

Alpha's Blind Luna Online Free

Chapter 19

Chapter 19

Hector got to her door first and threw it open. I could hear the lock break as it hit the wall. Right behind him, I surveyed the room. My mom was standing, chest heaving, golden eyes lit up and her full-length mirror shattered under her. Her hand was sporting shards of glass and blood as it held the crumpled piece of paper. She was shaking but the look on her face was angry more than upset

"Mom?"

Her eyes found mine and suddenly, I was brought to my knees. Behind me, I felt Bryan grab me so I didn't fall to the ground.

"Auri." Hector walked into the room, his hands up. "You're bleeding."

Shaking her head, she brushed past him and disappeared into the closet. She came out a few minutes later, wearing body armor, her hair pulled up and completely suited up with weapons.

Bryan took a deep breath. "You aren't going onto the territory, Auri. You can't. They will attack because they would know you are coming! They can feel you!"

Her hands came up quickly. "I don't care." She signed it over and over again as she walked out.

of the door, shouldering past us

"Auri! Fuck! Stop!" Bryan tried to grab her but again she signed 'I don't care'

"Is this about Astra?"

She froze at Hector's question halfway down the stairs

"Auri, if it is, I'll go with you. If I can help, I'll go challenge with you. But you need to revoke youi

Her eyes were wide as she turned to face Hector. He stepped forward down the steps, stopping one step above where she froze.

"I've had to stay here, this whole time, because of that damn challenge. I'm not Gamma anymore. I'm not anything to anyone except to you. Only to you. So you need to revoke it. I'll go with you. We can catch them off guard with two rogues coming in."

"Hector, what the hell?" Bryan called out to him. "The day Auri beat my ass. The day Logan came back from vacation with Leandra and Zachary. Years and years ago. I challenged Auri because I wanted to leave the pack with her. She refused."

"Obviously. I would have too. We needed you." I looked at Bryan and then back at Hector, confusion written on my face.

Hector chuckled. "Sure. I got to continue to fulfill my duties as Gamma when she came back. Got to help her raise these little pups and protect them." Hector glanced back at me. "I got to be an uncle. But now, I have nothing left. An Alpha who had lost his way, his son who has deluded himself into thinking he can take on the world and win. And a Luna, who I swore to protect, but now isn't even a part of the pack anymore. Set me free, Auri. Set me free so I can help."

Her stare was long and hard. A multitude of emotions crossing her face.

Vale.

'Yes, Mom?'

Break his connection to the pack please.

My eyes widened. 'Mom!'

She turned her head slightly and smiled. "It's what he wants. I can't speak anymore. I can't revoke the challenge. But you can. You can break his connection to the pack. It won't break his vow but it will remove it."

I rubbed my face. My eyes watched my mom as her grey eyes stared at Hector, seeing so much more than I would ever be able to understand. There was always something between them Bryan would always be considered my mom's best friend. It was clear to see that and they said as much. With Hector, I had a feeling their relationship was far more complicated, even if she always replied he was family.

Finally, I sighed. "Fine! Fine fine fine fine." With each word, my voice went quieter

I walked up to Hector and put my hand on his head. Closing my eyes and opening them again, my eyes shone bright. "I'm going to need an explanation after this."

Feeling for the pack link was like when you open up a bomb and there was eight million different wires and you needed to find the one that's related to the pack. It wasn't a fun process and luckily I had only needed to do it one other time. But that made it harder to locate the exact link I needed. If I chose wrong, I could end up removing his wolf instead of his connection to the pack. After a moment, I was able to find his link and I took a breath.

"I, Alpha King Vale, break your bond to Alpha Tyr and the Harvest Moon pack." I imagined breaking it in half and suddenly, Hector started to fall. He was breathing heavy and I grabbed his arm. "Steady there."

"Why?" His voice was small

I smiled and looked at my mom. "She can't revoke it when she doesn't have a mind link with you, Hector. She can't speak out loud either. This was the only way."

"Thank you, Vale." He nodded to me and straightened. "Alright then. Let's go." "You aren't going without me." I said as I followed Hector and my mom down the stairs

"You can't go, Vale. You would be seen as attacking as the Alpha King and on behalf of the High Council." Bryan put his hand on my shoulder, stopping me from following them

The two of them were looking at each other, conversing thought mind line now that they were both rogues until Hector burst into his wolf form. The two of them took off out of the house and headed straight across the clearing into the forest. I looked back at Bryan

"This is about the High Council, isn't it?"

He cleared his throat. "Partly, yes. It's more than just that though, more than just them."

