Chapter 17

Naresh and I lapsed onto silence for a minute or two before I hauled up the bag of potatoes. She didn't specify what she wanted so I would just bring the bag back in. When I went out, Danger was in the middle of the burnt pile with a shovel

"Mom, you didn't call him all the way out here to roast your pig, did you?"

The smile she showed me told me that's exactly what she did. Danger though, seemed all too eager to be helping her out with this. She placed the potatoes in the ground and then Danger helped prep the pig in his trunk before they put it in the smoldering pile. Between the two of them; they finished in just under an hour

He came in for a slice of cake but headed out soon after, saying that his mate had such a tight leash on him, he started to yell their safe word every time she wouldn't let him go. I realized, at that moment, all my mom's friends were as shameless as she was. She asked him to come by later when it was done cooking and he said he would text her later if he could or couldn't.

Mom made some tea and as she was placing the tea bags into the cups, I walked behind her and hugged her.

"I'm sorry, Mom. You are right. I need to trust you. It's just frustrating watching you fight this when I don't even know what's going on."

Right now, it's not your fight. It might be later on, but for now, I want you to focus on becoming better. Growing your power both mind and body are all part of it. I will train you as best I can but at some point, I will have to let you go. I just want to prepare you as much as I can

I placed my chin on her head and nodded so she could feel it. Patting my arm, she picked up the cups. 'For now though, we are going to train your body for partial shifting. It's going to be frustrating but I promise, you will get it down.

"I can partially shift already. My hands turn into claws."

'When you're angry?'

I blushed stepped away from her

'That's what I thought. You need to do it at anytime. Not just your claws, hands or feet. Your entire body needs to be able to shift. Every single part

She carried the cups into the living room and set them on the coffee table, moving the books to the side. Sitting down on the couch, she crossed her legs to face the other side. Following her, I sat on the couch opposite of her but I couldn't cross my legs on the seat. So I opted for a partial cross with my left leg down on the ground

Comfy?'

"Yeah. I'm good."

'Now, watch me

I kept my eyes on her as I watched a rippled flow through her body. It was like a wave of wolf started at her head and flowed down her body. She never changed or shifted, it was just as though that six inches of wave that moved up and down her body was the only part that shifted. My eyes widened and I gasped. The only time I had seen her do that was when she dodged away from Grandpa but it was always a body shift. This was incredible.

"How...how did you...."

She shrugged smirking. 'Mediation gets boring after a while. Before you get there though, we are going to start with the basics.

"Which are?"

I watched as ears popped up on her head through her hair. Mom smiled as she moved her ears around on her head. 'I want you to shift your ears.

Suddenly, my excitement dropped. "Ears, Mom? Really?"

Yes, really. I started with the tail and getting used to something coming out of your butt is an experience. You either want to get used to the feeling on your head first or from your mate. You decide

I groaned. "Fine. How do I...?"

Close your eyes, the same way we imagine our bodies shifting into our wolf forms. Except instead of imaging a full shift, just image yourself shifting your ears

Closing my eyes and thinking of the feeling when I shift, I felt my full body start to shift and before I realized it, I was sitting on the couch as a wolf. My mom laughed and shook her head Try again.

I shifted back and sighed. Focusing again, I fought against the feeling of a full shift for longer but it ended up the same. I fully shifted Again.

For the next two hours, my mom patiently sat with me. It took me forty-five minutes to not shift when I thought about shifting. It took me another hour to be able to shift just my ears. As soon as they would appear though, my excitement made me lose my concentration and they would disappear. My mom had me focus on drinking tea and having them stay on my head at the same time

I want you to keep them on your head at all times, unless you are asleep. Got it?

I nodded, taking a sip of tea while twitching my right ear. She also had her ears up. Leaning forward, I rubbed her ears. They were so soft. I reached up and rubbed mine. They felt the same just the size of my ears were much larger

"Will you keep yours up?"

'What kind of trainer would I be if I didn't train with you, sweetheart? If I expect it of you, I should expect it of myself as well, yes?'

Chuckling, I shook my head. It did make me feel better that she was doing the same thing I was proving that it could be done. Her hadn't even wavered. I watched her ears twitch for a second and then she stood up

Sounds like they finally decided to show up

My brow furrowed as I watched her go to the front door and head out to the porch. Standing up, I groaned as I felt my ears disappear. Closing my eyes, I refocused, taking a breath. I reached up and touched my head, feeling the ears there. Mom was standing on the porch, leaning against the railing facing two black SUV's that pulled up to the house.

