can it be delivered to the battlefield? In fact, it is a big problem. The weapon needs to be further miniaturized before it can be put on the battlefield. In addition, this weapon is powerful. Not only will it cause huge losses to the enemy on the spot. Moreover, various radiations will last for several Ten years or even longer. Therefore, once such weapons are deployed, a large area will be polluted. Therefore, further research is needed on how to deploy such weapons," Qin Tian said.

"Your Majesty, in other words, we can't count on this kind of weapon in a short time?" Marshal Albert Kesselring asked.

Qin Tian nodded: "The specific situation depends on the progress of the research. If the miniaturization goes well, it may be applied to the battlefield soon. However, no one can say for sure."

Everyone nodded repeatedly. Scientific research is inherently full of uncertainties. If you are lucky, you may soon overcome the problem. And if you are unlucky, it is very normal to be stuck in a certain bottleneck for many years.

"Everyone, I asked everyone to watch the test explosion today to make everyone confident in the future of the empire. It is not to let everyone completely pin their hopes on this weapon. Even without this weapon, the military strength of the empire is still The number one in the world can still defeat other enemies. I hope that the imperial army can win the next battle." Qin Tian said.

"Yes, Your Majesty." Everyone replied.

As Qin Tian said, after learning that the empire possesses such a terrifying weapon. Everyone is full of confidence in the future of Germany. No one can beat Germany except God.

After that, Qin Tian exchanged opinions with Dr. Oppenheimer and the experts he led. Qin Tian's insights on nucleons opened the eyes of these experts and professors who specialize in research in this area. Once again they were conquered by His Majesty's profound knowledge. Some experts even asserted that if His Majesty the Emperor concentrates on research in this area, he must be the most outstanding expert in this field.

However, the knowledge that Qin Tian told them was only the knowledge of later generations. A lot of it is just theory. If you want to turn the theory into reality, you still have to rely on the efforts of these scientists.

In terms of nuclear weapons, the German Empire is already at the forefront of the world. By all means, Germany recruited the world's most famous physicists to collaborate on the project. Even, including some improper means. Many of those who rejected the German Empire are no longer alive. This also makes Germany no country that can catch up in this respect. It can be said that even if other countries learned that Germany possessed such a devastating weapon, it would be too late to start research immediately.

After all, research on nuclear weapons requires not only a large investment of money and financial and material resources, but also the support of outstanding scientists. Now, scientists in this area are either working for Germany or have been killed. The inherent conditions are already insufficient, and even if other countries want to compete with Germany again, it is impossible.

After Germany has nuclear weapons, it can be regarded as truly invincible. Even if the army on the front line had an accident and lost the war. Even if all the German army, navy and air force were defeated in the war, they suffered heavy losses. However, Germany can still use this big killer to defend its own interests. It is impossible for Germany's enemies to fight against Germany before they have weapons that can fight against this big killer.

With the current technological strength, can we have weapons against nuclear weapons? That's just a fool's dream. Don't you see that the American emperors of later generations are constantly conducting anti-missile tests and building anti-missile systems in order to prevent nuclear warheads from falling on their homeland in case of war?

Even the US emperor, who has the highest technological strength in later generations, can't do it. Not to mention that under the existing technological conditions, which country can prevent such a terrifying killer.

Of course, Germany has achieved milestone development in this regard. However, this is nothing more than an explosive device at best. If you want to apply this thing to the battlefield, there is still a very long way to go.

After all, if you want to put a nuclear warhead on the battlefield, you must either use an aircraft to drop it or use a missile. No matter which one it is, nuclear weapons must be miniaturized. Otherwise, it would be impossible for a nuclear explosive device to be stuffed into an aircraft or missile. In that case, naturally it would not be able to threaten the enemy.

In this regard, the German Empire will continue to invest until the moment when the results finally appear.

Of course, in addition to the atomic bomb, there will be subsequent weapons such as the hydrogen bomb, which Germany needs to conduct research on. Compared with the atomic bomb, the power of the hydrogen bomb is more terrifying.

Germany also needs continuous investment and continuous development in this area in order to be able to throw off the people behind. Only in this way can Germany's advantages be ensured.

The next morning, Kaiser Qin Tian and his party left North Africa by plane and returned to Germany. Everyone is in a high position, and there are many things to be busy, so it is naturally impossible to waste too much time in the desert.

However, from the faces of many military and political ministers of the empire, Qin Tian can clearly find that they have more confidence in the future of the empire. This is undoubtedly a great thing for the German Empire.

Chapter 1713

Washington, America.

Although this is not the largest city and economic center in the United States, as a political center, it is also an important city where population gathers. But now, the streets of Washington are deserted.

Many residents living here have fled ahead of time. They fled to the South or West of the United States. Although these Americans don't know whether they will be able to escape. However, in their view, staying as far away from the Germans as possible means being safer.

Of course, this is not a special case in Washington. This is true throughout the Northeastern United States. Under the strategic bombing of the Luftwaffe, many cities were bombed. Not only military facilities such as barracks and airports were destroyed in the German strategic bombing. Even many civilian facilities were destroyed. Civilian casualties were also inevitable. This naturally makes these Americans living in the northeastern United States very worried. They fled the Northeastern United States with their families and fled to a place they thought was safe.

This has also caused great turmoil in American society. It is not an easy task to meet the living needs of those fleeing Americans. The U.S. government, which is preparing for war, had to allocate more food to satisfy those Americans. Otherwise, once resistance is aroused, it will bring greater harm to the United States.

Now the United States has reached the last moment. Whether it is the American people or senior officials of the US government, they are very clear. The German army is about to launch a large-scale attack on the United States. If it is not able to withstand the German attack, then the United States may cease to exist. Therefore, the U.S. government has asked the army to work hard in the next battle.

At 9:00 in the morning, President Roosevelt appeared in the war room of the Army General Staff on time. The senior generals of the army and the army air force have all gathered here at this moment.

