

Alpha's Blind Luna Online Free

Chapter 12

I could see the anger rise through his face as he clenched his fists on the desk. Our eyes locked as I leaned against the desk. Shaking my head, I tore my eyes away and paced back into the office.

"Fix it, Dad."

"She's been a rogue before, Vale. Auri will be fine."

I stopped and looked at him. "And fine is good enough for you? For your mate?"

"Vale, stop. Let it go. I'm glad you're here. I'm glad you're spending time with your mom. But you shouldn't be on territory without permission."

Barking out a laugh, I crossed my arms over my chest. "I don't need permission to cross the territory.)

"You do. When you come into an Alpha's territory »

Naresh stepped forward before I could stop him. "They should be so grateful that their Alpha King has decided to grace them with our presence. We need no permission. All packs, are our packs. While you may not have come to that conclusion during your reign, we know our place. It's time you learned yours

Dad stood up and laughed. I was lucky that Naresh had control because I laughed so hard, I snorted. Tears came to my eyes as I could see my mom's smirk when she said wait and see. I didn't realize just how much weight he would have gained. It looked ridiculous. He looked like he had a beer belly. One that rivaled some of my mom's photos of when she was pregnant with me or TVr.

Naresh, though, was stoic. He was assessing whether my dad was going to be a threat. While he might not look like it, he was still an Alpha and we weren't in the best shape, as proved earlier by my mom.

"You dare speak like that to your father?"

"You, are not my father. You are Vale's father. We are the Alpha King. We aren't some rogue and you don't get to dictate what we do or where we go. You can warn his brother of that as well. I will not tolerate disrespect. Vale might have inherited the patience of our mom, but I didn't."

The room got quiet as he let a sliver of our power fill the room. I could see my father battle against it before his neck bared to us. Naresh turned and opened the door. He looked back for a moment.

"You will fix this. Unless you want to lose her, you will fix it."

Naresh slammed the door shut and walked down the hallway. Collin was chatting with Hector and the both of them froze as they felt walk toward them. Immediately, Collin bared his neck but Hector looked at me, confused. He nodded quickly to Collin and strode over to me

"Naresh?"

We nodded and he sighed. "Come on. I'll drive you back. I don't want someone mistaking you for your mom."

Naresh followed after him, still refusing to give up control. I didn't mind. He was overprotective of the people he considered family. His family pool was much smaller than who I considered family. Tyr and Dad weren't included in his family tree. My sisters were his sisters, my mom was his, Grandpa was his. Some of my friends would also consider friends but we were still two very different souls. We valued different things in the people we held close.

"Naresh, do you mind cranking down the power?"

Naresh chuckled and I felt him pull back some of his anger, as well as power. I saw Hector take a breath and smile. He pulled out of the pack house and headed down the road

"I'm assuming the talk didn't go great with Logan?"

"He was the one that removed her, not Tyr."

Hector shrugged. "To me, they are one in the same. Whether or not it was Logan or Tyr, it happened. They made the decision and now, they are going to come to regret it. Sooner or later."

"Do you know what it was about? What my mom refused to submit to?" Naresh was a curious as he was.

He was quiet for a moment before he nodded. "I do. It's... something your mom had dealt with before. Something she thought she got rid of when she wiped out the Blood Hunter coven." Running a hand through his hair, he chuckled nervously. "When your mom first found out, I thought a hurricane had come through. It had been a while since I had seen her that angry. The captains tried to stop her but she laid them out in minutes."

"That was three months ago?"

"No, it's been a few years. A few months ago is when she found out that Tyr and Logan were some of..." His knuckles turned white as he gripped the steering wheel. "It's like he's forgotten everything in the past. Like he just doesn't care about the pain we were put through over the years. It's frustrating but your mom moved to the house out there when she found their connection."

Naresh stepped back and allowed me to take the reins. I leaned forward, putting my elbows on my knees and burying my face in my hands. "I feel like I failed her. How did I not know any of this was happening? She was always all smiles. Giving me the rumor mill or talking about her garden. I prattled on about books I was reading, meanwhile she's been fighting this battle

Losing this battle for her own home."

Hector's hand rubbed my back. "In this case, it doesn't end here. Your mom gave up ground here, lost the battle, because she intends on winning the war. It's going to cross your lap soon, Vale. It's already been something the High Council has been actively working on."

