

Chapter 86

Even though he had been intimate with her, Cameron's eyes widened slightly. "It's okay. A little bit more won't matter much to me. Which house are you interested in?"

"Thank you, Honey! It's the Bluespring Residence."

"Bluespring Residence?" Cameron was shocked upon hearing her answer. "Didn't I tell you to look for an apartment? Why on earth did you look for Bluespring Residence?"

"But I like it, Honey," Whitney said as she pouted.

"The cheapest house over there costs at least 450 thousand dollars. There is absolutely no way that my dad would give me such a huge amount of money." Cameron shook his head and added, "Our maximum budget for an apartment is around 75,000 dollars."

"Honey!" Whitney began to persuade Cameron in a cute tone.

"Honey, just tell our father it's going to be our future matrimonial house. Tell him also that with your status, you can't buy a mediocre house."

"I can't." Cameron shook his head. "The most I can do is fund your down payment, but you will have to pay the installments yourself. I can go through bank formalities and have your parents become guarantors so that the loan will be approved too."

Whitney was definitely upset to hear about the loan.

She had already informed everyone in the group chat today that the house would be paid for in full. Besides that, she had also told Robert the same thing as well. "Wouldn't it be embarrassing to tell them we're taking out a loan to buy the house?" she scoffed inwardly.

Whitney moved her seat to Cameron's side as she caressed his thigh and said seductively, "Honey, you know my parents haven't paid off their mortgage either. How can they be guarantors? Why don't you pay for the house in full, and I'll pay you back every month? How does that sound?"

Whitney's hands kept touching his thighs in different ways.

In such a crowded restaurant, Cameron pondered briefly before nodding, "Okay. But we have to agree on paying a certain amount every month."

"No problem. I love you, Honey!" Whitney immediately got excited.

"You have to show that you love me," Cameron said as he touched Whitney's hair.

"Honey, there is a room upstairs!" Whitney looked at him with a seductive gaze.

As he stared at Whitney, Cameron cursed inwardly, "Idiot! I thought I'd lose some money if I bought an apartment for her. But now, it looks like she's buying it for me! When I'm done with her, I'm going to kick her out! Haha!"

At that moment, Whitney had already imagined herself living in the mansion.

Whitney then took out her phone and sent a message to the group chatroom.

[Come to my house for dinner tomorrow night. It's at the new house, okay?]

After the text message was sent out, the group chat soon became lively with compliments and congratulatory texts. Whitney became happy once again.

The next morning, a Land Rover was parked in front of the sales gallery of Bluespring Residence.

Whitney opened the passenger seat door and stood on the sidestep of the car while she glanced around. When she noticed Robert, who was standing in front of the sales gallery, looking in her direction, Whitney jumped off the sidestep, slammed the door hard, and walked toward the sales gallery with a proud face.

Meanwhile, Cameron was still looking sleepy. He wouldn't have gotten up if Whitney hadn't pestered him from seven in the morning.

"Robert, I'm paying in full for the house I saw yesterday!" Whitney yelled as soon as she entered the place. She also took out the contract and deposit before handing them over.

"Please wait a moment." Seeing the deal had gone through, Robert felt exceptionally excited. He hurriedly invited Whitney and Cameron to sit down and served them coffee as he prepared the contract.

Looking at Robert's attentiveness, Whitney crossed her legs proudly and took a photo of Robert pouring coffee for them before sending it to the group chat.

[I'm here to make a full payment for a house today. Mr. Zabinski seems like a dog here, doesn't he?]

[Hahaha! Whitney, he's earning quite a lot of commission from your 450-thousand-dollar mansion!]

[I know, right? He should be over the moon about it! That money might be able to pay off some of the rental car fees!]