Now, President Roosevelt has handed over government affairs to the Secretary of State and the ministers below. His main energy is entirely on military affairs. After all, this is what matters to the United States. If you win, you can say anything. The United States may still be able to sign a decent armistice with Germany and have a future. But if it loses, then the United States will lose everything. Even the country of the United States will cease to exist. As for the American nation, it is even more impossible to survive. The United States is originally a country of immigrants, a country composed of people from all over the world. This also makes this country at a time of crisis, and the nation may have its own choice. Therefore, President Roosevelt absolutely did not want to lose in the war. He is very clear that if he fails, everything will be over.

Although President Roosevelt knew that the German army now has an absolute advantage. The possibility that the United States wants to win the war is very small. But he still didn't give up. Even if there is a little bit of hope, they will not give up. Because only by winning the war can there be a future. If you lose, the consequences will be disastrous.

"Gentlemen, the Germans are frantically increasing their troops to the North American continent. Their intentions are even more obvious. Our northeast, under the indiscriminate bombing of the Germans, has almost become ruins. The cities were destroyed and the people were displaced. The Germans have exhausted all despicable and vicious means to defeat us. Now we have no other choice. We must do our best to fight the Germans. Only In this way, we may have a chance to defeat the Germans. Otherwise, we will lose everything." President Roosevelt said solemnly to the crowd.

The current President Roosevelt already looks very old. Perhaps it was because the war was unfavorable, and the country was at the critical point of life and death, and he was about to exhaust his energy. But even so, President Roosevelt still supported his body and cheered for the generals. He knew that he couldn't fall down now. If even he fell down. Then America is really doomed. Without a leader, the U.S. military would be easily defeated by the Germans. And those politicians will definitely be frightened by the Germans. At that time, the Germans will be able to easily get everything they want. President Roosevelt would never allow that to happen.

The generals of the U.S. military present here nodded again and again. They knew very well what kind of situation the United States is facing now. It can be said that if they don't work hard, they won't have the slightest chance. Moreover, even if you try your best, the chances are very slim. However, President Roosevelt's intention has been very clear, that is to let them do their best to fight for a chance.

For this war, the German army has shown extremely strong combat effectiveness. This also allowed the generals of the U.S. Army and Army Air Corps to fully recognize the terrorist strength of the German army and the strength gap between the two sides. Some generals were unavoidably frightened. Even, there will be other thoughts. However, under the pressure of President Roosevelt's prestige, no one dared to act rashly. Everyone can only follow the orders of President Roosevelt. Unless, President Roosevelt really has something wrong. Otherwise, they would not have dared to betray the American Republic.

"Your Excellency, the Germans have been increasing their troops to the North American continent. Their elite troops will soon reach 3 million. In addition, the German servants are also constantly landing on the North American continent. Our pressure will be very high. Great!" Admiral Marshall said.

President Roosevelt nodded: "It is precisely because of this that we need to fight the Germans desperately. Our weapons and equipment are no worse than the Germans. Our soldiers are also excellent. If you are determined to fight the Germans to the death, I believe in miracles It will happen!" President Roosevelt looked determined.

"Yes, Your Excellency the President." All the generals replied.

"Your Excellency, the Army has deployed 3 million troops in the Northeast. There are another 2 million reinforcements deployed in Washington and surrounding areas, ready to go north for reinforcements at any time. These troops are our most elite main force .We will use these troops to fight the Germans to the death. If we can defeat the Germans, then we have won. Otherwise, we may have no hope." Admiral Marshall said.

Chapter 1714

There are only about five million combat-ready troops in the U.S. Army. Most of these troops were formed before the United States entered the war. The training time is longer and the equipment is more sophisticated. To some extent, although these troops are far from being able to compare with the elite troops of the German army, they can be regarded as having good combat effectiveness.

The rest of the troops were hastily formed later. Combat power is relatively poor. Especially after the German Air Force carried out a strategic bombing of the industrial areas in the Northeast of the United States, the heavy industry in the United States, especially the military industry, suffered a near-destructive blow. They already have a lot of weapons and equipment that cannot be produced anymore. Such as aircraft, tanks, armored vehicles and heavy artillery. In terms of ammunition, it can continue to produce, but the output is not as good as before. Therefore, the war potential of the US military has also been greatly affected. This further widened the gap in strength between the US military and the German army.

The generals of the US military, it is precisely because of these reasons that they think that their chances of winning are not great. But President Roosevelt didn't want to give up just like that, and wanted to fight again. Because President Roosevelt believed that if he went to seek peace with the Germans in this way, the Germans would inevitably treat them as a defeated country and slaughter them arbitrarily. Even, the Germans will not accept their summation, and will stubbornly want to destroy the United States. Only by being able to teach the Germans a lesson on the battlefield and let them know the strength of the United States. Although the United States cannot defeat Germany, it also has the ability to make Germany pay a heavy price. Only in this way can a decent peace be achieved.

Yes, President Roosevelt's goals have been lowered repeatedly. From defeating Germany initially, world * has been downgraded to fighting for a decent peace. In other words, let the United States continue to exist. Rather than perish directly.

Although, it is not easy to achieve this goal, and it will even cost a lot of casualties. But President Roosevelt believes that as long as the goal can be achieved, then everything is worth it. President Roosevelt also hoped that military generals would support him. Therefore, he spent a lot of time convincing them. Fortunately, under his prestige and influence, the generals of the military have unified their thinking and are preparing for a big battle with the Germans. This will be a battle directly related to the fate of the United States.

"Your Excellency, because our factories have been destroyed, the Army Air Corps will not be able to get a single aircraft replacement until new factories are built and put into operation. Now we have two thousand fighters and over a thousand bombers. These Bombers and fighter jets are deployed in areas west and south of Washington. In this battle, the Army Air Force will also do its best to fight the Germans until the last one." Admiral Henry Arnold said.

President Roosevelt nodded: "It is necessary to have such courage and confidence. I believe that we will be able to defeat the Germans in the end."

"God bless the American Republic!" President Roosevelt said loudly.

"God bless the American Republic!" The generals also shouted. As if this can really make God bless them.

