

Chapter 16 The indecisive Guardian

Draco couldn't believe what he was feeling this year at the royal academy, not that it had gone by so fast, he was actually tired of waiting.

Draco was a descendant of the wise wolf who made the prophecy about the last daughter of the moon who would be the companion of the most powerful wolf in the world, and together they fought and defeated the most vile and evil being that ever existed Hercules, but if Hercules arrived at the daughter of the moon first that his companion the world would be condemned to live in darkness, his relatives passed the instructions from descendant to descendant making them the guardian of the secret, and Draco was the last guardian not having a descendant to pass the secret on, when Erick was born it was clear that he he was the most powerful wolf in the world, but there was no sign of the moon's daughter, and now the rumors that Hercules was on her trail were more and more frequent. But to Draco's surprise, a weak and apparently wolfless girl appeared at the academy, her name is Eduarda, and Erick seems increasingly attracted to her, which makes Draco watch the girl who begins to show that she is not so weak, as she launched a wolf three meters away, and now it has mysteriously burned a Lycan, now it's time for Draco to decide whether to fulfill his guardian duty and guide the daughter of the moon or join Hercules and become powerful just like him, now he becomes he goes to the nurse because Eduarda left the cafeteria almost dead.

Draco hurried through the corridors of the royal academy, his mind filled with an intense internal battle. He knew that this was the decisive moment, the moment when he needed to choose his side.

His duty as guardian of the prophecy was clear: to guide the daughter of the moon and her mate, the most powerful wolf in the world, in battle against Hercules.

And now the presence of Eduarda, the weak girl with no apparent wolf, was messing with Erick, which made it possible for her to be the last daughter of the moon.

He watched her through the glass door with a mixture of fascination and fear.
Fascination at how she'd thrown the wolf ten feet away, and fear at not knowing how she'd managed it. He knew something was wrong with that girl, something he couldn't explain. But he also knew he couldn't let his emotions cloud his judgment.

Draco remembered his father's teachings and care. He knew the prophecy was true, that Hercules was a menace and that the moon's daughter was the only hope to save the world from darkness.
But he also knew that the prophecy was ancient and that much had changed since then. Was Eduarda really the daughter of the moon? Had Erick finally found his mate? And if so, what did that mean for the prophecy?

These questions hammered through Draco's mind when he finally decided to enter the infirmary. He saw Eduarda lying on the bed, pale and weak, and Erick holding her hand. He felt a twinge of remorse, knowing that because of his vigil he could have prevented this. He enters the room and walks away with the tension between Gaby who also seems to be in love with Eduarda and Erick. He orders Gaby to withdraw, as a decision is forming within him, and he looks again at Eduarda wondering how she had burned the Lycan and that scares him.

But he also felt a twinge of admiration for that girl. She had faced the wolf and the Lycan, even without na apparent wolf. She had shown courage and strength, even in the midst of a dangerous situation. He knew she was na important player in that war, maybe even more important than he had imagined.

But once he thinks about his duty as a guardian, and that's when he notices Erick looking at him with those blue eyes that seem to read his mind.

"I came to check if

Commented [Ma1]:

we already had the first death among the newcomers", he says to justify his presence there, in fact he wanted to find Eduarda alone to somehow be sure if she was or not the daughter of the moon.

In his heart he decides to do his duty as a guardian, at least for now, until he decides which side would be the winner, because the shiver that ran down his spine made it clear that Hercules was also nearby, and no one alive knew exactly what he looked like. .

"Well, I see that not" he says and leaves with his thoughts.

"Man that was really weird", says Erick as soon as Professor Draco leaves and he can no longer hear his footsteps

"He was always weird", replies Joshua not paying much attention to the teacher because he was really worried about Gaby so he returns to the subject "do you think that can hide his presence like you?"

Gaby

"I have no idea, but I think from now on we need to be careful with him and keep an eye on him", replies Erick thoughtfully.

"He wasn't from our pack, he moved out a little before I came here, and he has no family, he said he lost them all in an attack by rogue wolves," says Joshua

"So the pack's temporary alpha doesn't know anything about his background?" , Erick finds it strange because it is very difficult for a pack to accept other wolves without information.

"I don't know, but I think it's worth investigating," says Joshua

"Absolutely," Eric
agrees.

At that moment
Eduarda opens her eyes and the first thing Erick sees is the quick red glow

that passes through them.

"What happened", she asks, squeezing Erick's hand, "I thought she was dead"

"You were stronger and much more courageous than many Lycans I know, the Moon Goddess will never allow you to die", said Erick, but deep down he was really thinking about her wolf and how to help her in the transformation.

"Well, maybe now some people avoid getting close to you", says Joshua, stroking Eduarda's face and promising himself that he would be the best protector that ever existed.