Bryan patted my shoulder as he walked past me back into the kitchen. Lucy, Jax and AJ were now filling up the stools at the kitchen island. Bryan went behind the counter and picked up where my mom had stopped.

"The High Council, whether it be the new one or the old one, doesn't have a lot of supporters right now." AJ reached over and took some of the chips Bryan was setting out. "Frankly, the peace that we have been having for years has been on a knife's edge this whole time. Or, rather, it was built on the back of your mom and dad."

Lucy leaned back and stretched. "Right, but they need to give the new council a chance. The poor saps haven't had any time to do anything. I mean, ten years seems like a long time but most of that time has been cleaning up a mess that was never theirs)

"People don't have that kind of patience." Bryan added. "For humans and werewolves, even witches, ten years is a long time. Vampires and Fey, not so much."

"So what is it that they want to accomplish? Overthrow the High Council all together? Just fend for ourselves? I don't understand." I asked, my brows furrowing.

My arms crossed my chest as I leaned against the kitchen wall. Looking at all four of them, it was Bryan who rubbed the back of his neck and sighed.

"I don't think Tyr or Logan haven't thought past dethroning the High Council." Bryan took a deep breath and looked me straight in the eyes. "Dethroning you."

My face fell. "Dethroning me? How am I supposed to be dethroned when I don't even have a fucking throne? I don't even have a pack! How are they supposed to dethrone me? Kill me? It's a gene! Dad should know that already."

"Your dad is in it for the High Council. That much I know for sure. He was mad when Auri and Morgan helped pick out new council members even though he's been named as someone who helped. It was his vote that we should all just fend for ourselves. Focus on those who were close by and make alliances with them."

"That only works if you're close to anyone! Or if you don't have people who hate you! Or you have someone like Mom that they fear."

Jax chuckled. "Exactly. Which is why Auri trumped them. There is an acknowledgement that there was an issue before. It's why there were limitations on how long one councilor could sit in that position. So that you didn't have centuries being dictated by one member."

"Who gains anything from this? That it just becomes a free for all? No one would be accountable to a higher power outside of their own gods. What will that do for everyone?"

The room went quiet with my questions. Lucy tapped her foot against the chair. "Freedom to destroy the world."

Bryan shook his head and turned, throwing some of the vegetables he just cut into a pan. AJ and Jax fought over a specific chip in the bowl before it broke. I closed my eyes and rubbed my forehead. How had I not heard of this the whole time I was at the High Council? How was this happening, not just in general but in my home pack?

My eyes snapped open when I felt a hand on my shoulder. AJ was smiling at me, shaking his head. "It will work out. We've been working on it, fighting the issues that come up. Jax and I have been working directly with Morgan. Your mom is working with the High Council."

"How did I not know of any of this? How did you guys not say anything? Mom? Grandpa? This all just has been going on for years and no one knows?"

AJ shook his head. "No. A lot of people know that being a good and bad thing."

Jax nodded. "Your mom has been doing her best to keep you out of it."

"What?" I roared. "Why the hell...?"

"Calm down, Vale." Bryan snapped, cutting me off. "You really think at sixteen you were ready to take on your family? The brother you just fought with? No knowledge or confidence in who you were? You think you could have made a reasonable decision against them?"

I stood up from leaning against the wall. "I would have liked to know this was going on! I be young but I am still the Alpha King." may

"We know, Vale. But are you ready to put your brother and father to death for conspiracy against the High Council and the Alpha King?" Lucy looked at me and I know she caught my flinch. "I didn't think so."

"There are other hands behind the scenes." Jax was chewing on a carrot. "One's pushing to eradicate any higher power. It's not just your dad and Tyr. Not just Harvest Moon."

Bryan nodded, pulling out different packages of cheese from the fridge. "That's mostly been what Auri has been working on. Who is pulling the strings in the shadows. Who is riling up everyone? Because it's happening separately with all races. Fey against witches, witches against vampires, werewolves against vampires, vampires against every one. It's a mess out there but it's hushed because your mom still roams all the areas. No one wants to bring the wrath of The Huntress, the High Council, and the other races. Everyone is waiting for someone else to make the first move

"Hell, we think someone might be behind the change in Tyr and Mr. Everfell. We can't prove it but there has been some weird indications that this isn't all of their doing." AJ looked at me as my eyes widened

"If someone is messing with pack, specifically my family's pack, should I be the first one to know? The High Council already knows. The Guild already knows. How am I supposed to help if I don't even know what's going on?" ①

"Right now, your help isn't what we need. What we need is for you to stay out of everything so that someone can't use you as a spark. That's why your mom is so adamant about you not taking action." Lucy was the one who replied the time

Bryan came over and ruffled my hair as he walked by and into the pantry. "We don't mean to push you out, kiddo. We just have been walking on thin ice. It's a bit of a precarious position. When we are saying we are playing the long game, that means you need to have patience as well."

