Chapter 18

Suddenly, Lucy's face went red. "I'm sorry, Vale! I didn't even think you would have a mate!"

My mom, Hector and Bryan snickered as Lucy turned even more red

"I didn't mean. I just. I'm sorry!"

I laughed. "Lucy, it's fine. Currently, I'm not attached to anyone. Though, maybe check with the person before you use them as revenge on your ex-mate, yeah?"

She nodded sheepishly.

"You guys captains now? When I left, you guys were applying."

AJ rolled his eyes. "Turns out, you need to be a fat fuck to be a captain now." He shot a glare back at the group we were completely ignoring. Jax elbowed him. "We decided freelance was more our thing. Your mom here hooked us up with the deluxe mercenary package. So we've been working for the guild for five years now."

"Shit! Congrats you guys. I've worked with more than a few mercenaries in the past five years. Maybe there will be an opportunity."

"Hopefully really soon." Jax wagged his eyebrows but I watched as my mom kicked him in the back of the knees and he stumbled forward, cursing as he went down. My mom continued walking behind him to give Lucy a hug Shaking my head, I couldn't help but smile. This was what my family had grown into now. I thought, at the very least, Dad would be a part of it too. I looked over at him but his eyes weren't looking at us. They were on Tyr, who was livid.

"What the hell is your guys' problem? Cause you see your Alpha is standing right here?"

Bryan chuckled and put an arm around me. "But your king is here. Have some respect, pup. He might be your younger brother, but he's still the king."

"My liege." Jax and AJ said together, bowing

I rolled my eyes. "Do that again and you'll find your toot up your ass. And all I have to do is ask nicely."

They laughed and I chuckled with them. I caught my mom's smile as she hugged Hector from the side, his arm draped over her protectively.

"I'm sad your garden is gone, Luna. It was beautiful." AJ squeezed her shoulder

My mom smiled sadly and nodded

"She's not your Luna! She's a rogue! She's a fucking rogue and she has no protection!"

All at once, the anger I felt came bursting forward and I felt my eyes glow golden. The dam broke and the power rushed out. Slowly, I walked towards the group. Every single one of them were on their knees, their heads bowed to the floor

"You're just as much to blame at making Mom a rogue as Dad is." I reached down and pulled Tvi up by his shirt. "You actually kicked your own mother, who fought to protect you from when you were in her womb to now, out of her pack. You thought the woman who was the previous Alpha King, the Luna Queen, who brought balance and civility back into our race, who rebuilt the council to do better and be better... you thought this woman deserves to be kicked out of the pack she nurtured for you? Tell me Tyr, use your words."

His face screwed up in pain and I knew he was trying to fight the command but even holding him up, he was baring his neck to me. His voice was quiet and mumbling.

"Speak up, Tyr. Mom taught you better than to mumble."

"She does for embarrassing me! For challenging my authority! It's my pack! I decide what we do! She got in my way, more than once and I got tired of it! So I had Dad break the bond with the pack. She's a rogue. Yet, she still stays in this fucking house like people still want her here."

"Who set fire to the garden, Tyr?"

He whimpered. "John. John set fire to the house before and then the garden. Next week he was going to do the house if she still didn't leave."

I laughed. The echo of the deep Alpha King tone filtered through the clearing. I turned him around to look at the smoldering pile. "You know what our mother decided to do? She's roasting a pig in there. Hawaiian style, wrapped in giant banana leaves. One of her friends brought it over. That's what she thinks of your little fucking warning."

I turned him back around and pulled him close so his face was less than a foot from my face. "Let me be crystal clear. If anyone, whether it be your pack, rogues, vampires, witches, fey.... anyone Tyr, comes for our mother while I am here, know that I will remove your Alpha title so quickly that you won't even be able to say fuck fast enough. The pack will be passed to Lucy and all your pups will be turned out as rogues. Do you understand me?"

"Yes."

I growled. "Yes what, Tyr?"

"Yes, Alpha King."

"I never wanted this for us, Tyr. I wanted to come back. In control and be happy as a family like we used to. That's what I wanted. I rarely ever pull this shit out. But brother, you pushed me so far over the edge right now, it's a miracle you're still alive." I took a deep breath. "Take your boys and fucking leave. I don't want to see you again unless you come to apologize for your awful behavior. For disrespecting your mother, disrespecting your legacy, and your pack. It's fucking deplorable."

As soon as I let him go, he scrambled away. His groupies, including his Beta who had finally recovered from Mom's kick, raced past me. Dad stood but he seemed to shuffle in place for a moment. He walked up and looked me in the eyes. I saw the deep blue and my eyes widened. "Cato?"

