

The Alpha King's Heart Epilogue

The End.

A year went by without Ethan, and it was torture for Kate, she had cried thousands of times and she thought her tears would run dry but she was wrong. She didn't know how the love of her life was doing except he was alive thanks to Azriel, she was grateful to have him by her side.

"What did the butler say?"

"He found out where they are holding him and we can go rescue him with a few of my warriors," he informed me and I smiled, going to hug him and he hugged me back.

"Thank you, Azriel," I cried, pulling away from him. I didn't know what I'd do without him and I'll forever be grateful that I ran into him in that bar.

"When are we going?"

"Tomorrow," he informed.

I was restless the whole day, we were waiting for night to come to invade the hunters and the next day, I was at the border of the Diamond pack before everyone arrived.

The journey to Creek Fall town was two hours but most of them had shifted in their wolf form and I rode in the car with Azriel. Kate's heart was thumping in her chest as they neared the town, everything was ready and someone had already made camp for the wolves.

"Who did this?" Kate asked.

"Butler James and Ethan's servants, your guy is quite rich you know," Azriel said.

She exhaled and got out of the car, the butler who never smiled at her once did for the first time and tears ran down her face, since when am I this emotional? She thought. The Butler bowed to her politely, and the other servants did, including the young servant who had a romantic crush on Ethan.

"It's good to see you again, Miss,"

"It's really good to see all of you," She croaked, quickly wiping away the tears from her face.

The butler started briefing them about what was happening, Ethan was alive but suffering at the hands of hunters.

The hunters lived in a village far from town, so, it would be easy to attack them.

"How many are they?" Azriel asked, looking through the print of the area.

"Not more than a two hundred," Butler James answered.

They spent time strategizing, and by the time we were ready to invade, the sun had reached its peak and Kate could do nothing but wait for it to set, however, Azriel led the men. She waited with Ethan's servants, all of them pacing and all she wanted was the sun to go down and join them.

"You love him," the young servant said. Kate looked at her with a smile and nodded. "But you're not human and you're not like the young master either," she continued.

"You're right," Kate's face contorted and her eyes shone red, showing her true form but the young servant didn't react as she expected, instead, she inhaled and wrapped a hand around her waist.

"I hate that he chose you but thank you for loving him truly, the young master is different good since you came into his life," she said sincerely.

"Thank you too for caring for him,"

The sun went down and Kate ran to the location, but no one was fighting, however, there was blood and dead bodies on the ground.

Azriel was talking to a large man with multiple tribal tattoos on his body.

"We just want you to release him to us and we'll leave, however, if you can't, more of your people will die," Azriel said in a calm tone. Kate stood beside the alpha male and the leader of the hunters gasped, glaring at her.

"Bloodsucker in my presence!" he hissed. Azriel stepped forward, making the man take a step back.

"We are discussing Ethan West, one of your men brought him here a year ago, and we are here for him," he growled.

"He killed our people we can't release him," The man was adamant.

"Your men attacked us!" Kate barked.

They discussed for a long time and it was clear that he was wavering as he didn't want more of his people to die, he was good, really good but Azriel had the upper hand.

"Fine, but you all leave our territory and this town for good," the man said.

"We were not going to stay," Azriel retorted.

Two large men who had the same features as the hunter leader went back to a room and minutes later, they dragged out Ethan, and Kate choked on a sob. He was battered and barely breathing. They threw him at their feet and Kate knelt in front of him.

"Ethan, my love," She cupped his face and inspected his body. He had lost weight too, so much.

Ethan opened his eyes for a second, "Kate," he breathed before they closed again. Azriel's men carried him back to the campsite where they got him in the car and took him back to his mansion. Ethan had been in a coma for a week now, and Kate stayed by his side during that time. There was a knock on the

"Ma'am, we are going to bed now, do you need anything?" A servant asked,

"No, thank you," she said with a smile, going to lie next to Ethan in bed. Kate wondered if he will ever wake up, he was breathing but was motionless.

She was crying silently when she felt him move and wrapped his arms around her. A smile formed on her lips when he kissed her neck. She turned around to face him and there he was, awake and looking devilishly handsome.

"You're awake," she whispered, Ethan smiled weakly, wiping away the tears from her face.

"You came for me," he said softly.

"I always will," she answered. Kate was still touching him, unable to believe that he was fully healed and color has returned to his skin. He was a strong wolf indeed.

"Thank you," Ethan said.

Kate smiled and kissed his delicious lips. They were amazing against hers.

"I heard you, Kate... Everything you wanted for us, our future," She blushed a little and kissed his lips again.

"I meant every word. I want to be with you in all ways, marry you," she confessed. "No more finding I'm gone when you wake up... I want to be the first person you see every morning,"

" I'd love that very much. I love you," he said, caressing her delicate pale skin.

" I love you so much, Ethan," The two shared a tender kiss, Ethan was the first to pull away.

" We should leave this place, what do you think?" his voice was a whisper.

" I don't care where we go as long as you're there with me," she admitted. Kate fell madly in love with this man and would do anything for him.

" Italy, Venice. I have businesses and a house overlooking the beach, you'll love it and we can do something about the windows to make them comfortable for you," he said and she nodded.

They stayed in each other's embrace, confessing words of love and speaking about their future. Finally, sunshine knocked on their lives.

The end