Chapter 4

Chapter 4

Robert and his three roommates instinctively turned their heads toward the source of that voice.

There stood a young man swaying his body to the rhythm of the spirited music in the nightclub.

Robert's group knew this young man, Jeremy Walker. He was also a student at Yrinas University, a scion, and had started driving a BMW 3 Series in his junior year. Wherever he went, he was the center of attention for all the girls, and he lived his life as though he was a peacock.

Upon hearing Jeremy's words, Samuel and the other two roommates couldn't help but glance over at Robert. They had only just learned about his breakup with Marilyn.

Marilyn was an absolute queen at Yrinas University. She had the looks, the taste, and the temperament that attracted suitors from the south campus to the north campus. However, no one had expected she would choose Robert in the end, which made Robert the enemy of almost all the male students on campus, prompting a lot of jealousy.

"Does my matter have anything to do with you?" Robert glimpsed at Jeremy.

"Do my words have anything to do with you, then?" Jeremy scorned. "I was just thinking, how can a pauper like you truly believe you deserve a girl like Marilyn? She's with Kendrick now, right? That dude is a wealthy guy!"

Kendrick was the one who spread the news about Marilyn being with him now.

After Jeremy finished speaking, he ignored Robert's group and looked at the four girls that Samuel had invited. With a smug expression, he asked, "Girls, why don't you all come to my table for a drink later?"

Jeremy pointed to his seat as he spoke. It was located close to the center of the bar, and two bottles of imported liquor worth almost 900 dollars were placed on a pedestal, which was brightly lit and looked grand.

The four girls' eyes lit up at once, but they still said, "No, thanks. We'll just sit here for a while and leave."

Jeremy didn't say anything further and left triumphantly after extending another invitation.

After Jeremy caused such a scene, Samuel and the others naturally lost interest in partying. Had it not been because they had already spent over 150 dollars today, they would have long left.

The four girls said they needed to use the restroom, but half an hour went by, and none of them returned.

Samuel scanned the crowded bar and asked a little anxiously, "Where are Lucy and the others? Could something have happened to them?"

Places like bars had people from all walks of life.

"What could happen?" Simon sneered and pointed in a certain direction. "Look over there."

Samuel looked in the direction of Simon's finger and spotted Lucy Leigh's group. As it turned out, at some point, they had gone over to Jeremy's table and were drinking happily with him.

Samuel slammed his palm on the table and stood up, heading toward Lucy and the other three girls.

"Hey, Samuel!" Noticing that something was wrong, Simon quickly chased after Samuel.

Robert and the other roommate also hastened over.

"Lucy, what are you doing?" Samuel looked at the girl wearing shorts that revealed her tanned thighs. She was standing on the couch and twerking merrily. "You said you wanted to come to Elephant Bar to have fun and told me to bring you here. Yet now, you're drinking with someone else?"

"What do you mean by what am I doing?" Lucy looked at Samuel with disdain. "You brought me here? You brought me here to have fun, but you only ordered 12 bottles of beer? How embarrassing!"

"Ha-ha!" Jeremy burst into laughter. "Didn't I already tell you guys? Don't try to pick up girls if you're poor. Elephant Bar is not the place for you to hang out."

Robert stood aside, taking in the intense contempt in Jeremy's gaze and the attitude of the four girls toward Samuel.

they pondered.

Under the flickering lights and amid the booming music, over a dozen sexily-dressed young women holding glowing bottles of Armand de Brignac sashayed toward Robert's table.

Robert's three roommates, sitting beside him, didn't even know how to express their feelings at this point. They had never imagined such a scene where they could spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in one go!

"Hundreds of thousands of dollars! We'll probably never even earn that much money in our lifetime!" they mused.

Even the bar owner rushed over to toast Robert and called him by his name in a particularly amiable tone. The sexily-dressed beautiful ladies kept winking at Robert, whereas the other customers who spent nearly 1,500 dollars in the bar looked at Robert with envy.

Robert could sense various gazes on him, something he had never experienced before.

Lucy and her three friends also approached Robert with fawning expressions.