However, this actually shows their helplessness. After recognizing the reality and knowing that it is difficult to defeat the Germans, they can only pin their hopes on the blessing of the illusory God.

After the military conference, President Roosevelt returned to the White House. He is not clear about military matters. However, he didn't intend to reach out indiscriminately. He knew that it would only make things worse. It's best to leave it to the professionals. Admiral Marshall and General Henry Arnold were generals trusted by President Roosevelt. He believes that with their professional talents, they can maximize the power of the US military. If even they cannot lead the U.S. military to win this battle, then the U.S. military is completely hopeless.

"Your Excellency, you look very tired, take a break!" said the consultant Hopkins.

President Roosevelt shook his head: "No, our time is very tight now, and we must do our best to prepare for everything. If we are defeated by the Germans, then we will have a long time to rest gone."

Hopkins couldn't help laughing bitterly. Indeed, judging from the current situation, the life of the United States seems to have entered the countdown. Whether the United States can continue to exist depends on the performance of their military in this war.

"Mr. Hopkins, do you think it is possible for us to defeat the Germans?" President Roosevelt asked.

Hopkins wanted to answer immediately without even thinking about it, but was stopped by President Roosevelt.

"Don't fool me with those lies, I want to hear the truth!" President Roosevelt said.

Hopkins was silent for a while, and then said: "Your Excellency, our chances of winning are very low. It can even be said that there is almost no chance of winning. The Germans are too strong, so strong that we have no way to compete with them. And, even if we can defeat the Germans this time. Then, once the Germans are unwilling to fail and send a large army to attack us again, what can we do? If we want to defeat the Germans a second time, it is almost impossible. Anything possible."

President Roosevelt's eyes dimmed, and he knew that Hopkins was telling the truth. In the current United States, the war potential has been greatly weakened. If the German army sends more troops to attack at any cost, the US military has absolutely no hope of winning. Even if you can get away with winning the first victory, you will definitely be defeated next time.

"Mr. Hopkins, I know what you mean. However, we have no way out. If we don't fight once, our country will cease to exist. I don't want to fail like this!" President Roosevelt said.

"Yes, Mr. President, I can understand." Hopkins nodded.

"However, Your Excellency, we must leave a retreat. If the war cannot be won, then the United States can be destroyed. However, the people cannot die!" Hopkins persuaded.

President Roosevelt naturally knew what Hopkins meant.

"Don't worry, Hopkins, I've already considered it. If we fail to defeat the Germans this time, then let's surrender to the Germans. In that case, at least the people can be preserved." President Roosevelt said. Obviously, he has also considered these.

Chapter 1715

Nova Scotia, New Glasgow.

This place has now become the German North American Theater Command. Marshal Manstein, the Minister of War of the Empire and Chief of the General Staff, who also served as the commander of the theater, also arrived there from home and officially took over the command power of the entire theater.

At the same time, Army Group B and Army Group C of the German Army have also arrived in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, ready for battle. Many of Germany's vassal states have also sent large numbers of troops to help in the war. In particular, the Kingdom of England and Wales sent a full ten army groups with two million people.

On April 9, Marshal Manstein held a combat meeting at the headquarters. The commanders of the various army groups of the Imperial Army, the commanders of the various armies, and the commanders of the army groups of the servant armies attended this meeting one after another. You know, the German army and the servant army add up to eight million people. A group army of 200,000 people has a total of forty group armies. Such a huge force is no less than the US Army. In addition to the generals of the army, the marshals and generals of the German Navy, as well as the marshals and generals of the Air Force, also attended this meeting. In this large-scale decisive battle against the United States, the navy and air force must also participate and give full play to their strengths.

Of course, in order to ensure that such a large army fights in North America, the pressure on logistics supplies is also very high. Fortunately, Germany's shipping strength has made great progress over the years. After replacing the British Empire as the maritime hegemony, Germany's maritime strength has continued to rise. After requisitioning a large number of merchant ships, it was enough to ensure the depletion of troops on the North American continent.

"Everyone, after a whole winter of preparations, we have completed pre-war preparations. Now, the Imperial Army has assembled 8 million troops on the North American continent. All the necessary war materials have also been fully prepared. The weather has also improved. So, I decided to launch an attack in three days!" Marshal Manstein said.

All the generals were excited. This time, there were eight million people in the German army and the servant army alone. And the number of US troops will not be less than this. This also means that in this battle, the two sides will invest more than 15 million troops. This is definitely the biggest Armageddon ever. For these generals, being able to participate in such a large-scale decisive battle made them very excited. It can be regarded as a name left in history.

"Everyone, this battle is related to our victory or defeat on the North American continent. Although, with the current strength of the empire, even if it is defeated, it will not let the empire really do anything. However, the imperial army claims to be the best in the world. Since the beginning of the war, every battle must be won! This time is the same. We must defeat the Americans, destroy the United States, and win this great war. At least, in my opinion, we should never lose this battle!" Marshal Manstein said solemnly.

With Germany's current strength, even if this war is lost, it will soon be able to start all over again. However, for these proud German generals, they will never allow failure.

"Yes, Your Excellency Commander!" Everyone replied loudly. It can be heard from their voices that they have great confidence.

After all, in this large-scale decisive battle between the two sides. The German army undoubtedly has a very large advantage. In terms of military strength, although the two sides are comparable. But it is obviously impossible for the Americans to devote all their troops to this battle. They still need to defend the southern region, as well as the east coast, to prevent Germany from launching a landing operation and re-opening the battlefield. The German army's powerful landing combat capability can be described as vividly displayed in this battle. Americans will certainly not be unprepared for this. This is like restraining a considerable part of their troops. As a result, the German army has a considerable advantage in terms of military strength.

In terms of the combat effectiveness of the armies of both sides, the German army also has the advantage. Although the elite German army has only three army groups and three million people. But the Germans were well equipped and their troops well trained. Previous battles have proved that even the most elite troops of the U.S. Army cannot compare with the Germans. Although the fighting power of the German servants is much inferior to that of the German army. But compared with the US military, the gap will not be too big. Even, compared with many US military forces, it is not weak. With the assistance of the elite German troops, it is entirely possible to defeat the U.S. military.

