

Let me go, Mr. Hill Novel [By Shallow South] Chapter 2956

Chapter 2956

A grand wedding was held by the sea.

The two couples swore, kissed, and promised each other a lifetime in front of everyone. At that moment, it became the happiest moment in life.

When Charity went up with the ring, Catherine said in a low voice: "Would you like to give you the bouquet later?"

"No." Charity refused.

Catherine wasn't in any trouble, after all, she could tell that Charity wasn't looking forward to the wedding like she and Freya were.

Frankly speaking, she was quite tired after the wedding.

"All right, it's just that you don't want it, not necessarily some people." Catherine glanced ambiguously at Chester who was not far away.

In a group of bridesmaids, he stood out from the crowd in handsomeness.

Some of the relatives and friends who came to participate included Chester and Charity as a couple, some didn't know, and there were even a few beautiful foreign girls who took the initiative to strike up a conversation with Chester, and some girls even took out their mobile phones to take pictures of him.

Charity glanced at Chester, then looked away, "Hurry up and put on the ring."

When Catherine picked up the ring, she quietly backed out.

When the master of ceremonies asked the bride to throw the bouquet, Catherine said with a smile, "I won't throw away this bouquet today. My husband said he wanted to give it to a friend."

"Which best man?"

Shaun took the bouquet from Catherine's hand, walked up to Chester himself, and handed it to him, "Chester, I wish you all your wishes come true."

"Thank you." Chester took the bouquet flower.

The emcee interviewed: "It seems that the best man has a girl in his heart that he wants to be with for the rest of his life. I don't know if this girl is there, and if the best man wants to have a live confession to the person you love."

Many people immediately cast their eyes on Charity.

Charity, who had always wanted to keep a low profile, was suddenly embarrassed.

Chester looked at her affectionately, and smiled, "I just want to tell her that no matter how long I wait, I'm willing to wait until the day she is willing to marry me."

"Wow." There was booing from the audience.

At the end of the wedding, a banquet was held on the lawn.

Chester stood for too long, avoided the crowd and walked towards the beach, found a place on the grass and sat down, and was about to take off the artificial limb on his leg, when a mixed-race girl in her twenties suddenly walked over, "Hello, my name is Kevin, can you tell me your contact information?"

Chester was no stranger to this kind of strike-up, after coming to this island, he couldn't remember how many times he was hit-up, "Sorry, I already have a girlfriend."

"It doesn't matter, this does not prevent me from falling in love with you at first sight and pursuing you." The girl said proudly.

Chester smiled, without saying a word, but took off the prosthesis on his leg in front of her.

The girl was startled, her eyes widened, and she took two steps back, "Oh my God, is your leg broken?"

"Well, I'm a cripple." Chester raised his eyebrows, "You really want to chase me like this? It just so happens that my girlfriend dislikes me, or you..."

"Uh..., no, no, take back what I just said, I hope the one I like have healthy legs." The girl ran away after she finished speaking, she didn't expect Chester to be so tall and handsome when he stood up, but he turned out to be lame.

No matter how good-looking she was, she couldn't accept the cripple.

Chester looked at her running away in a panic, and smiled softly, "Charity, haven't you seen enough excitement?"