

Kidnapped and Rejected - The Return of Alpha's Luna

3. Chapter 3

Daran stared at Janet in shock.

For all those time that he searched for her yet in vain, the last thing Daran would expect was to see Janet here in BloodMoon Pack, perfectly safe.

Did she know he was looking for her?

Why didn't she let him know that she was OK?

Harper also couldn't believe her own eyes.

...Janet was alive?

How was this even possible!

Those rogues should have ended her 6 months ago. Her flesh and bones should have rotten underground already.

What on hell was she doing here?!

And she seemed so stunning and noble right now!

Harper's eyes flashed with hate and jealousy.

"Why didn't you let me know you are OK?" Daran suddenly strode forward, his sharp gaze fixed upon Janet. "Where have you been hiding all these times?"

Janet looked back at him coldly, "Why do you still care? You already knew what those rogues would do to me when you refused to save me. Why bother asking now?"

"Refused to save you?"

Daran frowned as though he didn't understand what Janet was talking about.

"What are you talking about?" he asked sullenly. "I paid the ransom for b—"

A hint of panic flickered across Harper's eyes.

She quickly stepped between Janet and Daran with a fake smile on her face, "My beloved sister. It's so nice to see you still alive. Our parents and brothers have been worried about you to sick."

The corner of Janet's lips lifted into a sarcastic smile.

Worried to sick?

She didn't think so.

Based on the way they spoke to those rogues, Janet believed that her parents couldn't be happier to get rid of her!

Seeing that Janet has no response to her words, Harper took Janet's hands in her palms and continued:

"Let me arrange a car to take you home tonight! This is a pack's meeting for all the Alphas. I don't think you are qualified to be here—"

"I'm not qualified?"

Janet let out a light sneer.

She pulled her hands out of Harper's palm and turned to the usher.

"Did you check her invitation?" Janet asked the usher.

The usher bowed and replied humbly, "I checked Alpha Daran's invitation. This lady's name is not on the invitation."

"Then she shouldn't be removed from this hotel." Janet raised a hand beckoning two guards over. "Escort her out."

"Yes!"

Harper widened her eyes in shock as guards came at her.

She couldn't believe this—how could Janet give orders to BloodMoon Pack's guards?

"Wait."

Daran spoke up and stared at those guards sullenly, "Harper is with me. She has every right to be here."

Janet let out a small chuckle, "I don't think the pack meeting allows you to bring a plus-one. Unless the rule has changed?"

The usher replied firmly, "Of course not Miss Janet. The rule clearly states that all irrelevant people should be escorted out."

He turned to those guards and ordered, "Take her out!"

Those guards didn't hesitate at all before they lunged at Harper.

Harper let out a sharp cry and stepped back but were still seized by guards.

Daran snapped his head around and stared at Janet.

Janet had changed so much.

She was now confident and stunning in a very fierce way.

...What happened in the past 6 months?

"If I can't be here—"

Harper suddenly cried out. She tried to break free from guards but failed.

"—then what are you still doing here? You are not on any invitation either."

Janet was about to explain when she heard a deep voice behind her:

"Of course, she does."

Everybody turned around.

A handsome man just made his way down the staircase. He narrowed his eyes into slits and stared at Daran gloomily.

It was Alpha Casper!

Casper kept his hands in his pocket as he approached.

"This year's annual meeting is held by BloodMoon pack. All invitations were sent out by us," Casper said casually and put his hand on Janet's waist. "Now I'm telling you, Janet IS on the damn list."

Harper's face turned pale at once.

Daran glared at Casper's hand on Janet's waist as a nasty feeling rose in him.

How did Janet become acquainted with a great Alpha like Casper?!

Is this why she ignored return his call for the last 6 months?

"Alpha Daran," Casper stared at Daran, "Don't you agree with me?"

Daran pushed down the strong feeling in his chest and said coolly, "Fair enough."

"Alpha!" Harper cried in disbelief.

"I already said this to you before we left home." Daran's attitude remained cold, "that this is a meeting for Alphas and officers. You are neither an officer nor my Luna. I think you better head home today."

Janet raised an eyebrow.

She was surprised to see Daran on her side instead of Harper's.

Harper suddenly let out a trembling cry.

She clenched her chest and breathed heavily, "But Alpha—I've traveled so many hours just to be with you here. You know my body condition...I can't afford another exhausting long trip right now...In fact, I am feeling very dizzy right now..."

She swayed on her spot as though she was going to faint the next second.

"Forget it then."

Janet suddenly said.

She kept her gaze on Harper's pitiful face and revealed a sarcastic smile, "If you must stay, just stay. It's a big day for Casper. I don't want to ruin it with someone's annoying wailing."

Janet turned on her heels and entered the double door.

Casper followed right behind her.

Before the door closed, he added to guards casually, "This is the VIP lounge for BloodMoon Pack's Alpha and his date only. Get our guests somewhere else."

Daran stood on his stop.

He kept staring at Janet's back until she disappeared behind the door.

She seemed very intimate with Casper.

What on earth was their relationship?

Did she go and find another man as soon as their mate-bond was broken?!

"Alpha...?"

Harper grabbed Daran's sleeves and gently shook his arms, "Let's go. That Janet is very rude. How can she treat her sister and former mate like this?"

Daran rubbed the center of his brows.

"Alpha? What are you thinking?"

"I'm just curious..." Daran looked up with a dark look in his eyes. "I paid both of your ransoms at that time. Why did she still accuse me of refusing to save her?"