Coupled with the absolute superiority of the German army at sea and in the air. The possibility that the Americans want to come back in this battle will be very small.

Of course, even that. The German army also had to be careful and vigilant. This is fighting on the soil of the United States. If you are not careful, it may cause the ship to capsize in the gutter.

"Everyone, this war is about the life and death of the United States. You don't need to think about it, the Americans will do their best. And for us, the same is true. If we want to end the war, we must defeat the United States, even It is to destroy them. Only in this way can we occupy an absolute advantage in this war and win this war. Therefore, we must also do our best to defeat the Americans in one fell swoop." Marshal Manstein said.

There is no doubt that this war is equivalent to the final battle between Germany and the United States. Although there is another country that is fighting against Germany. But they are nothing to worry about. After solving the United States, the generals of the German army believed that it would be easy to solve the island country. Compared with island countries, the United States is Germany's biggest enemy.

In this decisive battle, the two sides will invest more than 10 million troops. No matter who you are, you have to be very cautious. Otherwise, once something goes wrong, no one can bear the responsibility.

"According to the information we have now, the U.S. military has deployed five million troops throughout the Northeast. Almost all the surviving forces of the U.S. Army Air Corps are gathered here. So, as long as we can defeat the U.S. military in this battle , win. Then, this war is considered to be over. The Americans will no longer be able to save their country. In this war, we will be the final victors." Marshal Manstein said .

It can be said that if the German army can eliminate the main force of the US military in this battle. Then, the outcome of this war will no longer be any surprises. Not even God can save America.

Chapter 1716

"Gentlemen, the combat plan for the U.S. military this time is as follows. Army Group B, together with the 1st and 2nd Army Groups of the Army of England and Wales, will attack Maine from New Brunswick and move along the coast to Push south and hit Washington!" Marshal Manstein ordered.

This journey, in addition to the one million German troops, also included two million people from the Kingdom of England and Wales, a total of three million troops.

"Yes, Your Excellency Commander." Marshal Guderian replied.

"Army Group, through Quebec Province, Canada, entered Vermont and New York State of the United States. Then it crossed the Appalachian Mountains to the south and attacked Washington. The 1st Army Group of the Kingdom of Ukraine, and the 1st Army Group of the Kingdom of Poland, cooperated Army Group B is fighting," Marshal Manstein continued.

"Yes, Your Excellency Commander!" Marshal Bromberg, commander of Army Group A, replied.

The troops along the way are also one million German troops plus two million servants.

"Army Group C, through Ontario, from the south of Toronto, attack Michigan, and other Great Lakes areas. After succeeding, attack south. Cut off the retreat of the US army. Irish 1st Army, Scottish 1st Army, Bohemia The 1st Army, the 2nd Army, and the Finnish 1st Army will cooperate with Army Group C." Marshal Manstein ordered.

"Yes, Your Excellency Commander." Marshal Rommel replied.

The troops along the way include one million German troops plus one million servants. Compared with the other two troops, the force is slightly less. But at the same time, the areas they attacked were areas where the US military's defenses were weak. The British side has always assured the United States that although they surrendered to Germany, they will not participate in this war. This also gave the Americans a false impression, as if the German army would not attack the United States from the Canadian side. The main force of the US military is deployed in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and other places. In the Great Lakes region, there were relatively few troops. If the German Army Group C launches an offensive, it will be very easy to tear through the defenses of the US military there, and then drive straight in and capture several nearby states.

"Everyone, we must win this battle, and we must wipe out the main force of the US military in one fell swoop." Marshal Manstein emphasized.

"Yes, Your Excellency Commander." Everyone replied. They are also full of confidence in the next battle.

"Your Excellency, Commander, both Army Group A and Army Group C need to move westward in Canada and then attack the United States. In this case, I am afraid it will not be possible to keep it secret." Marshal Rommel said.

After all, the United States and Britain were allies before. Even now that Britain has surrendered to Germany. But the United States must have a lot of eyes and ears in the United Kingdom. Once the German army advances westward on a large scale, it will inevitably be known by the US military. At that time, the Americans will definitely mobilize the army to take precautions.

Marshal Manstein nodded: "It is simply unrealistic to hide the Americans. However, now we have an absolute advantage. Even if we fight them openly, we will not be weaker than them at all. It is very easy to defeat them. Even if the Americans know about our deployment, so what?"

Obviously, now that they have an absolute advantage, the German army doesn't have to be afraid that the U.S. military will know their deployment.

Marshal Rommel nodded, and it was indeed the case. The advantage of the German army is already very obvious.

"Your Excellency, Commander, this time we are going through the United Kingdom. Will the British agree? The armistice agreement we signed with the United Kingdom before does not seem to include this clause." Marshal Bromberg said.

In order to keep their own country, the British had to surrender to Germany. However, this does not mean that the British will cooperate with the German army honestly.

"They didn't agree, so we forcibly borrowed it. However, I don't think the British dare to refuse our request. Otherwise, it would be very easy for us to kill them by the way." Marshal Manstein said.

Although, Britain has surrendered. Two signed an armistice. However, in order to defeat the United States in the next war, Germany will of course do everything possible. Then those who hinder Germany from realizing this strategic goal are all enemies of Germany. If the British are ignorant, just find an excuse to tear up the treaty. Who made Germany strong now, and the initiative has always been in the hands of Germany?

Marshal Bromberg nodded, this is undoubtedly a typical example of the jungle. However, from a German perspective, there is nothing wrong with this. This war is related to the victory or defeat of Germany on the North American battlefield. Therefore, the German army must ensure the final victory.

After the meeting, Marshal Manstein flew to Toronto in person and had a meeting with Prime Minister Churchill.

During the meeting, Marshal Manstein did not hide his intentions, and proposed to Prime Minister Churchill and others that the German army would use Canada to attack the United States. Moreover, the follow-up supplies of the German army will also pass through Canada. The roads, railways, and waterways in southern Canada were all used by the German army.

