

The Return of the Last Dragon

Chapter 19 - Hole

When Falkor released his Dragon Roar, the people in the wall immediately heard it.

As the roar resounded out in the whole forest, they immediately started to search the whole place crazily.

Of course, Falkor and Isobel made sure that they wouldn't be seen as they were quite near the wall.

And when they were sure that the wall didn't have enough people to check every single corner, the duo...quickly left as they jumped through the wall.

It was so easy and it didn't take them much time. After all, if a roar like that suddenly resounded out in a peaceful forest such as this forest, the people guarding it would want to find out.

And when they escaped, the duo quickly found some shade to hide in.

However, they soon hit the wall of reality as they saw some barracks or some type of building where the women came from.

What's more, they were able to see that a large amount of land belonged to the group of people protecting the forest.

They would have to cross...this base of humans to get out of this place safely.

Of course, they weren't found out as soon as they came in here, and they were still able to hide by hiding in some corner of a building.

It was so weird to see that on the other side of the wall was a forest, and the other side of it was buildings and all.

However, that didn't even last a second in their minds as they just wanted to escape this place.

After all, getting caught now would just mean the end for the both of them.

It would mean the end for Falkor, the intruder, and Isobel, the one who disobeyed the royal orders of the royal family.

"What do we do, now? Hmmm..." Isobel said as she wondered with delight in her eyes.

Even though this situation was bad, she was having fun. What's more, she found out that Falkor was really a dragon.

After all, Falkor was able to release that Dragon Roar while Isobel was right beside him.

After hearing and seeing something like that, Isobel would be forced to agree that Falkor was indeed a dragon!

And a dragon sounds like a dream. For Isobel, this was a dream come true as she was able to talk and walk with a dragon.

Well, Falkor was in a human form right now, though.

Anyway, when Falkor heard those words coming out from Isobel's lips, he quickly spoke.

"Can't we just become invisible again just like how you did earlier?"

What Falkor said was indeed the best option. If they were able to become invisible, they would be able to just walk out of here.

There would be no one who would notice them, and there would also be nothing that could possibly stop them.

However, it seems that things were not just simple as Isobel explained things to Falkor.

"We can't. We were able to escape from them earlier because they were still quite far away from us."

"However, right now, we are in the middle of their territory. What's worse is that illusion magic isn't really the forte that I have."

"We'll be found out right away if I used a magic that is not my specialty."

What Isobel said was the truth. Isobel was more of a fighter rather than an illusionist.

Although illusionists could also fight, Isobel didn't like that style, and that was why she didn't practice illusion magic that much.

Of course, what she said made sense for Falkor. That was why Falkor was thinking of other ways to exit this place right now.

Although this place had so many things that Falkor didn't know before, Falkor didn't really care about it.

After all, if you looked down on humans from the sky above, mansions and buildings would look the same.

That was why he wasn't that fascinated with the buildings or barracks or whatever the hell it was called.

Anyway, when Falkor started to think, he...got no answers.

Well, that would be the most reasonable result as Falkor wasn't really that smart.

1

He would just bulldoze his way as a dragon, but the fact that he was thinking now means that...Falkor was changing.

After all, when he was a dragon, he didn't think about things. He would just kill if he wanted.

He would just destroy things if he wanted to do that. He would eat if he wanted to do that.

In fact, the reason why he got killed was exactly because of not thinking things through.

If he just thought about the meat and all, maybe he would have been still in his scaly body.

And the fact that he was thinking things now really means something for Falkor.

Well, he was forced to think as this situation was just bad.

And while he was thinking, a voice resounded out in his ears.

It was the women who were guarding this place. It seems that only women were guarding the forest, and there were no men at all.

"Move out! Move out! Move out! Move out!"

"Go! Go! Go! Go!"

"Report!"

All types of voices resounded out, and this forced Isobel to speak.

"Let's move away from here, they are near us." Isobel said as she whispered near Falkor's ears.

Right, as they didn't want to get caught, it was reasonable to move away from this place.

That was why Isobel turned around to look for a place where they could hide.

Of course, Falkor just followed right behind her as they started to walk.

However, even before they could leave the building they were using as a cover, something...happened.

Something ridiculous happened, and when they saw what it was, Falkor...no, only Isobel had her eyes wide open.

Why? It was because the land...suddenly parted as it made room for people to go underground right in front of them.

And it looked like a cave, but this was unnatural. After all, it happened right in front of them.

Well, Falkor wasn't really that impressed as many people could do something like this.

And because Falkor wasn't that impressed, he...got a strange thought about it.

It was then that he spoke it out loud - loud enough for Isobel to hear.

"Let's enter this hole."
