

Alpha's Blind Luna Online Free

Chapter 6

Jess nestled her boobs against my neck and wrapped her arms around my shoulders. "It's so cute the relationship you have with your mom. You guys are almost like siblings rather than mom and son."

I shook my head. "You don't want to see how I am with Freya and Syf. They took it upon themselves to fuck with me at every opportunity." "And your brother?"

"In the beginning, he taught me what it meant to be a young wolf. How to be brave and strong. How to save the girls from the spider on the playground. He was there a lot until I was twelve. Then, my family just broke apart."

She rested her chin on my head. "Is the Alpha King gene that strong?"

I nodded. "I was still learning to get a handle on it. My dad said he didn't remember ever having an issue, which doesn't help. But Mom said he rejected his blood from the beginning. He never really knew until he was in his mid to late twenties. But Mom taught me not only how to control it but to embrace it. It might make it stronger)

"You've never used it in the castle, have you?"

Shaking my head, I unwrapped her arms around my shoulders and got up. "It's far too much to use it in such an enclosed space. I might end up doing more damage than what I intend. It's why I keep control of my emotions and work with Naresh so often. Together, we control it."

"Will it work on my kind? Or just yours?"

I shrugged. "Never tried it on another race. I'd only had to use my presence a handful of times. I wouldn't count on it."

Jess's eyes sparkled. "I wanna try it." "No Jess. It might wake up everyone in the castle."

Naresh chuckled. "Might wake up our mate. Let him feel our power

I rolled my eyes

"Please Vale? Please please?"

"Jess! It could actually hurt other werewolves in the castle!"

She huffed. "It's only for a second! I'm curious! Aren't you?"

I rubbed my forehead and squeezed my eyes shut.

Come on, Vale. I know you're curious too. And letting our mate feel how strong we are "Goddess! Between the two of you, I can't win!" She chuckled. "Naresh wants to, too? Just for a second. One command. That's it."

"What command?" I sighed.

Both her and Naresh whooped at the same time. Jess started to pace

"Something simple? Maybe to kneel?"

"How about something less physical? In case it bleeds into anyone else?"

"How about we make her howl?"

A smile came to my lips at Naresh's suggestion. "What? What did he say?"

"To make you howl. Something you would never do on your own."

Her eyebrow rose and then shrugged. "Let's do it. We would also be able to hear how far away people were affected."

Sitting on the edge of the bed, I sighed. "This is so not a good idea."

"No, it's a great idea! Okay, should I take a seat or something?" Jess looked around the room before grabbing a chair and sitting down in front of me

"I don't even think it will work on you."

"It's fine! Full power, let me have it." She was smiling and I crossed my arms

Taking a deep breath, I dropped myself into amore meditative state. Naresh stepped forwardand I opened my eyes. They glowed bright goldand Jess looked surprised but excited. Rolling myshoulders, together Naresh and I dropped thewalls that held back the rush of power. It was liketeeling a tidal wave flow out from me and splashagainst the walls of my room. The windowsshattered, the door to the balcony burst open. Myeyes were focused on Jess, though

"Howl, Night Goddess'chosen."

The words were deeper, echoed by Naresh and I'svoices. We watched as she struggled against theweight of the power. Suddenly, her eyes glazedover and her head tipped up.Jess let out aguttural howl that would make any werewoliproud. Looking out the window,I tipped my headto listen as the whole castle erupted in howling

Some were werewolves, howling for their moon goddess. But there were others. Howling for thefirst time at their chosen gods or goddesses.Taking another deep breath, Naresh andi reigned it back in. Pulling the flow of power backand shutting it back into its box, I sank into the bed, breathing hard. Letting out the poweiwasn't hard. It was reigning it back in was a nightmare.①

"Holy fuck." Jess sounded slightly in pain andwinded

"I told you. We woke the whole damn castle.I'mgonna be in so much trouble "

Jess laughed. A pure, unrestrained laugh."Noone is going to fuck with you after tonight, Vale,You just proved you are not just the Alpha King.

I felt the blood in my face drain."I'm so fuckedMom is going to kill me. She warned me.Why didI listen to either of vou?"

"Chill, my liege.It's not a big deal."

"You've not seen my mom pissed."I rubbed myeyes."Jess, go please. I can't even..."Alright alright. I'll see you tomorrow, youimghness"

I growled. "Stop that."

She laughed as she closed my door. Shaking my head, Naresh was quiet. I got up and swept up the glass from the windows. Tomorrow, I'd have to request for them to be fixed. Luckily, my balcony doors seemed okay even after getting blown open. Laying back down on the bed, I closed my eyes.

'Well, we made a statement to our mate.

I groaned. 'Shut up, Naresh. Seriously. Shut up. I don't want to think about him anymore.'

I sat back in my chair, stewing. I came early today to sit in the balcony and wait for this meeting to finish. Naresh had been quiet since this morning and I was glad. It was early enough that I didn't run into anyone on the way here and no one came barging in on me in the morning so everything seemed okay after last night.

People started to trickle in ten minutes later. I just started down at the spot where they would be standing. Where my mate would be standing.

'He should have waited for us.

I growled.

'Having a Luna and a pup. We never had a chance. We aren't that old. He's not that old. He could have.'

I cut him off. 'Stop Naresh. Coulda-woulda-shoulda. Like Syf used to say. It's done. I'm done. We will deliver our verdict and leave. It will be the last fucking time I see him.