Canada's Foreign Minister David Magson rejected Germany's request. They claim that the original armistice treaty did not include this. In addition, they also worried that the German army would anger the United States through Canada, causing the US military to launch an attack on Canada.

However, the German side expressed a very tough attitude towards the rejection of the Kingdom of Canada.

Marshal Manstein proposed that regardless of whether Canada agrees or not, the German army must use Canada. If the Kingdom of Canada sends troops to stop it, then the Kingdom of Canada will bear the consequences.

Marshal Manstein is threatening the Kingdom of Canada. In this regard, the senior military and political officials of the Kingdom of Canada were very angry and aggrieved. They knew that if the German army wanted to force a way, they would have no way to stop it. Moreover, they did not dare to send troops to stop it. In that case, it will only give Germany more excuses, and even take this opportunity to destroy the Kingdom of Canada in one fell swoop.

In the end, Prime Minister Churchill had to choose to accept the conditions of Germany, allowing the German army to attack the United States through Canada. Prime Minister Churchill was clearly a little further ahead than others thought.

The Kingdom of Canada has surrendered to Germany, which is already parting ways with the United States. If the German army fails to defeat the United States, the Americans will definitely make a comeback. At that time, the Kingdom of Canada will not end well.

Chapter 1717

Under the pressure of the Germans, Prime Minister Churchill and the Royal Government of Canada had to agree to the German army's request. Now that the German army is strong, if they don't agree, once the German army is strong, they will be the ones who will suffer in the end.

However, although the Canadian government has no way to refuse the Germans' arrogance and unreasonable. But they're not that easy to deal with either. That night, the Americans learned through secret channels that the German army would march to the United States through Canada on a large scale.

Strategic Intelligence Director Donovan immediately reported to the U.S. Army General Staff, and at the same time personally rushed to the White House to report the incident to President Roosevelt. Obviously, the German army attacked the United States through Canada, which will have a very large impact on the overall deployment of the US military.

"Your Excellency, the German commander personally threatened Churchill and the Canadian government. If the Canadian government refuses the German army's request, they will send troops to destroy Canada. Therefore, Churchill and the Canadian government have no choice but to agree to the German request. said Donovan.

President Roosevelt's face was very ugly, which is undoubtedly another bad news for the United States and the US military. Perhaps it was because there had been so much bad news these days that President Roosevelt was almost numb.

"Oh! I can understand Prime Minister Churchill and the others. Under the strong coercion of the Germans, they have no choice but to make such a choice. If it were me in that situation, I'm afraid I would have to do it too. Make that choice!" President Roosevelt sighed.

Although, what the British did made him a little angry. But he knew that Prime Minister Churchill and the others had no choice. In order for their country to continue to exist, Prime Minister Churchill and others can only compromise.

"Your Excellency, the Germans launched an offensive through Canada, which will have a great impact on our overall deployment." Donovan said.

Before, the U.S. Army did not think that the German army would use Canada, so it put the main defense direction in Maine. The main forces were also deployed in Maine. But now, the German army launched an offensive through Canada, which made almost the entire northern border of the United States the target of the German army's attack. This is undoubtedly a very big threat to the US military.

President Roosevelt nodded: "Come on, let the chief of staff and the commander of the Army Air Force come to see me!"

"Yes, Your Excellency the President." The secretary immediately went to make a call.

Actually, Admiral Marshall, Admiral Arnold and others knew the seriousness of the matter after learning the news from the Office of Strategic Intelligence. He rushed to the White House without being summoned by President Roosevelt.

Soon, Admiral Marshall and others appeared in President Roosevelt's office.

President Roosevelt was not surprised that they came so quickly. After all, this is already a matter of urgency.

"Gentlemen, I think you already know exactly what happened. The Germans once again surpassed our expectations, directly overwhelmed the Canadian government with powerful force, and agreed to their request, which means that This means that the Germans will attack us through Canadian territory. I am afraid that our defense line will have to continue to expand. Now, do we have any countermeasures?" President Roosevelt asked.

"Your Excellency, our forces in the Great Lakes region and upstate New York are relatively weak. If the German army launches an attack from these areas, it may be difficult for us to resist the German attack. Therefore, we must deploy troops to strengthen the defense against these areas. The defense of the area is the only way. Otherwise, the Germans will easily invade our country." Admiral Marshall said.

President Roosevelt nodded, it is very necessary to deploy troops to strengthen the defense of the Great Lakes region.

"After the deployment of troops, will it affect the defense of Maine? After all, although the Germans will attack us from Canada, they will not give up attacking from Maine." President Roosevelt somewhat Worry.

"Your Excellency, it is inevitable that Maine's defense will decline. However, our main force is still concentrated in Maine. Even if the Germans have assembled elite troops across Maine, they still want to attack Maine. It is not easy to defeat us in Yinzhou. We have dispatched the main army and all the armored forces to the battlefield." Admiral Marshall said.

"That's good. In this battle, we have no way out. Defeating the Germans may win us a decent peace. But if we are defeated by the Germans, our country will surely perish. So , everyone must do their best for the next war. Otherwise, the consequences will be disastrous." President Roosevelt said.

This battle is directly related to the fate of the United States. It can even be said that the future of the United States lies in this battle. President Roosevelt naturally cared very much. If this battle is lost, then the Germans will definitely not let the United States go. At that time, the United States may no longer exist. And this is something that President Roosevelt absolutely does not want to see.

Although, the fact that the United States has fallen into such a field now has an inseparable relationship with Roosevelt. If it weren't for Roosevelt's insistence on going his own way and choosing to use military industry to stimulate industry and get out of the economic crisis. The United States will not be caught in the militaristic and crazy military expansion. The soaring military strength has also made the United States more and more ambitious, wanting to challenge Germany and pull Germany from the throne of world hegemony.