"What's this long game you are talking about? I keep hearing it but no one explains it to me!" My tone was irritated but I was frustrated more than anything. Being out of the loop meant more than just me not being able to help. It meant that they didn't trust me with the information

Lucy was looking at her dad but when he didn't say anything, she threw up her hands. "We are planning on leaving the pack and making a new one "

My eyes widened. I looked at all of their faces but

AJ, Jax, and Bryan didn't look up. It was only Lucy, who was glaring at them

"A new pack? Who would lead it?" Bryan mumbled. "Auri, until." "Until?"

Lucy shook her head and she turned, looking me straight in the eyes. "Until you had your mate and you took it over, Vale. We are building your pack. Your royal pack."

Alpha's Blind Luna Online Free

Chapter 20

Chapter 20

"Lucy, don't say it like that. We are going to build a pack and ask nicely when the time comes." AJ laughed, leaning back on the stool he sat down on My eyes stared at Lucy as she held my gaze. I was trying to rationalize what I just heard. The thought had crossed my mind that I would eventually like to have my own pack. Staying at the castle for the rest of my life wasn't necessarily appealing to me, I didn't really know how to begin. Really, I had thought I would start with my Luna and work our way through the world. Maybe picking up some of the good apples amongst the rogues and building from there

Usually, the king would take over his family's pack but I refused since I didn't want to take away anything from Tyr. That left me packless for the first time in recorded history. Alpha King Odin did have a pack but chose to leave it.

Though, he did end up building a new pack from what I knew of the genealogy book. I just hadn't really nailed down the specifics.

Now, I was being told a pack was being built for me. One that I could take over, one that I could trust and help build up. It was actually a weight off my shoulders but at the same time, I had not been looped into this plan. My brow furrowed and I looked down, breaking the stare down I was having with Lucy. My hand came up and I rubbed my eyes

What made it even more complicated is that I had met my mate. But it wasn't a Luna, but an Alpha. An Alpha who ran his own pack, had his own Luna, and apparently his own set of issues according to Pipsqueak

We need to talk to him. Like what mom said Odin should have done. Sit down and have an adult conversation with him.' Naresh added

You're right. Can I trust you not to jump him like Odin did if we do?'

He chuckled. 'No promises if he doesn't have a shirt on.

I cracked a smile and shook my head. The kitchen had stayed quiet and I realized they were probably waiting for me to say something. My hand came up and rubbed my neck before rubbing my shoulder

"I guess I should be grateful that I don't have to start from scratch."

I looked up at all of them and Lucy, with AJ and Jax, smirked. Bryan, though, was eyeing me suspiciously before restarting his work. "We are still working through the plans of it, so don't begrudge me the vet."

"And don't tell your mom we told you. She would kill us." Jax winced

"Her and Morgan have been working on this so long and we are finally so close." AJ chuckled. "If she knew we told you she would murder us all and then start again."

Lucy pointed to my head. "Your ears are gone. Just as a heads up."

Cursing, I closed my eyes and pictured them on my head. Reaching up, I felt them through my hair again and sighed. "I blame you guys."

"It's good practice!"

After an hour, I started to pace. They should have been back by now. The longer it took, the more likely they got caught and thrown in the aungeons. Or worse. When it hit two hours, is when my pacing moved outside. Jax and AJ were standing out with me, ready to stop me from going after them. Even Naresh paced with me. We didn't say a word, we just listened

It was another half hour before I stopped and looked out into the forest. Hector walked out, sporting some sweats without a shirt. My mom was walking beside him, a serious look on her face. I shook my head and ran over to her, pulling her into a hug

"You had me worried."

Her arms wrapped around me. 'Again, sweetheart, you know what I do for High Council, right?'

What happened?'

She growled. It came from low and she broke out of my hug. 'Come inside. It's time to let you in on some of it now.'

AJ and Jax were already headed into the house and I walked up the steps of the porch when I turned to see Hector, on one knee, staring up at my mom.

She was looking up, shaking her head. He took her hand and touched it to his forehead. They stayed in that position for a few minutes before she threw up her hands and ran her hand over her head.

They both started to walk back inside and leaned against the doorway of the kitchen, watching them walk in. My arms were crossed over my chest again and Bryan had left his post in the kitchen to stand next to me.

"So?"

Hector nodded. "It's as we feared.."