There were a few people I knew out of the group piling out of the cars. A couple of the captains I knew, as well as my dad, Tyr, Collin, and John, his Beta, were among them. I realized the whole crew was here and I wondered who was protecting the pack if everyone was piled into the SUVs.

I stood next to Mom and rested my arm on her shoulder. "It's good to see everyone. I'm glad you finally showed up." Holding up my wrist and looking at the invisible watch, I looked back over the group. "You're about ten hours too late to fight the fire. I appreciate the initiative in bringing the whole crew out though." Sarcasm dripped from my words.

"What are you doing here, Vale?"

I looked at my brother, the person I looked up to almost as much as my dad. His black hair was slicked back with the same full beard that my dad was sporting. My eyes fell to the beer belly he was sporting that couldn't be hidden behind the designer button-up shirt. The buttons looked like they were having a rough time and my mind pictured his wolf. Naresh wheezed at me initial image that popped up and I smirked

"You realized that I'm your family, right? I haven't seen you in five years." I narrowed my eyes. "Am I not allowed to visit my family?"

I felt my mom grab my arm and squeeze it. I patted her hand though. We were in full control but it didn't mean I couldn't feel angry or hurt over how they were treating us

"Not without telling me, no. You being on my territory, means I need to know."

My mom scoffed, signing, "You've made it perfectly clear this place, isn't on your territory."

"You have to go through my territory to get to it if you drive. So yes, mother, I do need to know. I don't want some fucking rogues dancing around my borders."

I growled. "Excuse me? Rogues? Did you just fucking call me a rogue, Tyr?"

His Beta, who I already disliked with a passion since we were kids, laughed. "A werewolf with no pack, is a rogue. That makes you, a rogue. Just like your mom."

Throwing Naresh forward, I tried to hold back the power from erupting from me

"I don't have a pack because all packs, are my packs. I'll have you remember that, Beta. I am not a rogue. I am a king. One that could easily decide that your head, no longer needed to be attached to your body. For insulting me and my mom)

Naresh turned to my dad. "What the hell are you doing? Letting them talk to your mate like that? You've had four kids and gone through hell and back but here you are standing silent. What the hell are you doing?"

'Naresh, Vale, stop. Please. I told you it was going to get ugly. Don't give them more of a reason Naresh looked down at my mom. Her grey eyes shining back at me with anger and determination. It wasn't that she was taking it meekly. She taking it so they couldn't find an excuse to do more damage. Taking a deep breath, Naresh stepped back

"Vale, you aren't welcome in my territory."

I chuckled. "That's too bad, for you, of course. Cause you answer to me, not the other way around."

"You gonna pull that bullshit that your the fucking Alpha King at me? I'm your older brother, the Alpha of this pack. You can't come on my territory without my permission. I won't have you fucking with." Tyr stopped mid-sentence as Hector's Jeep pulled up next to the house. ①

My mom walked around me and down the porch, away from the group but towards the Jeep. I followed her down but kept my eyes on my brother. The whole group looked dumbstruck that they just got completely ignored. Hector jumped out but it was Bryan who got to her first. He took her by the shoulders, looked her over, spun her around, checked her back and spun her around again. Giving her a pat down, he pulled her into a tight hug

"We only just heard what happened. Everyone okay? The fire didn't reach the house this time, did it? You're not hurt, right?" He rapid fired questions at her but she just smiled and shook her head

Hector came over next, hip-checking Bryan out of the way. He gathered her up in his arms and held her tight. "I'm glad you're okay. I would have had to kill someone if you weren't." He glared back at the group just standing on the grass

Hector let go of my mom and pulled me into a hug. "We didn't mean to ignore you, Vale. You good? No serious damage?"

I laughed. "We are fine. A little bummed. I had actually grown attached to gardening in the morning. Mom was really sad but no injuries. Starting to wonder why my mom is choosing to still stay here." Shooting a glare at the group who were still standing there like idiots

Lucy, AJ and Jax hopped out of the back. "Glad you guys are okay!" Lucy threw her arms around me and I heard a growl from the group of people. Her head snapped to them. "I've already rejected you. You don't get to growl at shit."

To prove her point, she placed both hands on my cheeks and pulled me down, kissing me on the lips. My eyes went wide and I pulled her back. Tyr's Beta, John, jumped forward. Shifting as he did so, he got about two-thirds of the way before I watched my mom kick him in the side and his body went flying about 20 yards to the right of us.

Her hands came up and she signed. "Don't fucking threaten my family, Beta."

Bryan and Hector cracked up and turned back to me. Jax and AJ came over and shook hands with me but I pulled each one in for a hug.

"You look good. We missed you. Five years is damn long time to be gone. Lucy should have asked before kissing you, but got yourself a mate yet?"