Unfortunately, President Roosevelt and other American leaders, who were blinded by strength, did not realize that although the military strength of the United States expanded rapidly, the same is true that the military strength of the German army grew faster. This also made the United States continue to be defeated in this war. In the end, even the fate of the country was tied to World War I.

"Yes, Your Excellency, we will do our best." Admiral Marshall said solemnly. They all know the importance of this battle. So, everyone has to do their best.

On the morning of April 10, the German army began to enter Canada on a large scale, advancing westward along Canadian railway lines, highways and rivers.

At the same time, the U.S. military also began to deploy troops from the front line to reinforce the Great Lakes region, strengthen the defense forces in these areas, and prepare for German attacks.

Chapter 1718

Maine and New Brunswick are next to each other, and the plains suitable for attacking south of the Appalachian Mountains alone are more than 300 kilometers long. This made the US military have to assemble a huge force in Maine for this reason. Otherwise, the troops would be too scarce, and it would be impossible to establish a solid line of defense on such a long border. Let alone withstood the German attack.

In order to resist the German attack in Maine, the US Army deployed ten armies in Maine. In addition, in order to strengthen the ability of the U.S. military deployed in Maine to operate as a banker, the U.S. Army also deployed 20 of the 61 independent tank battalions in Maine. The power of the US military in this area has been further strengthened.

You must know that the ten group armies deployed by the US military in Maine have 10 armored divisions under their jurisdiction, with more than 3,900 tanks of various types. The independent tank battalions of the US military are equipped with 53 tanks per battalion. 20 battalions is exactly 1,060 tanks. If you add them all up, you already have nearly 5,000 tanks. This is undoubtedly a very powerful armored force.

You must know that the German Army Group B confronting the U.S. Army has only a total of more than 3,000 tanks. The two army groups of England and the Kingdom of Wales are only equipped with a small number of tanks. Moreover, almost all the tanks were retired by the German army.

This makes the German army less than the US military in the number of tanks.

In terms of quality, the U.S. military is naturally aware of the strength of the German Tiger and Leopard tanks. Therefore, the U.S. military deployed heavy armored divisions and heavy independent tank battalions in Maine as much as possible. The M26 tank is probably the only tank that can stand up to the German Tiger and Leopard tanks. Of course, in front of the German "Tiger King" tanks and "Tiger" tanks, the M26 tanks still had to be killed. On the other hand, the performance of the "Black Panther" tank is only slightly more advanced than that of the M26 tank, and the gap is not that big.

The US military's 10 group armies and 20 heavy independent tank battalions are deployed on a defense line as long as 300 kilometers. The five armies of the German Army Group B and the 10 armies of the two army groups of the Army of England and the Kingdom of Wales were also deployed on the defense line. However, the German Army Group B is undoubtedly the main force of the attack. The two army groups of the Army of England and the Kingdom of Wales can also be used for defense. But if it is used to attack, I am afraid it will be powerless. Therefore, their task is to fight with the German army and expand the results of the war after the German army tore through the US defense line. Compared with the elite troops of the US military, the Army of the Kingdom of England and Wales is naturally inferior. But if it is a downwind battle, they are equally capable.

On the morning of April 12, although the German Army Group A and Army Group C were still marching, they had not yet been deployed. However, the German Army Group B will not wait any longer. According to the predetermined plan, they will give priority to attacking. This can hold back the main force of the US military and create favorable conditions for the breakthrough of the other two army groups.

"Boom! Boom! Boom!"

Heavy shelling rang out on this stretch of the St. Croix River south of McAdam. The main force of the German Army Group B is deployed on this line of defense. Despite the obstruction of the St. Croix River, the German army never took this small river with a width of less than 50 meters in many sections into its eyes. The German Army Group B has already made preparations and can launch a river crossing operation at any time.

On the artillery positions of the German army, large-caliber heavy artillery was firing fiercely. 210mm heavy howitzer, 150mm heavy howitzer, 105mm light howitzer, 75mm field gun. Even the 120mm heavy mortars and 80mm medium mortars of the frontline infantry are firing crazily. All the artillerymen are trying to hit the most shells on the heads of the Americans on the other side of the river in the shortest time, destroy the fortifications that these Americans have worked so hard to build, and blow up all the Americans hiding inside. debris.

Although, since last winter, the U.S. military has been building fortifications on the defense line in an attempt to rely on natural rivers and fortifications to resist the German attack. It even caused the German army to bruise and bleed in front of these fortifications, causing heavy losses. However, under the heavy shelling of the German army, their fortifications were rapidly collapsing like sand.

"Boom!"

A 210mm artillery shell hit a section of the U.S. defense line. The fifty-meter-long trench collapsed. The firepower of the two machine guns was also blown into the sky during the explosion.

The defense lines guarded by the two armies of the US 5th Army and the 7th Army became the key targets of the German B Army Group's offensive. Although these two armies were not weak, they were still unable to resist the fierce attacks of the 8th Army, the 3rd Army and the 13th Army under the jurisdiction of the German B Army Group.

"Damn, what about our artillery? Why don't they fight back? Don't they want to wait until we are all killed by the Germans before opening fire?" An American soldier complained very dissatisfied.

"Our artillery is hidden, and we dare not fire at all. Otherwise, the German planes will not let them go." A second lieutenant officer said.

This is undoubtedly a very helpless thing for the US military. Although the artillery strength of the US Army is also very strong, it is not much weaker than the German army. But unfortunately, the Luftwaffe now has air supremacy. When the German artillery fired violently, the Luftwaffe also dispatched a fleet to launch bombings, further destroying the US military fortifications.

Under such circumstances, if the US artillery dared to fire, it would definitely become the target of the Luftwaffe. At that time, their artillery and artillery will suffer heavy losses under the fierce German shelling. Instead of wasting it in vain, it is better to continue to hide. When the Germans attack, fire on them again. In this case, it can also play a greater role.

It's just that when the German infantry launches an attack, the Luftwaffe fleet will definitely appear in the sky, providing air cover for the ground troops. It is almost impossible for the American artillery to cause heavy damage to the active forces of the German army at that time.

