"God bless! Your Majesty the Emperor, you are safe and sound, which is really great!" U.S. President Woodrow Wilson beamed with joy.

Although, Karl I looks a lot more embarrassed now, and also looks a little older. But, after all, he survived. This is undoubtedly a great thing for the United States. At least, they can justifiably use the banner of Karl I and provoke trouble behind their backs. In other words, as long as they provide support to Karl I, Karl I will do everything possible to trouble Germany.

"Yes! God bless! Although, God did not bless the Austro-Hungarian Empire and let this great empire fall. But I firmly believe that God will not abandon us. One day, the Austro-Hungarian Empire will be reborn from the ashes. To At that time, we will definitely defeat the Germans and make them pay for what they are doing now!" Karl I said through gritted teeth.

After learning that the Austro-Hungarian Navy was annihilated and Admiral Anton House was also killed in battle, Karl I's anger towards Germany reached its peak. He had never been so angry even when the Austro-Hungarian Empire was overthrown by Germany.

Admiral Anton House was very loyal to Karl I, which also made Karl I attach great importance to Admiral Anton House, and he did not hesitate to fully support Admiral Anton House in developing the navy. And General Anton House did not disappoint him. Now, Admiral Anton Howes died in battle for the Austro-Hungarian Empire. And, he was sent out safely in advance. This moved Karl I very much, and at the same time he hated Germany even more for the death of Admiral Anton House. That's why he swore to kill the entire Hohenzollern royal family.

Of course, that was just a poisonous oath made by King Karl I. Whether it will be successful or not is very difficult to say.

Karl I also knew very well that relying on their own strength alone, it is almost impossible to seek revenge from the German Empire. Therefore, now we can only rely on the strength of the Americans. This is why Karl I didn't even go to see his wife and children after he arrived in the United States, but rushed to the White House immediately to meet President Woodrow Wilson.

"Your Majesty, I completely agree with you. The Austro-Hungarian Empire is a great country, but unfortunately, the Germans destroyed the great Austro-Hungarian Empire with extremely lame excuses. Such behavior is really shameless. I believe that one day the Austro-Hungarian Empire will be re-established!" President Woodrow Wilson said.

"Your Excellency, if the Austro-Hungarian Empire wants to rebuild, there is still a long way to go. I hope that I can get the support of you and the US government." Karl I said.

"Of course, there is no problem at all. The Austro-Hungarian Empire is a friend of the American Republic, and we will fully support you!" President Woodrow Wilson nodded repeatedly.

Supporting the Austro-Hungarian Empire was originally the established policy of the United States. As long as they can hit Germany, no matter what method they use, they are willing to do it.

"Great, Your Excellency. With the support of the United States, we will definitely defeat the Germans one day." Karl I said excitedly.

Now they are poor and white. Although, when escaping from the Austro-Hungarian Empire, some gold and other valuables were kept. But if they want to support their expenses, this amount of money is simply not enough. If it can get the support of the United States, then all problems will be solved. After all, the United States is notoriously rich and powerful.

"Your Majesty, the most important thing now is to form the Austro-Hungarian government-in-exile. Let the people of the Austro-Hungarian Empire know that His Majesty the Emperor is still alive and can continue to lead the people of the Austro-Hungarian Empire to resist the Germans. Let them not forget the Austrian-Hungarian government. The Hungarian Empire," President Wilson said.

Karl I nodded.

The Austro-Hungarian Empire has now been destroyed, and those states have become independent one after another. And Austria was directly annexed by the German Empire. If the Germans completely digested Austria, or if the Austrians accepted a new identity, then the Austro-Hungarian Empire would be over. Therefore, Karl I must find a way to continue to let the people of Austria know that he is still alive and that the Austro-Hungarian Empire will continue to exist. Thus making those supporters of him and the Austro-Hungarian Empire to resist Germany.

"The United States can support His Majesty the Emperor with a sum of money. After all, Germany has become the enemy of all of us." President Wilson said.

"Thank you, Your Excellency. In addition to financial support, we need more support. We hope that the US government can support us in recruiting suitable people among the Americans of Austro-Hungarian descent, and let them go to Europe after training. Go to the Austro-Hungarian Empire and organize the people to fight against the German invasion. In addition, in terms of weapons and equipment, the US government also needs strong support." Karl I said.

President Wilson nodded and agreed to Karl I's request. For the United States, this is nothing at all. If Karl I and their actions can be effective, it will also be very helpful to the United States. At least, the Germans can be caught in a state of desperation, and they will no longer pose much threat to the United States.

On April 21, 1917, Emperor Karl I of Austria-Hungary announced in the United States that the Austro-Hungarian government-in-exile was formally formed. And call on all the people of the Austro-Hungarian Empire to remember the glory of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, take up arms and resist the German invasion. Karl I also called on those states that had become independent from the Austro-Hungarian Empire to reunite and fight against Germany.

It's just that Karl I's influence in the Austro-Hungarian Empire is really not great. Even he was crown prince for a while. However, due to personal ability, not many people in the Austro-Hungarian Empire accepted him.

Now, the Austro-Hungarian Empire no longer exists, which certainly makes many people distressed. However, most people still recognize the reality and know that the Austro-Hungarian Empire is gone forever. It is impossible to reproduce the glory of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Even in Austria, or the eastern province of the German Empire, there are not many people who still think of Karl I. It is even more impossible for them to take up arms to fight against the German Empire, it would be a matter of losing their heads. What's more, what the Germans did in Austria did not harm their interests. Instead, they were trying to improve the living standards of the local people. And this also made the Austrians who opposed Germany continue to decline.