My eyes widened as I watched my mom brush her hand over a vase sitting on the table next to the couch. She slowly wrapped her fingers around the neck of the vase before hurling it at the wall. I jumped and so did everyone else in the room as it shattered against the wall and sent pieces of porcelain flying.

"Auri..."

Her mouth opened and we watched as she screamed silently. I closed my eyes, unable to take the pain in her face. When my eyes opened again, she was squatting down, curled up into a ball. Hector was watching her but he was leaning against the back of the sofa. Bryan hadn't moved but there was a serious frown on his face.

"Kitchen, now." He ordered and took my shoulder, pushing me into the doorway.

Hector followed and then joined by my mom after a minute. She kicked Bryan away and started up cooking again. Digging around in his pocket, Hector threw a small bag onto the kitchen counter. Everyone stared at it but no one touched it until Bryan came over. He picked it up and growled. ①

"Where did you find this?"

"In Logan's room. Along with some other questionable ingredients."Hector answered. Hewas leaning against the counter, his eyes neverleaving my mom as she worked.

Bryan cursed and tossed the bag on the counter."So they were just going to break the vow of thechallenge.Is that what Cato said? That it wasthere?"

Hector nodded."That he had that, along withsome other items.But that being the mostdamaging of them all."

"What is it?" I picked up the bag. There looked tobe twenty or thirty tablets in the bag. They werecolored a milky blue color and were tiny rounddiscs.

"What we are calling it is Nova 2.0."Bryananswered, glaring at the bag.①

My mom's knife slammed into the butchersblock she was cutting on. Her whole body wasshaking. Hector put a hand on her shoulder andshe took a couple deep breaths.

"Nova originally was designed by theBloodHunter Coven. What it did was make vampires go crazy.Lose their humanity and giveinto the animalistic barbaric vampiric side ofthemselves. The BloodHunter Coven originallywanted the world to fear vampires, humans weremeant to be ruled and used as food. Vampires were the next step in evolution and we shouldbow down to their power. Yada yada vada."Hector rolled his eyes produced and was actually refined from anotherdrug that was making humans inedible tovampires. But that's neither here nor there atthis point. Nova was originally created to createchaos and it did for about three years. Maybemore. That is until your mom destroyed theBloodHunter Coven.With it, every single Novafactory, distributor, runner,dealer. All of them.It was set on fire and burned to the ground."

Bryan shook his head."It was being mass

"Or so we though." My mom signed slowly. Thescowl on her face was one I hadn't seen before.

"Why are there a bunch of crazy vampire drugsin Dad's drawer?"

Bryan and Hector looked at my mom. She was chopping some herbs a little too intensely. Looking at AJ, Jax, and Lucy, this was the first time they were hearing about it as well from their faces

"Because there were some side effects if a werewolf took it." Hector finally answered, quietly.

"The original Nova, made werewolves have super strength, not feel emotions, and could alter the chemistry of the body to stop any disease from progressing as long as you took it continuously."

I furrowed my brow and shook my head. "Who the hell would be stupid enough to try a drug that made vampires go crazy?"

The room got quiet and the whole temperature dropped. My mom stopped chopping and her head was down, her grey eyes narrowed. It was a solid minute before her voice came through the mind link

I did, Vale. I was the one who took the drug. The data of what it does to a werewolf comes from me.

My eyes snapped to my mom and I started to shake my head. Hands dropping to my sides, I picked up the bag of tablets. "You took this? You fucking took these vampire crazy pills?" I was on the verge of yelling.

"Not those. Those are what has been popping up in packs as of late. There is someone making a version that now focuses solely on the effects it gives werewolves. The super strength, the lack of emotions, and the altering of our body chemistry. Basically.."

"Super beefed up werewolves. Super werewolves." Lucy finished for her dad

He nodded. "Someone must have found the data and the original recipe, altering it for the use of werewolves only. We found out that your father and Tyr had been helping in providing data from their captains while they were using it. We can probably assume that Tyr and Logan took it at some time as well."

"The original data, being that of my mom's experience? Or of any other werewolf that got a hold of it?" I growled out.

"Her data, Vale. No other werewolf took it originally. She was the only one." Hecto answered

I growled loudly as I glared at my mom. "Did you know? That it would effect you in that? That you wouldn't go crazy or."

No. I didn't. I didn't know anything about it. I learned along the way

Turning on my heel, I threw open the back door and shifted as I jumped into the back yard. I needed a minute. This was too much. Too much for me to handle right now. My mind had already connected the dots that Tyr knew he, and other packs, would lose against the High Council with a regular attack. If they were bringing a secret weapon in, a biological drug that enhanced their strength then it would be a completely different kind of fight. A fight I wasn't sure anyone would win.