The heavy shelling by the German army lasted for a full hour. Under the heavy shelling of the German army, the US military's fortifications were severely damaged. It can be said that more than 80% of the fortifications have been destroyed. The casualties of personnel are also very large.

At 8 o'clock in the morning, Marshal Guderian gave the order to attack. The German 3rd Army, 8th Army and 13th Army immediately launched an attack at three crossing points.

Chapter 1719

A river less than fifty meters wide is nothing. Although the river is a little turbulent because of the melting snow. But for a well-trained army, there is no obstacle at all. If it weren't for the blocking of the Americans on the other side of the river, the German army could easily cross the river. Even German engineers were able to erect pontoon bridges within extreme events.

However, because the bridge on the river was blown up by the US military a long time ago. It is not easy for the heavy equipment of the German army to cross the river. It is necessary to wait until the German engineers have built a solid pontoon bridge before they can cross the river. But the prerequisite is that the German army must establish a solid position on the other side of the river, so that the engineers can build the pontoon bridge without being affected.

The German 3rd Army, 8th Army, and 14th Army all dispatched an infantry division to cross the river at one time. Tens of thousands of German troops struggled across the 50-kilometer-long river. They carried the boat that had been prepared a long time ago and pushed it into the river. Then take the squad as a unit, jump into the boat, and row hard to the other side of the river.

On one's own position, mortars and machine guns are firing, suppressing the US positions on the other side of the river and providing fire cover for the troops crossing the river.

However, it is obviously impossible for the U.S. military to allow the German army to cross the river so easily.

"Get into position quickly, the Germans are starting to cross the river, we can't let them cross the river, otherwise we will die!"

The low-level officers of the US military shouted loudly.

Countless American soldiers raised their heads from the trenches, set up their weapons on the trenches, and prepared to fire. There are also many American soldiers who got out of the anti-gun holes and joined the battle.

Although, the fierce German firepower caused a lot of casualties to the U.S. military. However, the surviving American soldiers are still fighting bravely. The densely packed landing troops on the river made these American officers and soldiers fearful. But as the officer told them, they have no way out now, and if they don't want to die, they have to stop the Germans in the St. Croix River.

"Da da da! Bang! Bang! Bang!"

Various types of light and heavy machine guns of the U.S. military began to fire, and the M1 semi-automatic rifles in the hands of ordinary soldiers also began to fire.

For a while, a dense rain of bullets enveloped the German soldiers who were now crossing the river.

There is no place to hide in the small wooden boat, even lying on the inside of the boat. But the wooden hull will still be penetrated by bullets.

"what!"

The screams kept ringing out, and German soldiers were constantly being hit by bullets.

"Boom! Boom! Boom!"

The mortars on the US military positions also began to fire. One after another, the shells fell like raindrops.

Although the mortar shells are not very powerful, there is no problem in dealing with those small wooden boats.

"Boom!"

A shell hit a wooden German ship. The entire small wooden boat was torn apart by the explosion, and the German soldiers on it suffered heavy losses. After the wooden boat was blown up, the soldiers on board fell directly into the river. Where the water is shallower, there may be a glimmer of life. But where the water is deep, it is doomed. In the case of being fully armed, there is no possibility of escape at all.

On the position behind the U.S. military, the U.S. artillery, which had been silent, also started shelling at this time.

"Fire and hit me hard. Blow up all those * Germans!"

"Boom! Boom! Boom!"

A large number of artillery of the US military began shelling, 203mm heavy howitzers, 155mm heavy howitzers, and 105mm light howitzers fired one after another. Dense shells fell into the German positions like rain. The U.S. military used this method to suppress the firepower of the German army, thereby creating favorable conditions for its own side to resist the German army's landing operations.

The continuous small wooden boats were blown up, and the German army, which was launching the battle to cross the river, suffered a lot of losses.

"Woo!"

The Luftwaffe fleet in the sky will not sit still. They attacked immediately.

A dive bomber dropped a heavy aerial bomb on the artillery position of the US military. immediately. The entire artillery position was shrouded in flames and smoke. Several cannons were blown up in the explosion, and even the barrels were twisted into twists. Many of those artillerymen were blown up and torn to pieces. The rest of the U.S. artillerymen were also frightened, and began to run away.

"Asshole, fire the anti-aircraft fire and shoot down the German plane." The commander of the US military ordered.

The anti-aircraft guns and anti-aircraft machine guns on the US positions began to shoot, trying to shoot down the German aircraft. However, this is undoubtedly very difficult. One after another, German fighter planes began to attack the U.S. artillery positions, destroying the U.S. artillery. At the same time, it also suppressed the firepower on the U.S. defense line, provided support for the troops crossing the river, and covered them to cross the river with relatively small casualties.

The U.S. Army Air Force also scrambled to take off a large number of fighter planes in an attempt to hold down the German Air Force and prevent the German Air Force from attacking the U.S. ground forces.

However, the U.S. Army Air Force's fighter plane was blocked by the German Air Force before it entered the battlefield. After the German air search radar discovered the U.S. fighter planes, they immediately took off a large number of fighter planes to meet them. This made it impossible for the fighter planes of the US Army Air Forces to approach the battlefield at all.

Although it doesn't take much time to cross the river less than 50 meters away. However, the U.S. military seized this opportunity and blocked the river with powerful firepower, causing considerable casualties to the German troops crossing the river.

"Shhhhhh!"

The US military's position was covered by a rain of rockets. Intensive explosions sounded, and the US troops on the defense line suffered heavy losses in the explosions. Many firepower points were destroyed by German rockets.

Hundreds of helicopters flew to the battlefield. These helicopters are both armed helicopters and utility helicopters. Compared with armed helicopters, general-purpose helicopters do not have rocket launchers. But also with aviation machine guns. At the same time, you can also open the hatch and use the heavy machine guns erected there to shoot at the ground.

For a while, German helicopters began to ravage over the heads of the U.S. troops, using aviation machine guns and rockets to destroy these U.S. troops.

"Bazooka launch, kill the German helicopter!"

