Chapter 124

Tyler brushed his hands through his hair countless of times as he pushed through the throng of students in the hallway.

He looked back and let out a soft curse.

Perhaps he should've gone back to her and apologized. Even go on his knee if he needed to so she'd forgive him.

Tyler shook his head. What good would it do when she was obviously disgusted by him? She literally caught him in the act and sure he hadn't really gone all the way with those girls but he did touch them.

He was already disgusted with himself and confessing his feelings for her after what he had done was so damn stupid.

Of course she wouldn't have believed him.

Tyler wanted to smack his head on something hard. A brick wall perhaps but his locker shall do.

He strut to his locker and started banging his head on the metal hoping it would push some sense into him.

Why did he do that?

Really, what was going through his head at that time?

Why couldn't he have just confessed to her and not have made that stupid decision in following that girl to the bath room in the first place?

That would've surely saved him a lot of that headache he was currently feeling at the moment. And that heartache too.

He screwed up. Big time.

0001.

He was such a dumbass.....

"Aye mate are you looking for a concussion?"

Tyler stopped slamming his forehead on the locker when he heard his best friend's voice beside him.

Brett chuckled and then patted his shoulder. "I thought you would have left a permanent forehead print on that metal there man." He joked but when he saw Tyler's face, his own turned into concern.

"What's up with you? You were gone for a while and came back looking like shit...." Brett trailed off while searching Tyler's eyes for answers.

Tyler's fingers reach into his hair and he rakes them through his scalp. "I fucked up man." Tyler admitted, squeezing his eyes as he turned around and leaned his back on his locker.

Brett eyed him curiously. "You fucked up?" Brett looked around and noticed that everyone was watching Tyler in curiosity too.

Tyler had garnered everyone's attention. Their ears were obviously waiting for what he had to say so they'd be the first to start rumors like they usually did.