"I don't have time. Give this to mate." He placed a note in my hand discreetly. His hand came up though and brushed my cheek. "It's good to see you, pup. You have grown into a good man and a wonderful king. I'm sorry there isn't more I can do."

Cato stepped back and I watched as he turned, walking back to the SUV's that were waiting. For a moment, my dad shook his head and he looked back at us, his light blue eyes looking at us. He jumped in the car and I glared at them as they drove away, leaving a cloud of dust behind them

"Vale. That's enough." My mom's voice was an order

I turned to her. Her arms were crossed over her chest. Next to her, everyone was on their knees, heads bowed. Cursing, I reigned in my anger and power

"Sorry."

My mom came over and put her hand on my shoulder, squeezing. "As humiliating as it is having my son fight for my dignity, thank you."

"I love you, Mom. I couldn't just stand by and watch these guys talk to you like you weren't a pillar in this pack."

She turned and walked back to the group as they recovered. Mom must have signed something because I heard AJ and Jax high five

"Yay! Party at Mrs. Everfell's!" Lucy called out and I chuckled.

"You coming, Vale?" Bryan called back, they were all going inside the house

I nodded and turned to follow them into the house. Everyone started mulling about the kitchen as my mom flittered around. She was getting everyone drinks, snacks, as well as starting on food to go with the pig. Smiling, I leaned against the counter

"Vale. why..." Lucy's hand came up and brushed my head

I felt her hand brush my ears and the smile grew on my face. They had stayed even in the middle of all that bullshit. I wasn't even thinking about it. My mouth opened but a moan left it instead of the explanation I was readying. She was rubbing my ears between her fingers and my eyes fluttered shut. Involuntarily, I tilted my head towards her as I felt my knees go weak "Let the poor man go, Lucy. It's rude. You already kissed him today." AJ snickered from behind

She laughed and let go. "But he's so soft!"

As soon as she let go, I righted myself. Blinking a few times, my brain finally straightened out and I blushed

"Sorry. I didn't realize."

Everyone started to laugh

"I'm training. Mom is teaching me how to partial shift. This was the first step."

Hector, who was standing next to Mom as she chopped different ingredients, smiled and brought his hands up to her ears as well. She stopped chopping as he rubbed them. Her reaction was nowhere near as severe as mine. Her ears started to move, dodging his fingers as he tried to grab them

"You!"

He leaned over and my eyes widened in horror as his mouth clamped down on her ear. My mom only elbowed him in the stomach, making him let go. I looked over at Bryan who was watching them, munching on a chip. A smirk played on his face and I looked back over to my mom.

"Does that mean you're going to have a tail sticking out tomorrow? I'll come by to see that." Jax laughed, throwing an arm around my shoulder

I shook my head but my mom was nodding and I sighed. "I guess so."

My mom pointed to AJ and Jax who just high five-ed each other: "Anyone who shows up tomorrow, gets the same training."

Suddenly, their excitement dropped and Lucy started to laugh. "I'll brave training to see these two grow tails out their butts

Smiling, I put my hand in my pocket and I gasped. Walking over to Mom, I handed her the note. She took it and felt it.

"Cato handed it to me. I think he did it without Dad knowing. He said he didn't have a lot of time and asked that I give that to you. I didn't read it."

Her eyes narrowed and she pointed to Bryan, then to the cutting board. He grunted but she left the kitchen and I listened as she went up the stairs. Once the door to her room closed, Bryan stood up and pushed Hector out of the way.

"How long are you planning on staying, Vale?" Jax dipped a chip in the ranch that was set out. "We were delayed coming back and so we missed a few weeks."

"Probably for at least a month. Maybe a little more depending on training. I'm starting to think maybe I should have put off going to the High Council a few years. There is still so much I can learn Hector came over and patted me on the shoulder "I think the High Council did some good for you. You're much more mature, more secure in yourself now. You've grown and it shows."

I flashed him a smile. "Thanks. I would agree but then my mom kicks my ass every time I step outside."

"Your mom kicks everyone's ass in a fight. It's not just you." Jax sounded like he had first hand experience.

"Did you guys train with her?"

AJ laughed. "Did? We do train with her. Hector, Jax and I still train with her regularly. It's gotten harder since we aren't technically allowed off the territory but we weren't rule followers to begin with."

Suddenly, the sound of shattering glass burst through the conversation and everyone's eyes widened.

Hector started to walk out of the kitchen, his voice shaking. "Auri?"
