

The Return of the Last Dragon Chapter 6 - Will he?

"Argh...Fucking hell." Falkor said as he felt his consciousness fade.

After all, even if he were able to kill the woman with just his roar, the wound was still there.

What's more, Falkor wasn't used to this human body. Even if his soul was the mighty dragon, his body was just a human body.

And once a human body gets critically injured, it would die unless it got healed.

And that was the same case as well for Falkor with his human body.

Thud!

Falkor lost control of his body and collapsed as his body lay on the ground.

"Ah..." Falkor murmured as he closed his eyes.

The wound was still making his blood go out of his stomach as if it were a broken dam.

And it was only a matter of time until he dies.

And in this forest that Falkor was currently in, there was a woman who was currently wandering around.

This woman had clothes, unlike the woman who attacked Falkor before.

Well, after all, not many women would go naked in a public place.

And this woman was beautiful. She was blonde, and her body was slim.

Her face looked like the gods themselves sculpted her. It was not only that but also her golden eyes just shined naturally.

It was as if this woman was an angel that came down.

And while this woman was walking, her pinky lips then parted as she spoke.

"I wonder what that was..." The woman said as she remembered the time when she heard something.

That something was so loud that even this woman who lived her life in this forest was forced to come out.

Well, she wanted to find out what that was, as this was basically her home.

However, no matter how much this woman searched the forest, she couldn't find anything.

After all, the forest was that big.

"Hmm. I heard that I have guards stationed around here, but was that them?"

The woman said as she thought about how there were other people here.

However, she thought that it would be impossible for what she thought to be true.

"There's no way they would disturb me...Hmmm...Ah! An intruder, then!"

The woman smiled as she thought that there would be an intruder here.

After all, that scenario would be much more interesting.

"Hmm?" The woman hummed as she felt something touching her.

No, there was nothing touching her besides the wind.

And the wind was bringing something to her - to her nose.

And that was the smell of blood.

"Hmm. I know I'm not allowed to meet anyone, but who cares! Mwehehe."

The woman said as she tried to find out the source of the smell and when she did, she immediately decided to go there.

"I hope I meet that intruder!" The woman said as she started to walk towards the source of the smell.

And it was only a matter of time until she would get there.

Her steps were light, and her face was showing her bright mood.

After all, this was the first time that something happened in this boring forest.

She wanted to see it for herself no matter what. And that was why even though she was walking, her speed was fast.

It was as if she were running, and that was why she was able to reach the place much sooner than expected.

And as soon as she did, she was...amazed.

"Wow! This place is a mess." That woman said as she looked at the trees that were destroyed and lying on the ground.

It was such a mess that this woman couldn't see anything in this place except for it.

And blood. Blood that was splattered on the trees, land, and even on the grasses.

However, in the blood was also something like the organs of a person.

And this woman was just looking at it as she smiled.

"So, it was a fight! I wonder who won..." The woman said as she surveyed the area once more.

And when she did, she was able to see something lying on the ground.

And of course, that was Falkor, who was unconscious.

"Oh, he's still alive. So, did he win?" The woman said as she continued walking.

She walked without touching any blood, and that was quite amazing.

After all, the blood was literally everywhere that it wouldn't be weird if she touched it.

"Mwehehe." The woman grinned as she arrived at where Falkor was lying right now.

It was funny for this woman, as she knew that Falkor was probably the intruder.

It was then that the woman decided to do something...rather interesting.

She decided to help Falkor.

And when she decided to do that, she used her magic to make Falkor's body float up.

Whooo.

The woman then held her hand out to the sword that was stuck in Falkor's stomach, and she pulled it!

Swak!

The blood coming out of Falkor strengthened as the hole became bigger!

However, that all stopped when the woman put her hand against Falkor's wound.

And as if it were all magic, the blood stopped coming out of the wound.

When the woman pulled back her hand, Falkor's wound closed!

It was something amazing, but this was something normal to this woman.

After all, she was strong. That was all it took for a woman like her to be able to do something like this.

"Hmm. I healed him, but will he wake up now?" The woman said as she started walking.

She didn't want to stay in this place where blood was literally everywhere.

Besides, the forest would soon clean this up.

And in the air was Falkor's body that was floating and following the woman.

After all, the reason why the woman saved Falkor was that she wanted to meet Falkor.

She wanted to talk with him. She wanted to ask questions.

She wanted to know why Falkor invaded this space of hers.

"I wonder, will he tell me interesting tales?" The woman said as she smiled.