

Life Makeover: Minted Edition Novel

Chapter 21

Chapter 21

Seeing that Naomi had no intentions of stepping forward, Silas didn't take the initiative to greet her and continued smiling at Robert. "Mr. Zabinski, my name is Silas Sacchi. You spent 150 thousand dollars at once in our bar last time. The manager reloaded your membership card at that time and gave you an extra 150 thousand dollars, but he didn't inform you about it. I couldn't find you all this while. Finally, you're here today, so I'm here to return your card."

Silas' voice was not loud, but the people at the nearby tables could hear him clearly.

The two women beside Naomi were dumbfounded and exclaimed inwardly, "He spent 150 thousand dollars?"

The host spending around 6,000 dollars was enough to make them widen their eyes in shock. They couldn't contain their happiness of sitting at the table with the person.

When they saw Kendrick open a bottle of wine worth 15,000 dollars, they hurriedly threw themselves at the man.

However, they didn't expect the poor punk Naomi invited over had spent 150 thousand dollars.

The woman thought, "Oh gosh! 150 thousand dollars! Someone who could spend 150 thousand dollars at a bar is definitely rich! The most important thing is that he spent it at once. He is surely no ordinary scion!"

The man who opened three bottles of Armand de Brignac gaped and looked at Robert and then at Naomi. He suddenly felt like a clown and regretted his actions simultaneously.

"Why did I have to put on an act? I exceeded my credit card limit and even opened three bottles of wine. These three bottles of wine are nothing in front of someone who spent 150 thousand dollars at one time! It's not even a big deal for him!" he exclaimed inwardly.

Sitting next to Marilyn, Kendrick got up, looked at Silas, and asked in confusion, "Mr. Sacchi, are you mistaken? Did you just say he spent 150 thousand dollars at once?"

Kendrick assumed that his attempts to flash his wealth were enough to not embarrass himself in front of Marilyn and her friends when he spent 15,000 dollars on the drinks.

However, he didn't expect to hear Robert had spent 150 thousand dollars at one time.

"Is that possible?" he wondered.

The people who sat at the same table as Naomi suddenly became intrigued and hoped to hear Silas admit he was mistaken.

Silas glanced at Kendrick and said, "Sir, I never make a mistake when serving the VIPs of our bar. Mr. Zabinski, here is your card."

Silas thought, "My boss sat beside Mr. Zabinski earlier. How could I be mistaken?"

Robert glanced at the card Silas handed him, then at Kendrick, and couldn't help but sneer.

Chapter 21

Robert thought, "Naomi is still flexing her wealth. I can't believe she gave me 150 thousand dollars again. In this case, I should grab the chance and humiliate Kendrick."

Looking at Silas, Robert asked, "Mr. Sacchi, there are 150 thousand dollars loaded on this card, right?"

"Yes, Mr. Zabinski." Silas nodded.

Robert looked at the DJ booth and continued, "I saw the DJ saying something if someone ordered drinks earlier."

Silas smiled embarrassedly, "Yes, we have such a service at our bar, Mr. Zabinski."

"Good." Robert pointed to the membership card in Silas' hand with his mouth. "I would like to spend the 150 thousand dollars on a hundred bottles of Armand de Brignac and ask the DJ to say something for me."

"Sure, no problem at all." Silas beckoned at the bar manager, who stood at the side. The latter hurried over. "Bring a hundred bottles of Armand de Brignac for Mr. Zabinski."

Robert smiled, "Give each table two bottles. Also, the DJ wished Mr. Zabel and Ms. Quesnell happily ever after earlier, right? Ask him to add, 'I hope they break up.'"