I had stewed myself down an angry path. Hurt and upset over our mate. Hurt, upset and angry. We would never get the chance to feel that bond, that connection. Our mate took that away from us. Frankly, after stewing in this for hours, I ain't give a shit if he was a man, woman, or transgendered. I didn't give a single flying fuck. I would have still embraced him, loved him, introduced him to my family. I don't know how we would work out his pack situation but it would be something we would have done together

But instead, he ripped that choice away from me from Naresh. The hole I felt in my heart filled with anger. I could feel the walls around our power wain but I exhaled sharply. We would get this over with and then we would turn our back on the stupid, beautiful, fucking Alpha and never see him again. This would be it. Nothing more

My eyes flew open as the smell of old books and pine filled my senses. He was looking up at the balcony but with me sitting down, he would never be able to see me. I was free to ogle him from above without shame .

He looked like he had a restless night; dark circles were under his eyes and slightly cracked lips. He still looked beautiful. His hair was free today, not braided in the back. His shirt was wrinkled but it still pulled against the muscles in his chest. It did still show exactly how small of an Alpha he was. There wasn't an inkling of him being any less of an Alpha than Mark or Julian, he was just built smaller. Built to be in my arms

I cursed to myself.

We would have raised him up above being just an Alpha

I nodded solemnly. 'Yes, we would have. Now though, now he will go back to his Luna and his pup and forever feel like he cheated on us. He has a Luna, when he could have had a king.

Jess brought the meeting to attention. "For those of you who were not here yesterday, a final verdict will be reached today in regards to Alpha Ezekiel and Beta Leo's issue. The first issue coming to us was whether or not this fell under the High Council's jurisdiction or the Alpha King Alpha King Vale, if you would."

Taking a deep breath, I stood and walked to the edge of the balcony. Today, more eyes were on me than normal. Right now though, I glared at Alpha Ezekiel and I watched him physically shrink back

"After researching the issues over seventy years ago, as well as the resurgence of it fifty years ago, I have come to the conclusion that this issue falls into the hands of the High Council."

There was a cough down below. "What is that?" For a moment, I glanced at Peter who also shrank back under my glare

"The original High Council pardoned the leadership for the pack. While the Alpha was sentenced to death, but the others who were participating, his Gamma and Beta, never were. His Beta took the Alpha's son since he was the godfather and raised him. His line should have also been eradicated to prevent this issue."

I took a deep breath, clasp my hands behind my back. "High Councilor Oran was being backed by the Blood Hunter coven, who was benefiting from the choices of Alpha Darkry, and later his Beta, was making. Fifteen years later, the previous Alpha King sentenced the Beta to death for the same exact crimes that Darkry had been killed for. The loss of life is on the hands of the High Council for the not overturning and making sure he was brought to justice for his actions. It is on the High Council now, to help right the sins committed by your predecessors. Not mine."

"One could say the Alpha King did nothing in the face of his own kind falling victim to this Alpha." Peter was getting on my last nerves and today was not a day to do it. ①

Naresh stepped forward, my eyes glowing golden, the room fell dead silent after a murmur had picked up. "While this might be your first time making decisions for an entire race, our kind has had a king much longer. The Alpha King decided that the High Council was needed to eradicate this issue due to the connection they had with the Blood Hunter coven. Without knowing the corruption within. While your kind might be happy to gloss over that particular group, the Blood Hunter coven is your legacy that most of us remember. My mother destroyed the entire coven, from top to bottom, if you remember. You should also remember the size and scope of the coven as well. How many months and that an entire war was fought over them)

The metal railing groaned underneath my hands as I gripped it tighter. Trying to control the urge to remove Peter's head from his body. "The Alpha King didn't have an army to raise to even equal the Blood Hunter coven's numbers. It was the Alpha King who originally put forth the request to the High Council, as well as reaching out to the witches and fey. Don't throw the inaction of my race at me, Pietro Kardoff, when your kind literally let the Blood Hunter coven thrive until my mother took them all out. So next time you open your mouth to insult a past king, make sure you don't do it in front of the current one »

I took a deep breath and peeled my hands off the railing. Naresh stepped back and I rolled my shoulders. "Whether you do or do not take action in this matter, doesn't require my input

However, I would like to remind you that every single one of you sit on a seat stained in red. The High Councilors before sat on those seats and ruined the lives of many people of all races. This being a prime example of the greed and underhanded deals that happened. It's going to take decades, maybe centuries, for you to wipe clean those sins. Maybe start, by righting their mistakes."

I looked over my mate one more time. He looked at me with tears in his eyes. His hand started to reach out but I stepped back. Turning, I slammed the door behind me as I walked out of the balcony area. The stone walkways only served to make me feel more claustrophobic. Heading down the back way, through the kitchen, I took three steps outside and rippled into my wolf form. My white fur that matched perfectly with my hair, caught the wind as I ran into the surrounding forest.

Naresh, do you want to run for a bit? I need to just... not be present.

Of course, Vale.' He stepped forward and started to run the perimeter that was the High Council's grounds. After a couple of hours, Naresh reached out to me.

That was the last time we are going to see our mate, isn't it? Naresh asked quietly.

Let's hope so. The last thing I want is for his family to show up at here and rub our noses in it.' ①

I Vale... I don't think...

Stop Naresh. It's done. They will be gone by this afternoon and we won't speak about this again. We will continue on and one day maybe settle down with a she-wolf who would love us despite not being mates.

Naresh growled but I turned away, walking further into the recesses of our mind. I wanted to be alone. I wanted to wallow in my own anger and misery.