"That's why you keep saying don't take action."

"They all assume you know or that you're hereto take them on. Especially since you are so closeto Auri. I would be surprised if they don't try andmake a move against her in the next week or so."

My brow furrowed and I turned my head to lookover to him."What?"

"Just..make sure she is safe while we can'tprotect her." Sighing, he stopped the Jeep and llooked out over to road. I realized this was theedge of the territory."I can't cross it." There wasan anger and an edge in his voice.

I nodded and got out, slamming the Jeep doorshut. Hector got out as well and walked aroundto the front of the Jeep. He smiled and pulled meinto a hug again. This one though, felt like theones my mom would give me. The safe, protective hugs.

"Give your mom a break. She is dealing with thisthe best she can and we aren't spring chickensanymore." He chuckled and rubbed my back."We are glad you are here.Not to fix this, just thatAuriisn't as alone anymore. Let her treat youand make sure you train extra hard."

"You guys are planning something, aren't you?Lucy said you were playing the long game."

Hector smiled but shook his head."Don't getmad at her too much.Okay?" Letting me go, hewalked back to the Jeep and hopped in.I waved ashe backed up and turned the car around. Lookingback at the road, I shoved my hands in mypockets and walked

Ilf it's something the High Council knows aboutalready, it means it's serious.' Naresh mused Suddenly, the whole situation with my mateseems like child's plav. They have been dealingwith this on the back end while I've beenmucking about in a castle reading books

Naresh shook his head.'Like he said, when thetime comes, I'm sure we will be looped in.I'mjust as mad but we need to trust them. Because ifwe can't trust them, then who can we trust?

My nose wrinkled and I sighed.'You're right.Ihate it but vou are

We need to get stronger. We need to be betterVale.

Be a better fighter and a better king.

How about a better mate?' My mom's voice filtered in through the mind link and I looked up her arms crossed over her chest as she leaned against the railing on the porch

Chuckling, I shook my head. 'Apparently, a mate is the least of my worries right now.

It's the only one you can control.

I walked up the porch stairs and sat down on the bench that looked out over the clearing and her garden "He has a Luna. Whether or not he is mated, that fact doesn't change. Not to mention he's an Alpha." I looked at my mom, she was now perched on white railing, her legs swinging between the bars

So?

"I've always pictured having a family, Mom Having a Luna by my side and having kids running around. Being able to have a family like we were. I can't do that with him

Why not?'

I threw up my hands and leaned back in the bench. "Ezekiel is a man! I can't have a family with a man!"

Yelping, I put my hand to my face. My mom had beamed me in the forehead with one of her bracers. It stung for a second but she threw it so hard I was pretty sure it was going to bruise. Her mouth was turned down and I could see her chewing on her tongue. She was pissed

Vale, what does family mean to you?'

I sighed, rubbing my forehead. "What do you mean? You are my family. Dad, Tyr, Syf, Freya You guys are all my family."

Grandpa would be furious if he was here

"Well, Grandpa is Grandpa. I mean he was always Hector would also be upset to hear you say that.

"Well, of course

Hector

Then Bryan might cry a little. Lucy also always considered you her older brother too

"They are."

I guess Jax and AJ.

I growled. "I get it, Mom! I get it!"

Do you, Vale? Your family isn't just your blood. I consider Hector and Bryan as family. Jax and AJ are my sons as much as you and Tyr are. Same with Lucy and your sisters. You don't have to conceive them to consider them your children. Or blood related to consider them family. I taught you better than that.

I looked down at the floor. You could tell it had recently been painted to the blue-grey color but it looked good against the white of the railing and the white walls of the house. Clasp my hands together, I dared to look at my mom. Her anger was gone and she looked at me with a soft smile

'He will be your mate unless you reject one another. If you so choose, he will be your family. You might not have kids the traditional way but that doesn't mean there aren't options, Vale

"I'm not gay." I whispered. She snorted. 'You weren't having any issues from what I heard this morning.

My face went red and I tried to throw her bracer back at her but she caught it. Sliding it back on her arm, she hopped down from the railing and knelt in front of me. She took my hands in hers, her grey eyes looking up at mine.

'Keep an open mind, sweetheart. Don't be so quick to write him off. The moon goddess doesn't make mistakes. She gives us exactly what we need. Not what we want.'