

Jagged 824

The core areas of the United Kingdom are undoubtedly England and Wales. As for Scotland and Ireland, they are actually not important. Even if these two places are lost, England and Wales, with a population of 36 million, are still one of the most powerful countries in the world.

In order to prevent England and Wales from rising again and threatening the security and interests of Secondary Germany, Qin Tian must find a way to weaken their strength as much as possible. Otherwise, once a war breaks out between Germany and the United States in the future, the British Isles are very likely to become a time bomb.

Qin Tian hopes to restrain England and Wales by supporting Ireland and Scotland, among other things, to suppress the military strength of England and Wales as much as possible, and at the same time help Ireland and Scotland improve their military strength. The military strength of the two sides is not equal. In this case, if England and Wales want to rise again, it is only a problem to settle Ireland and Scotland.

In this way, Germany can control the entire British Isles at the lowest cost.

"Everyone, although our military operations in the British Isles are not over yet. However, follow-up arrangements can begin. Try to establish three countries in the British Isles before Christmas." Qin Tian said.

"Yes, Your Majesty!" Everyone replied.

The military operations of the German army on the British Isles went very smoothly. When the British army was vulnerable and surrendered one after another, the German army's operations on the British Isles were like an outing. Wherever they went, the British troops voluntarily surrendered one after another, and there were very few British troops who dared to take up arms to resist. Especially after these people were brutally suppressed by the German army and ended up miserable, not many people dared to fight against the German army.

Although the fall of the British Empire was a pain in the heart for many British people, compared to before, it is obvious that their own life is the most important. What's more, the mighty British Empire collapsed under the German attack, let alone weak individuals like them. A clear understanding of the situation is undoubtedly the most important thing!

The German army took control of the entire British Isles less than a month after the Battle of London. As a result, except for the 2nd Army who stayed in the UK, the other three armies began to withdraw from the UK one after another.

The large troops stationed in the UK also put great pressure on the logistics of the Imperial Army. Besides, the troops have been very tired after fighting so many battles. The war was finally over, so it was natural to return to the mainland to rest.

When the German troops withdrew, the German government also began to support forces on the British Isles, preparing for the follow-up arrangements.

On the island of Ireland, Sinn Féin and the Brothers of the Irish Republic join forces to form the Republic of Ireland. Patrick Pierce, leader of the Brothers of the Irish Republic, became the President of the Republic of Ireland, while Griffith, head of the Sinn Féin Party, became the Prime Minister of the Republic of Ireland.

The first thing after the establishment of the Republic of Ireland was to sign the alliance treaty and become a member of the alliance. Moreover, a package of military cooperation agreements was signed with Germany, and Germany supported the establishment of an army of 150,000 people in the Republic of Ireland. This army includes the army, navy and air force. Of course, the army is the main force, with six infantry divisions and two armored brigades. This is already a very large army for a country with a population of just over 4 million. At the request of Germany, in addition to being responsible for the security of the country, half of the Irish army is stationed in Wales and England to assist the German army in maintaining stability here.

The reason why Germany did this was to use the Irish to suppress the British. There are many things that the German army is not suitable to do for the sake of its own image. However, the Irish are perfectly fine with being these guys. For hundreds of years, the Irish have been bullied by the English. Now they are retaliating against the English without any psychological barrier at all.

Subsequently, Scotland also established a republic. With the support of Germany, Charles, a local political task in Scotland, served as the president of the republic. Of course, in fact, the Republic of Scotland is just a younger brother of Germany, and everything is listened to by Germany.

The Republic of Scotland also joined the Allies and vigorously developed its military strength with the support of Germany. Like the Republic of Ireland, they established an army of 150,000, including the army, navy and air force. The main force is still the army, with six infantry divisions and two armored brigades. Half of these troops, stationed in England and Wales, assisted the German Second Army in maintaining law and order in Britain. Otherwise, it would undoubtedly be very difficult for a single legion to control such a huge Britain. After all, the 2nd Army only has more than 200,000 people, while Scotland and Wales add up to 3,600 people! Once caught in a human sea war, the English could easily overwhelm the German 2nd Army.

The remaining England and Wales were the last to form the country. After losing Ireland and Scotland, England and Wales formed the United Kingdom, and the United Kingdom of England and Wales. Queen Victoria's youngest son, Prince Arthur, acts as king.

The sixty-five-year-old Prince Arthur was unlucky. When the royal family evacuated from the UK, the warship he and his wife and children were on was discovered by the German Navy. Originally, they should have been sunk. However, in order to save his life, Prince Arthur ordered the warship to surrender. Just like that, they survived and fell into German hands.

Prince Arthur embraced the role of King of the United Kingdom of England and Wales. Although, as Queen Victoria's son, he did so shamelessly. However, for himself, he was very happy. After all, not everyone has the chance to be king. Originally, it was impossible for him to have such an opportunity in his life. But now that the opportunity is in his hands, why would he give up? What's more, in this way, he can seek a throne for his descendants.

The Prime Minister of the United Kingdom of England and Wales is Andrew Bernard Law of the Conservative Party. After the fall of Britain, not everyone could escape to Canada. There are still many underappreciated people who need a stage for them to display their talents. Even if the enemy provided them with this stage, they would not refuse it. Because they can pretend to be compassionate, and have to cooperate with the enemy for the sake of the British people. In this way, they will still be able to become the high and powerful people. As for patriotism, how much is that thing worth?