An American second lieutenant officer ordered.

"Phew!"

A bazooka roared and flew towards an armed helicopter.

The helicopter gunship did not have time to evade and was hit by a rocket on the spot.

"Boom!"

There was an explosion, and the German armed helicopter turned into a pile of fireballs and fell to the ground.

For the German helicopters, the U.S. military is not defenseless. Rocket launchers, anti-aircraft machine guns, etc. are all prepared for these helicopters.

Chapter 1720

The battle was very fierce, and all kinds of weapons on both sides were firing crazily. The dense bullets enveloped the enemy like a violent storm. Every moment someone dies in battle, losing their life.

"Da da da!"

An anti-aircraft machine gun is frantically firing at a general-purpose helicopter of the German army. This anti-aircraft machine gun had been concealed before, and the German army did not expect that there would be a firepower point that could shoot into the air.

Without noticing for a while, the general-purpose helicopter was directly smashed into a honeycomb. The crew members inside were killed on the spot, and the plane lost control and fell directly to the ground, turning into a pile of scrap iron.

Although under the attack of the US anti-aircraft weapons and rocket launchers, the German helicopter units lost a lot. Constantly shot down with helicopters. However, these German helicopters also relied on their powerful firepower to cause heavy losses to the US troops on the ground. Even, they were once suppressed.

And this also won a favorable opportunity for the German army crossing the river.

The river less than 50 meters wide can be rowed quickly. It's just that under the intensive firepower of the US military before, the casualties of the troops were a bit heavy. Now the firepower of the US military was suppressed, and the small wooden boats of the German army rushed to the beach on the other side of the river.

German soldiers jumped from small wooden boats, and some were killed by oncoming machine gun or rifle bullets. But more German soldiers successfully lay down on the beach, using automatic rifles and machine guns in their hands to shoot at the US troops. For a while, the bullets on the beach were as dense as rain.

"Mortar, kill the American heavy machine gun!" A German second lieutenant ordered.

"Boom! Boom!"

Two mortar shells flew out of the barrel in succession, and in the blink of an eye, the shells fell on the firepower point of the heavy machine gun of the US military. The entire firepower point of the heavy machine gun was blown to pieces in the explosion, and the heavy machine gun was even blown into parts.

"Attack!"

After the US firepower was destroyed, the German army immediately launched an offensive.

When more and more German troops crossed the St. Croix River, rushed onto the river beach, and under the cover of fire from their own helicopters, attacked the US positions. As the firepower points of the US military were knocked out one after another, the firepower of the US defense line became weaker and weaker. Under such circumstances, it became very difficult for the US military to resist the German attack. Casualties are also rising. And such a tragic battle was undoubtedly too cruel for the American soldiers who had just stepped onto the battlefield.

German Army Group B has fought on the Russian battlefield for more than a year. Most of the soldiers are veterans who have gone through  battles. Therefore, they are used to such battles. But American soldiers are different. The usual training is not live ammunition. But the current battlefield is completely different. Once hit, it will really kill me.

In such a situation, some weak-willed soldiers were frightened. They turned around and tried to escape. But before he could escape a few steps, he was hit by a stray bullet and fell to the ground.

"Idiot! If you run away at this time, you will only be beaten to death by the Germans." An American officer scolded.

"Attention everyone, don't retreat! Without an order, retreating will be regarded as a deserter and will be sent to a military court!" The US military officer ordered with a serious face.

Although, they all know that it is very difficult to resist the German attack. However, the soldiers are still required to continue to persevere. Even if he sacrificed his own life because of this, he would not hesitate.

Toppersfield, the headquarters of the US Fifth Army. It is only ten kilometers away from the front line. If this command hadn't been hidden in a forest, it might have been torn apart by Luftwaffe fighter planes long ago.

"General, the 43rd Infantry Division and the 44th Infantry Division report that they have suffered heavy losses under the fierce German attack and are about to lose their hold. We request that we send more reinforcements to reinforce them." A major officer Report to Lieutenant General Lucien Truscott, commander of the 5th Army.

Lieutenant General Lucien Truscott frowned tightly.

"Asshole, the Germans' offensive has just begun. After less than an hour, they can't hold on anymore?" Lieutenant General Lucian Truscott cursed.

You must know that after the destruction of the 1st and 2nd Army, and the heavy damage to the 3rd and 4th Army, the 5th Army can already be regarded as the most elite unit of the U.S. Army. But now, the performance of the troops is so unbearable, which makes Lucien Truscott very dissatisfied.

"General, the Germans dispatched a large number of planes and helicopters to attack our positions. Under their suppression, we lost a lot." The officer explained.

"What about the Sixth Army?" Lieutenant General Lucien Truscott asked.

This line of defense is jointly defended by the US 5th Army and the 6th Army. It is precisely because it is speculated that the German army may use this line of defense as a key line of defense for breakthroughs, so the US Army deployed the two most powerful group armies here. I hope they can withstand the German attack on the battlefield in one fell swoop.

"General, the situation on the side of the Sixth Army is not optimistic. However, they have issued an order not to take a step back. The troops on the front line are holding on." The officer said.

"Very well, even the 6th Army has issued an order not to retreat. Then, we also issued an order not to retreat. Front-line troops are not allowed to retreat without receiving the order. Otherwise, military law Deal with it!" Lieutenant General Lucien Truscott ordered.

"Yes, General." The officer replied. At the same time, I mourn in silence for those robes on the front line. Under such circumstances, they must be in danger.

However, although Lieutenant General Lucien Truscott issued a cruel order not to retreat. But at the same time, troops were also deployed to reinforce the front line. He didn't want the troops on the front line to collapse easily. In that case, it would be difficult to explain to the General Staff.

Under strict orders, the U.S. troops on the front line had no choice but to choose to fight to the end. However, under the fierce attack of the German army, the casualties of the US military increased. Many lines of defense have been breached by the German army. A fierce hand-to-hand battle has even broken out.

The entire line of defense was already in jeopardy under the onslaught of the German army. Being broken through is only a matter of time.