

Chapter 85

There was a running water system in the community, forming a river running through the whole residential area, and such flowing rivers were rare in the northwest area.

There was a private lane for cars to drive on, and that line was built below the river straight toward the center of the residential area where that 27,000 square feet prime unit mansion was.

The mansion covered an area of 27,000 square feet, but the actual floor area reached about 43,000 square feet. The back garden was as large as three basketball courts combined, and there was a private wharf and a yacht by the flowing river as well.

He could relax on the yacht or swim in the river, and the water quality was specially treated to reach the potable level.

Robert then walked into the villa, and he couldn't believe that his own house would be this huge at first sight.

This could no longer be described as a mansion but a palace. Even the door to the mansion was much larger than the gate of an ordinary neighborhood.

Robert could feel how luxurious the inside of the mansion was even when standing outside the closed courtyard wall.

After walking outside the courtyard, Robert successfully walked into the interior grounds through face recognition.

Robert felt that everything was unreal when the door opened. He had never dreamed of owning such a big house before.

Taking a deep breath, Robert walked in. The whole courtyard was decorated with extraordinarily luxurious facilities. There were pavilions, greeneries, and even garages.

As for inside the mansion, it was decorated with high-end furniture that even Robert didn't know about, and there were seven floors in total. Each floor had a huge space and had an elegant and modern decoration style. The outer layer of a panoramic corridor was made of glass, and all the scenery in the community could be seen.

There was an infinity pool and a garden on the top floor, and even the bathroom was about 1,100 square feet. The master bedroom was even larger than any ordinary house.

Robert looked at all that and said out loud, "What the... This is so much cooler than Iron Man's house in the movies!"

Even Iron Man's house was only half the size of Robert's house in the movies.

Sitting on the couch in the living room, Robert still doubted if all this was real.

Although he had spent millions of dollars at the bar and invested 79.5 million dollars two days ago, all that combined was still not enough compared to the shock of having such a luxurious mansion.

This was the northwest area, and there was no sea, but Robert sighed just by looking at the clear flowing river. He felt that his life here would be happy, satisfied, and forever filled with warmth.

This was the ultimate enjoyment for him.

Robert had to admit that poverty truly limited his imagination.

Until two o'clock in the afternoon, when Robert left the house, his head still couldn't fully process the mansion that he had.

At Grand Triumphant Hotel, Whitney asked her boyfriend, Cameron, for a meal there.

Whitney really enjoyed the service from the five-star hotel. All she needed to do was wave her hand or call the waiter, and someone would come over respectfully, and their respectfulness made Whitney intoxicated.

"Honey, I know what house I want." Sitting opposite Cameron, Whitney looked at the man in front of him seductively and kept sliding her fingertips on the back of the man's hand.

The itching sensation on the back of Cameron's hand made him want to bring her to the room prepared upstairs instead.

He had been playing around for quite some years and had tasted multiple women, but he had never seen anyone as seductive as Whitney before.

"You already chose one? All right. You can book it first if you like it," Cameron replied generously as he stuffed a piece of steak into his mouth.

"Honey, I have paid the deposit, which is a little more than what we budgeted for." She bent down slightly when she said that. Whitney truly knew how to bait a man.